To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

Timothy Chellis, who dispenses fluid of an elevating character on Congress Street, was arraigned before Judge Page on Thursday for assaulting John Hurd, at a bar-keeper. Chellis struck Hurd on the head several times with a club, cutting him severely and inflicting other injuries. Judge Page fined Chellis $20 and costs, an appeal was taken and he was placed under bonds to appear at the April term of the S. J. Court.

Mark H. Wentworth, Esq., has had an attachment of $10,000 put on the estate of Hon. Frank Jones, President of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, in a plea of trespass, the question being one of damages for breaking and entering the Wentworth farm to build the Road, without previous tender of payment.

Mr. William E. Abbott, formerly of this city, fell down stairs in Boston on the 22d, and was severely injured. Concussion of the brain is feared.

The many friends of John M. Noyes, Esq., of Saco, who some twelve weeks since fell from the Boston & Maine railroad bridge in this city, breaking his leg and otherwise injuring him, were pleased to see his genial countenance once more upon the street to-day. Biddeford Times.

Why did "the many friends of John M. Noyes" fall from the bridge and break his leg for him, Bro. Goodwin?

Mrs. Daniel Mason died of small-pox on Thursday.

The new express company will commence business on the 1st of February. Messrs. Horace E. Frye and James R. Morrison are its projectors.

The remains of the late Chief Engineer Thomas A. Shock were brought to this city for interment on Thursday. Officers of the Navy, stationed here, acted as pall bearers. The funeral services were held at the Charlestown Navy Yard, and were attended by all the officers of the station in uniform. The services were conducted by the chaplain, after which the remains, escorted by the marine guard and a delegation of forty sailors from the Ohio, were taken to the depot en route for this city. Mr. Shock was a native of Maryland, entered the Navy in 1851 and received his commission as Chief Engineer in 1859.

The Dover City Councils have voted to burn the 50 year bonds and issue 20 year bonds instead in aid of the Road.

It is reported that John E. Rider of this city has been appointed Custom House Inspector at Boston.

Mr. John L. Rice has recovered from an attack of varioloid. His three children, not having been vaccinated, have the small-pox, but are doing well. Dr. Whittier says the seaman at the Pest House is very sick.

Exeunt Omnes.

A crowd of customers at a well known restaurant in this city were engaged in discussing small-pox developments, when a man in whose house the disease had been discovered, entered and began telling his experience in disobeying the orders of the Health officers. He said he wanted to get his daughter away from the house and was forbidden to enter, continuing, "They can't keep me out. I just forced my way in and——." His speech came to a sudden conclusion as the astonished proprietor of the restaurant opened the door and rushed for the street, followed by the entire company. An energetic physician might have made a successful "corner" in vaccine "points" just then.

WEDDING JOURNEY OF DEATH.—A St. Paul correspondent writes to the New York World an interesting account of the effect of the late terrible storm at the Northwest. He says: A sad case is reported of a young couple who were on their way from Canada, the bride's home, to that of the bridegroom, near Fergus Falls, in this State. At Pomme de Terre the young pair were met by the bridegroom's father. They started out for home and were overtaken by the storm. They lost their way, and, leaving the young bride in the sleigh, father and son started off to find the road, and have not since been seen. After a time the young woman became alarmed and began to halloo for them. Not hearing any reply she left the sleigh to seek them. After wandering about for a time she came to some logs, where she sheltered herself as well as she could, and where she was found two days afterwards, badly frozen, but still alive. There is no hope of her recovery.

MOSHER'S LITTLE GAME.—Rev. Mr. Mosher of Omaha recently went into a gambling establishment in that place with this nicely prepared programme in his mind: He would win the gambler's money, and then, with a brief sermon on the evils of gambling, would return the money to the loser. But Mosher was not in luck that day, and the parson was left penniless. Now Rev. Mr. Mosher goes to court and sues Duval for the amount lost. The above little story he told in court as an explanation of the circumstance that one of his cloth should have gone to such a place.

IRON in the BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes the Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

LOCAL EDITORS.—Upon these men, the task horses of the community, an exchange gets off the following; and exchange will copy, of course, for where there is a paper there must be a local editor.

The local editor is the bond slave of affliction. His days are many and full of trouble. He is the victim of popular fallacies.

The ignorant believe that the landscape of his existence is diversified by rivulets of milk and honey; the intelligent that he has but one shirt, and habitually goes to bed by the light of a tallow candle. The former stuck in a gin bottle, look upon him their blind delusions as a companion of princes, a gulfed and a philosopher to the amputator of coupons; the latter are convinced that he subsists mainly upon charity, with a weakness for brewed victuals, and would constitute a strong candidate for a vacancy in the alms house. Between these two opinions and social status are legion, and as there is no character continually vibrating, and, as there is usually a strong preponderance in favor of the latter, even the charm of novelty is denied to his existence.

If he writes an article of which Carlyle, or Emerson, or Buskin might be proud, he is cheered by the consoling remark, "The locals are a set of blows. State it! Of course he did. He never gets off a good thing—some one else did it." But if there be an error, he is unanimously sacrificed. Under these circumstances the editor, wising local circumstances, soon comes to long for an interest in a broadsiding shot gun.

In the matter of the selection of news, he sorrow has also marked his lot for his own. The amount of community heaped upon his intelligent head in the brief space of twenty-four hours, would, if converted into coin of the realm, render him independently wealthy. As it is, it is only a refining process which fits him the soon or for translation from this cold world.

LOVE AND ASHES.—The Winnemucca, Nevada, Register of a recent date says:—"News was brought to town Monday, by Thomas Lawson, that the Indians had burned a young squaw, aged sixteen, and well known in Winnemucca as Jennie. The girl had lived for some time in the family of Alexander Wise of this place, and was quite good-looking and intelligent; but owing to some misconduct, Mr. Wise turned her away last summer. We had a conversation with Sarah Winnemucca, the Piute queen, regarding the matter, and found the report of Lawson true. Sarah and most of the Indians are very indignant over the matter, and probably the murderers will share the same fate as their victim by the hands of their own people. Sarah told us that Jennie had many admirers among her own race, and one old buck claimed her as his wife, but Jennie would have nothing to do with him, whereupon the brave gave her a severe beating. Sarah then went to the Indian and told him that Jennie did not like him, and that he must leave her alone hereafter, which he did, but threatened to kill her. Whether he had a hand in her murder Sarah did not know.

After she had been turned away by Mr. Wise, another young Indian known as Indian Bill offered to take her as his second wife, and Jennie went with him. This seems to have enraged a number of young Braves who were her ardent admirers. The direct cause of her murder Sarah had not positively found out, but believed it was occasioned by the stories told about her, and the jealousy of Indian Bill's other wife. At any rate Indian Bill and his first wife took her down the Humboldt river some distance below Winnemucca, stoned her to death, and afterwards burned her body to ashes. Mr. Lawson saw the body while burning and recognized it as being the body of Jennie. Sarah told us that she believed that the Indians would take the matter into their own hands and burn her murderers, and said that Jennie's uncle had determined on revenge, and had purchased a pistol or gun with which to kill Bill and his wife. She did not think that any other Indians were present at or knew of the murder at the time it was committed."

A STRANGE CRIME AND ITS PUNISHMENT.—The lack of intention to do wrong is no extenuation of a crime in the eye of low law, judging from the fate of an aged couple now in the penitentiary at Fort Madison. The crime for which they were convicted and sentenced was incest, and came about in this manner: A boy and girl lived at their father's house in childhood, but when the former became twelve years he left home to seek his fortune, and never returned. He married, had children, and his wife died. Meantime his sister had married and gone West, where her husband died. She received an offer of marriage from a wealthy widower with children and accepted it. One of her new husband's sons happened one day to be looking over his step-mother's family record and discovered that she was his father's sister as well as wife, and so, as his father refused to give him the hale of his property, the noble-minded youth brought suit on the charge of incest, and the innocent people, now over sixty years of age, were sentenced to prison for one year.

There is but little frost in the ground anywhere, owing to the deep covering of snow. In the open fields it has penetrated but a few inches, and in the woods it has only hardened the mere surface. Winter killing of grain and grasses is not, so far, much feared.

The Singer

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension cushion, so to advantage in running or needles or feed or price—and many of them are so we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to a direct entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

IS THE

OLDEST

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model. does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and possesses its advantages over all other machines.

It is really kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

N. B. Those purchasing for cash, before the 1 of January next, will have a consideration allowed them.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relief was the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could procure. He, after a dozen years spent in experimenting, with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultimo thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SCULL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in partnership" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

The Chronicle

SORCERY.

It is said that "Love is blind," and we mortals of to-day, having great respect for age, accept with due submission the venerable assertion. But then (let me whisper in your ear) we don't believe it one bit! We let dear Antiquity in more ways than one have her say, while we, silently protesting, have our way.

Really, love has microscopic eyes. It sees all the beauty and every blemish. It reaches out to correct the faults; and when this may not be, it tenderly covers them from view—just as moss covers the ugly rock, and vines creep over and drape with beauty the rotten log, in the woods.

"No, no, Molly, don't tease me! When I make pleasure a business, I do not get it; but when I go earnestly about duty, pleasure drops right into it. 'Tis such a queer thing, this pleasure. It eludes you if you if you seek it. If you turn from it, it pursues you."

"But just this once, for the sake of a happy New Year's, forego your theories and come."

"O Molly! holidays are such hollow days! They are the most homesick days in the year to me. I'm afraid of them: so you see, in self defense, I fill them just as full of action as they will hold. I refrain from giving where gifts are expected, and give where it will be a surprise. Don't you love to see a sad face light up with an unexpected pleasure on these days."

"That's the very thing. You are the one of all others to put the fun and soul into my party. Do something for me—come!"

The two girls stood in the bay-window of a warm, bright library. Shadows gathered about the room, but a genial light from the grate flamed across the floor. Without, one by one, the street-lamps were lighted, revealing the snow-flakes silently falling. So the two girls stood by the window looking out upon the street. They were friends. I cannot conjecture why, unless by the affinity of contrast. They were unlike in nature, and even fortune had served them diversely. One lived a beautiful, luxurious life, and the other depended upon her own hands and brain for her maintenance.

"Ah!" replied the other, "that's a different view of the case," and the still face filled with laughter. "Now, you give me a part I will perform. You make me a cog in the wheel, and I will help grind out the grist with pleasure."

"You dear, delightful girl—"

"With a condition, though; I must be invisible."

"And why, pray?"

"Well, I'm not morose a bit—not even cross—I've only bitten my own nose off; and I do want the privilege of moping behind the scenes a little while."

Laughter came from the window, ending in a breathless, "You are a queer being. I'm glad you have bitten off your nose, since it leaves you so respectable a profile!"

"But, Molly, it hurts to do such things. It is far easier to say, 'I will cut it off and cast it from me,' than to do."

"Never mind your solemn enigmas. I believe I have gained a point. You will come and spend New Year's with me on condition that you shall be invisible to my friends."

"Yes."

"Very good."

Holiday glee reigned from attic to cellar. Halls, kitchen library, dining-room and parlors resounded with footsteps and merry voices. In the parlors was a blaze of light which illuminated happy faces, and then streamed out the casement into the shadowy street, as if yearning towards the desolate. It was a wild night without. There was reckless clamoring of the elements—clamoring and bemoaning for I know not what. Within was old-fashioned merriment, born of the holiday spirit. There were music, dance and jest, and spirited games. Presently the guests resolved themselves into a semi-circle.

The gas was turned low, then the doors rolled aside and revealed a tableau. It was "Abdication." The white-haired Old Year, in royal robes, was placing a crown upon the head of the fair-haired child, New Year. About the old man's feet were trophies of his conquests—mechanical instruments, a crucible, a statue, a sword, a half finished picture, a harp, a charred stick, a broken vase, a wedding garment, heaps of fruits and flowers and trailing vines. The people were silent an instant, the tableau had told too solemn a story.

So the doors closed, and when they rolled aside once more, a comic charade was given. Then heads were put together in merry consultation for the explaining word. This was followed by other and other ones.

A young man sat behind them all. He looked absorbed—not in the scene, but in some mental problem. During the tableau he looked a little bitterly at the broken vase. When the charades were enacted he never smiled at all. At length some one touched his arm. He started from his abstraction. The doors had been thrown wide open; all was cleared away; the gas was turned on, conversation resumed. The person who aroused him said:

"Will you have your fortune told next?"

He politely arose and assented, and proceeded to the next room. An old, old woman stood by the fire. She had a gray, wrinkled face. The hair and shaggy brows seemed hung with snow, like trees on a quiet winter's night. Merry eyes peeped like a mouse out of the massive face. When he entered, she started, shrank for an instant, and then approached and took his hand in hers. He looked upon her half indifferently. She bent low over his hand in silence. At last she spoke.

"You are not happy."

He was interested.

"No; can you tell me why?"

"It is an affair of the heart."

"I suppose all things that hurt one are affairs of the heart."

"It is your own fault that you are hurt."

He was wide-awake now, and looked sharply down on the hands that held his own.

"Not so, you are wrong. It is the fault of others, who like to make cruel decisions."

"Not cruel, certainly, only considerate. The person who hurts you strives to obey reason rather than impulse."

"This person has neither reason nor impulse—she is simply perverse."

"You are unjust."

"Why unjust? She shows no impulse, gives no reasons, makes hard decisions."

"Yet you liked her once—a very little."

"No, I worship her even now."

There was a moment's silence.

"Go on, Sibyl."

The woman faltered.

"She loves you in return."

"No, she casts me from her."

"She loves you, but she fears your faults."

"Pray, what may those faults be?"

The eyes looked up from the palm on which they had rested. They looked pitifully up from under the shaggy brows into the man's face.

"That is all."

"No, 'tis not all. What are the faults?"

"Why—why—she thinks—"

"What?"

"She thinks you are generous before you are just. She thinks you are splendidly selfish."

"Indeed! What next? This is interesting!"

"She thinks you are selfish, partly through self-love, partly through indifference—thoughtlessness."

"To her?"

"Oh! no, no. You would put a diamond on her finger, and—for instance—neglect to pay your laundress."

"And then?"

"You remember your business and pleasure. You make large subscriptions and fine speeches. You forgot to 'give the cup of cold water.'"

"Go on."

"You have no deep interest for humanity—no great love, like the love of Christ." These words came slowly and with a desperate effort.

"And that's my sentence! Has she not one redeeming thought for me."

"She thinks you have a great, slumbering soul, that has never been awakened."

The man had a fine face. Now it crimsoned over, and was full of emotion. He stood silent. Suddenly he took the old woman's hands (which were small and white) reverently between his own, and put them to his lips, saying:

"Now, I do not wonder she despises me—she, the unselfish woman. Sibyl, you have awakenened me."

He hurriedly left the room, soon withdrew from the wild merriment of the parlors, went to the hotel, entered his room, and locked the door. Then he sat down at the table and put his face between his hands.

The clock struck one, two. Still he sat motionless. Some of the greatest battles are without a single witness. There was a look of great humiliation on his face. He at length arose, and opening his desk drew forth a small dust-covered volume. It opened at these words:

"One thing I know; whereas I was blind, now I see."

His compressed lips seemed to assent. His eyes rested a long time on the page. Suddenly (for he was a resolute man) he made a great vow. You could see it in the lip and eye; in fact, the whole face and figure told it; besides, he ejaculated:

"So God help me!"

Meantime the old fortune-woman glided from the room where the young man left her; and in no infirm manner, sprang up the long stairway, and shut herself in her room. She removed the gray mask, revealing a pale, troubled face, out of which all the merriment had died.

"They are all hollow days," she said, "There are no holidays. I am an old, old woman—a thousand years old! I am always biting my own nose off. Other people do not question themselves or turn censor to others; and they are happy, I suppose. I am very tired, my heart and—"

So she wearily unbraided her hair and knelt down by the bedside, and asked of God a New-Year's gift—for that other one whom she had lost. And for herself she asked piteously for the gift of peace, and then she went to sleep.

The holiday-time passed away. Weeks and weeks followed in its train. The young man was a "little child," inasmuch as he was learning the alphabet of spiritual life. He was learning the mastery of soul over self.

At length one day a note passed through the mail. These were the words:

"Dear Sorceress: If I come and lay a true purpose in your palm, will you tell my fortune for me?"

The answer was this:

"Come."

He went, and the fortune was told—just as many and many a fortune is told in this world. It was a sweet but a sacred little scene, so let us not curiously peer into it.

Just in the dusk of the next New Year's eve, again two persons stood by a window looking out upon the night. The snow-flakes were falling, and one by one the lamps were lighted. Now it was man and woman side by side. Two hearts had come together, and about them had gathered the mysterious atmosphere we call home.

She said; "After all, Charley, holidays are not hollow days, are they?"

"No, darling," he replied; "They are rich—full of love and peace; rich with good-will toward men."

"So life is very much what the heart makes it?"—Hearth and Home.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 25, 1873.

Vaccination vs. Small-pox.

The Boston Medical and Surgical Journal gives the following propositions as matters of record:—

1st. Without vaccination, one death in ten would be the result of small-pox.

2d. Without vaccination, nineteen out of twenty would have small-pox.

3d. Without vaccination, sixty-seven per cent. of the cases of small-pox would be fatal.

4th. With vaccination, not two per cent. of the inhabitants will take small-pox.

5th. With vaccination, the per centage of deaths from small-pox is only about eight of the two per cent. who will take it.

6th. A larger percentage of those who have had small-pox will have the secondary disease than of those who have been vaccinated. That is to say, vaccinia is a better prevective of variololid than small-pox is.

7th. Humanized virus is more likely to take than the original virus from the cow.

8th. Humanized virus, whether it takes or not, does not produce so severe constitutional symptoms as primary cow virus does.

9th. It is not proved that either humanized virus or primary cow virus is the better in its protective effects.

10th. There are certain individuals who do not seem susceptible of variola.

11th. There are certain persons who do not seem susceptible of vaccination.

12th. The taking of small-pox after vaccination is no proof that a second vaccination would have succeeded.

13th. A successful re-vaccination is no proof that the individual re-vaccinated would have taken small-pox.

In years past we have noticed occasional letters from newspaper correspondents, opposing vaccination as being a principal means of transmitting humors of the blood and worse diseases from one person to another, thus being much more of an evil than a benefit; and in England we believe "anti-vaccination societies" flourished.—certain we are that many ponderous magazine articles and not a few pamphlets and books have been published in that country, denouncing vaccination as an almost unmixed evil. Whether or not scrofula and kindred diseases can be transmitted by vaccination with humanized virus is yet an open question; medical men themselves have waged fierce war with each other on that point, and in some cases have not scrupled to call each other names which among the unlearned and vulgar would be considered confoundedly impudent,—and "who shall decide when doctors disagree?" But there is no need of using humanized virus at all, there being no difficulty in procuring vaccine matter as Dr. Jenner did, "fresh from the heifer." There is probably not a physician in this city who is not prepared to vaccinate with cow virus, and persons who have been restrained from availing themselves of the protection afforded by vaccination, through fear of being inoculated with scrofula, consumption, impecuniosity and everything else fatal to health and happiness, need not wait until the still greater terror of small-pox drives them to the doctor, but can go ahead at once and be certain that if they receive no good they will at least take no harm. The importance of the epidemic in the eyes of men accustomed to disease, may be seen in the fact that twenty-one homeopathic physicians of Boston are besieging the legislature of Massachusetts to establish a State institution for the propagation and distribution of pure animal virus.

Personally, were we going to indulge in vaccination, (as we may do yet, if we get some more scared, not feeling quite certain that our having been through the mill thirty years or so ago is a perfect protection now,) we should prefer to try the heifer virus, as we should thereby run no risk of being inoculated with scrofula, or whiskey-drinking, or tobacco-using, or anything of that kind; but the anti-vaccinators, if we remember aright, opposed vaccination in toto,—not with humanized virus, merely. We should think little of the courage of a soldier who would not fight the enemy on the field as well as in his tent; we had rather hear a person sneer at lightning on a summer's night, when a heavy thunder-storm is raging, than on a sunny day in winter; and we think the present would be a good time for the anti-vaccinators to present their most powerful arguments against the practice. Their labors have undoubtedly contributed in no small degree to the present terrible prevalence of small-pox throughout this country and Europe; and it seems rather mean, now that vaccination is being carried on by the wholesale in hope of crushing out the pestilence, for them to keep so silent. We do not remember to have seen a genuine anti-vaccination article for a year past.

Readables.

The people of North Falmouth, Mass., are unusally excited by reason of the death of two well known and highly esteemed residents, Capt. James Witherell and Mrs. Wm. Bourne, from the results of vaccination. Capt. Witherell's arm began to swell in four hours from the time of vaccination. In twenty hours he became delirious, and within a week he died. It is expected that a scientific investigation of the circumstances will be made.

Foster, the New York car-hook murderer, has been sentenced to be hung on the 7th of March.

Gen. Beveridge, late lieutenant-governor of Illinois, has been sworn in as governor, vice Governor Oglesby, elected U. S. Senator in place of Lyman Trumbull.

Policeman Gould of Portland was sent to the county jail for sixty days for stealing pork.

Frank France, a wealthy Englishman of Aurora, Illinois, went home drunk, mistook the door, and beat another man's wife so that her life is despaired of.

William H. Jackson of Saco, a railroad laborer, died of lock-jaw after intense suffering, last Sunday, consequent upon drinking cold water when very warm. When first taken he was observed standing with his arms outstretched, and he is said to have remained in this posture for three days and two nights, unable to sit or lie down.

Secretary Boutwell has contracted with prominent bankers for funding $300,000,000 of the public debt at 5 per cent.

A cow in Cincinnati upset a milk can at the depot, and becoming frightened at the contents of the can, ran into a telegraph pole and broke one of her horns off. She had never seen such looking fluid before, and it gave her the blues.

An Indianapolis man took his boy upstairs to whip him as requested by his stepmother, but his tender feelings prevailed, and he told the urchin to take his coat off, hang it up and yell lustily while it was whipped. The boy obeyed orders, but spoiled his chances for future similar clemency by telling his experience to the whole neighborhood.

The compositors of the Louisville Daily Commercial have formed a mutual small-pox insurance company. When one of the number is taken sick with small-pox the rest pay him a dollar a week until he recovers.

An Indiana man, possessed of a melancholy penchant for locking on the dark side of human nature, and detecting all manner of imperfections in everything, has devoted himself lately to keeping a record of "Old Probabilities" mistakes. State News.

On Wednesday the workmen on one of the ledges of the railroad extension in Wilton, with a blast of six cartridges of glycerine and seven kegs of powder, threw out a single stone that weighed by actual measurement fifty-two tons.

The citizens of Manchester are interested in the proclamation of President Grant, which prevents government officials from filling State or municipal positions. Their new mayor, Hon. Charles H. Barlett, is clerk of the United States District Court for New Hampshire, and the question as to whether this gentleman comes within the restrictions of the new law or not has been submitted to the Attorney-General at Washington.

Credit Mobilier.

The sergeant-at-arms of the House has collected the checks which Mr. Ames testified he had given to Messrs. Colfax, Patterson, Garfield and Kelley. They all bear date from the 21st to the 23d of June, 1868, and are for the amounts named by Mr. Ames. The check given Mr. Patterson for eighteen hundred dollars bore his indorsement and the date it was received for deposit by one of the Washington city banks. The Boston Herald's dispatch says this is a sufficient answer to Patterson's evidence that Ames had never paid him a dividend.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 67.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

PROVINCIAL TAX OF HAMPTON, 1680. The number of tax payers were 125. The Selectmen were Samuel Dalton, John Sanborne, Henry Moulton, Nathaniel Weare and John Smith. The Constable was Thomas Dearborne. We preserve the spelling of the Sanborn, Moulton and Dearborn names. The constable collected the tax, or "rate," as it was then called. The precept of the selectmen to the constable is dated May 10. In it, it is stated that those who pay in money are to be abated one third part.

The highest tax was that of Henry Greene, fifteen shillings, two and a half pence. Next was Andrew Wiggin, fourteen shillings and eight pence. The lowest was Rachel Chase, one shilling and a penny. Quite a number were between two and three shillings.

The tax was wholly for the Provincial Government, and was to be paid to Richard Martyn, the Treasurer. Probably there was then a town tax, aside from this, for the minister, Rev. Seaborn Cotton. Ministers were then settled by the towns and by them paid. There were no schools, and town officers probably served for little pay.

The following names in Hampton, then, have continued there or in places near, to this date. The original spelling is preserved. Bachilder, Browne, Blake, Drake, Foye, Godfrie, Gove, Garland, Marston, Moulton, Nud, Page, Philbrick, Perkins, Ruby, Sanborne, Taylor, Tilton, Towle, Tuck, Wiggin, Weare, Warde, Cram, Dow, Dearborne, Hobs, Jennis, Johnson, Levitt, Knowles, Lamprey, Shaw, Swaine, Smith. Tilton, Cram and Weare lived in the part now Hampton Falls; some of the others may then have resided in sections afterwards set off from Hampton.

"A DOSE IS TIME," &c.—If "a stitch in time saves nine," it is equally certain that a dose of a healthy tonic like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken at this inclement season of the year may save many an unpleasant twinge. A dose, however, is not sufficient. The system should be thoroughly charged with this genial vegetable stimulant and invigorant. Commence taking it with the commencement of the atmospheric changes which distinguish the winter from the autumn. Thereby you will avoid those disturbances of the digestive and secretive organs, and those painful diseases of the muscles and the nerves of sensation, which often render the period of the year which should be the merriest a season of penance and disquietude. The extraordinary vigor and regularity which this exhilarating restorative imparts to the most important functions of the body, render it an invaluable remedy for nervous debility, constipation, indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and intermittent fevers.

CORNS.—Since pride and fashion have had control of mankind, and shoemakers were compelled to make boots and shoes to fit fancy instead of the feet, the suffering from Corns, Bunions, Ingrowing Nails, Sore Inseeps, Blistered Heels, Callosities on the bottom of the feet, &c., cannot be described. But Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies will cure all such torments, and proper fitting boots will prevent their reproduction. Sold by all druggists. al2

PILES.—The unceasing torture from internal bleeding, external and itching piles is fast wearing away the thousands of those who are afflicted and their hope and courage have long since given place to despair. At midnight on his wooded hills, he Centaur lay dreaming of the hour,
When mankind, cured of aching ills,
Should know his all-healing power.

Nor long he waited. The blind could see,—
Straightened were limbs by pain long bent,
Cripples ran, and the lame on bended knee
Gave thanks for the Centaur Liniment.

The Centaur Liniment is the greatest pain-reliever the world has ever seen. Rheumatism, whether inflammatory, sciatic or nervous, is made to disappear. Swellings cease to pain, wounds are healed, burns are cured without a scar, and stings and bites are rendered harmless.

Mrs. R. Prowell, 492 Atlantic St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have had the rheumatism for ten years. I have tried everything. The Centaur Liniment is the only thing that does me good."

Mr. Chas. Hill, 616 Pine St., Philadelphia, writes: "That two bottles of Centaur Liniment has cured a most severe sprain of his ankle."

J. H. Martin of 533 Seventh Avenue, N. Y., says: "The Centaur Liniment has cured me of a terrible case of inflammatory rheumatism and cannot be too highly recommended."

59 BROADWAY, N. Y., Aug. 21st, 1872.

"All horse owners should have the Centaur Liniment. We used it in our stables and find it the best thing ever adopted."

H. MARSH,
Supt. Adams Express Co. Stables."

Having lost nothing but water, they return, when put in water, to their original condition, both in quantity and flavor.

DIRECTIONS:—To every pound of Fruit add four quarts cold water, come to a boil slowly and stew 10 to 30 minutes, add half the usual amount of Sugar used with fresh fruit.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

In the opinion of the most Eminent Physicians and Chemists these fruit products are far more wholesome than "Canned" or "Dried" fruit—they having been Super-natured or ripened though the Alden Paramatic Process, and prepared perfectly clean without exposure to flies or dirt.

These are the cheapest and best fruits in the Market, and you cannot tell them from fresh fruit when cooked.

SMALL-POX.

NOTICE TO PHYSICIANS AND OTHERS.

The Mayor and Aldermen call the attention of Physicians and Householders to the Law of the State and the Ordinance of the City relative to cases of Small-pox occurring in this city, as follows:

It shall be the duty of every physician who attends upon any person sick with the small pox to immediately report the same to the Health Officers or the Mayor and Aldermen and if any physician shall neglect so to do he shall forfeit the sum of one hundred dollars.

When any householder shall know that any person within his family is sick of the small pox, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers; if any such householder shall refuse or neglect to do so he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars.

The Board of Aldermen have requested the Mayor to cause IMMEDIATE PROSECUTION to be instituted for every violation of the above provisions.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

A Protest.

Messrs Eds.:—Seeing in your paper in an advertisement of a Masquerade Ball soon to come off, that a costumer will be in this city from Boston on that occasion, I beg space in your columns to enter a mild protest against it. It is notorious that Boston is, and has been for a year, full of small-pox, and that the disease can be spread in no way more readily and surely than by infected clothing. The fancy wardrobe of a Boston costumer is at the service of any who choose to hire, and the bringing here of such a wardrobe seems to me very like a deliberate importation of disease; the possibility that the seeds of infection may lurk in some of the fancy dresses is so strong as to amount to a probability, and while I have little fear of small-pox myself, and every confidence in the energy of our Health Department and City Fathers, I am reminded of the answer of the seaman to a lady who enquired if he was afraid of a huge shark he was looking at with disgusted interest, as it swam beside the ship: "No, ma'am; I don't know as I'm afraid of a shark; but I should consider it a wanton temptin' o' Providence to jump straight into a shark's mouth."

Let me add that I hear many complaints from citizens concerning the mixing with the public of persons connected with or employed by the Health Department. The manner in which these men perform their unpleasant duties is generally commended except in this one particular, and I have no doubt that every possible precaution is taken by them before approaching other persons; but many men and women have grave apprehensions lest those entrusted with keeping down the small-pox may unwittingly and thoughtlessly spread it, and positive information that no danger exists from that source would save much needless alarm.

POINTS.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, a petition of Sweetser & Clark for exemption of iron foundry, stock, etc., from taxation, was referred to Ald. Hatch, Wilson and Mendum.

Wm. C. Akerman's bill for clothing, etc., destroyed by Health Committee, was referred to Ald. Mendum and Annable.

C. A. Shannon's bills for commissions and discounts were referred to Committee on Finance.

Voted, That the City Accounts for 1872 be printed, under the direction of the Mayor, as soon as practicable.

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the case of the Rockingham Ten Cents Savings Bank, reported that the subject pertains to the duty of the Assessors, and asked to be discharged from the further consideration thereof. The committee were discharged.

Resolved, That the substance of Ordinance 100 of the Statutes of the State, of 1871, Chap. 19, be published in the newspapers of the city, and that notices thereof be served upon each physician in practice in the city, and that the Mayor be requested to cause immediate prosecution to be instituted for every violation thereof.

Voted, That the Portsmouth and Dover R. R., be authorized to obstruct the highway to Freeman's Point while they build across the same; also to alter the grade of said highway, all under the direction of the Mayor.

Lacontes.

A seven-year-old son of Mr. John Harrington had a leg broken while coasting near Eldredge's brewery, on the 20th. Dr. Coleman was called and set the broken limb.

The Concord Patriot says the abuse of the franking privilege is a "crime!" Yet it has nothing but condonement for Congressman Hibbard's action in franking 600 pounds of documents through one mail.

Some people having the idea that small-pox is in many instances contracted from handling greenbacks, our patrons are respectfully notified that we haven't the least fear of taking the disease in that way.

The printing of the city book has been awarded to Mr. Lewis W. Brewster, nowithstanding Marston & Freeman offered to do it $50 cheaper than Mr. Brewster did it last year, allowing for the same number of pages. It was disposed of by lot, last year, and is given out direct, this year.

One of the most complete and exhaustive works on Natual History that we ever saw is now being introduced in this city by Mr. J. J. Abbott, General Agent for the United States. It would be useless to undertake a description of this valuable scientific contribution, as one must see and read it to fully appreciate it. In these days of book canvassing when the market is so corrupted by unscrupulous agents and boors it is refreshing to meet with a work that is well worth the money asked for it and introduced by a gentleman in every sense. We cheerfully commend Mr. Abbott to the attention of our friends.

A bill is before the Maine legislature authorizing the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth Railroad to extend its road so as to enable the company to secure such suitable accommodations at Portland as shall be deemed necessary by the management.

Shipbuilding.

Messrs. Tobey & Littlefield, builders of the celebrated ships Sierra Nevada and Meteor, the former having attracted nearly as much attention in the law courts of Great Britain as did the latter in the courts of this country, from her seizure in New York, are employing in their shipyard a large force of shipwrights, and the locality presents the busy appearance of former days. They have a contract for a ship of 1300 tons, which is being built for Capt. Jacobs and others. The model is designed by the builders under the approval of Capt. Jacobs, who has commanded some of the best built ships from this river, and is now superintending the construction of this ship, of which he is to take command the coming season. The new ship is to be of easy proportions, designed for general freighting business, having large carrying capacity, with a long flat floor and sharp ends, affording her opportunity for speed. Her dimensions are 185 feet keel, 205 feet overall, 38 1-4 feet wide, and 23 1-2 feet deep. The frame is of that well-known New Hampshire white oak that has given celebrity to so many vessels built in this region. The keel is of rock maple, copper fastened; ceiling and planking are to be of yellow pine, while the entire material used will be of the first quality. The ship is to be built under French Lloyds' inspection and survey, to rate first class for 11 years. She will be fitted with those modern improvements that enter into the construction of vessels of this class. The yard of Tobey & Littlefield, connected by rail with the lumber regions of New Hampshire and with the deepest water in the harbor, is one of the best situated places for shipbuilding in the country, and from the material gathering at this spot, we are led to infer that shipbuilding has at last revived, and better days are in store for ship mechanics.

Clippings.

From the Portsmouth Journal.

—The city bargains to pay $20 a month for the use of the house on the Lightford place on Lafayette Road as a small pox hospital, reserving the right of purchase for $4000.

—The wife of Rev. A. J. Patterson, of Boston Highlands, made her second appearance in the pulpit on Sunday evening in that place, when she delivered the annual charity lecture before the "Ladies' Samaritan Society." The Boston papers pronounce it an elegant appeal.

—A new and elegant postal car passed through this city on Tuesday on the through route from Boston to Bangor. It was put on by the Maine Central, and is the first one ever furnished by them. The postal clerks on this line use sponges saturated with carbolic acid, as a protection against small pox.

—A fine portrait in full regalia of the late Timothy G. Senter, has been presented to the Piscataqua Lodge, I. O. of O. F., by the family of the deceased. It was executed by Hale, artist, of Portland, Me., and is pronounced a very correct likeness. Mr. Senter was one of the oldest members of the Lodge here, having been admitted December 2, 1844, less than six months after the instituting of this branch. Beside holding one of the highest offices, he had been Grand Representative to the Grand Lodge.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE. — On Monday evening last, N. Appleton Shute, Esq., cashier of the National Granite State Bank, in this town, went to the depot, with the avowed purpose of taking the 6 P. M. train for Boston. Since that time he has not been heard from. As he was expected back the next day, or by Wednesday at farthest, his unexplained absence caused much anxiety, and on Thursday morning a gentleman from this town proceeded to Boston, to learn the cause of his absence, if possible. He ascertained that Mr Shute had probably not been in Boston, at all. At our time of going to press, no certain information has been obtained respecting this mysterious affair. To allay any anxiety that might be felt by persons interested in the Bank, it may be well to state the entire capital is represented by U. S. bonds, which are on deposit in Washington.—Exeter News Letter.

IRON in the BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes the Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up as Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

The Wrong Corpse.

A Hartford grave-digger was preparing a receptacle for a small-pox corpse when the bearers came into the cemetary with the body, and the grave digger, whose name is Jacob, fearing the disease, skedaddled over the fence. The bearers thought they should hear no more of Jacob, and hired another man to fill up the grave. The new hand having also a wholesome fear of the disease, filled himself with whiskey, and when the grave was half filled lay down in it to rest. Meanwhile Jacob got the better of his fears and came back to finish the job. He did not look in the grave, but began throwing in the dirt, when a vigorous kicking in the grave startled him. This was too much for Jacob, and thinking that the small pox corpse was coming out of the grave again, he ran for life. A policeman who heard the story went and released gravedigger No. 2, who was kicking away in the grave, trying to overcome the double load of sand and whiskey, and this grave comedy at length came to an end.—Springfield Union.

A Wisconsin farmer does not bestow a cheek upon the young man who marries his daughter, but he gives him ten thousand hoop poles, which are cash when delivered at a railway station.

The Singer SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of them are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

IS THE

OLDEST

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET.

All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country, and preserves its advantages over all others unrivalled.

It is really kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

N. B. Those purchasing for cash, before the 1 of January next, will have a consideration allowed them.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in an advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

$1000 REWARD.
BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Iaquiline, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Alleviator absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUCHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the softest instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleviator for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.
For sale by J. H. THACHER, WM. R. PRESTON, Portsmouth; JAMES O. TREPETHEN, Kittery; E. S. SAFFORD, Kittery Point; H. M. CURTIS, Newcastle, and dealers generally.

Thunder and Guns.

Some of our exchanges think that the Credit Mobilier inquisition should not be the only one of its kind, and that there is room for other investigations. A New York paper, describing the testimony of Mr. Ames and its effects, is moved to quote as follows:—

"Never before have the servi servorum
Had before 'em
Such a breach of decorum,
Such flagrant defiance of morum bonorum,
And won't have again sæcula sæculorum."

Mr. Ames will be likely to regard this quotation as very pertinent, if he has ever read the "ballad" from which it is taken. That "ballad" tells the story of an old crusader, who came home from the wars and killed his page, his wife and his wife's paramour, and afterwards made confession of his sin to the Pope. According to his story, the papal judgment was, that it was a venial offence to kill a page, that killing a wife was rather more serious, but not unpardonable, and that it was by no means a mortal sin to kill a paramour; but he must know who the paramour was in order to decide this point properly. He might be "a champion of the cross," which would make the matter somewhat serious. "Oh, no!" said the penitent, "he was not a champion of the cross, nor a man of high degree: he was only a barefooted friar." Then came an awful explosion, in this style:—

"Now thunder and turf!" Pope Gregory said,
And his hair raised his triple crown right off his head.
"Now thunder and turf and out and alas!
A horrid thing has come to pass.
What! Cut off the head of a reverend prior,
And say it was only a barefooted friar?
O turpissime! Vir acquissime! scelerattissime, quissime, issime!
Never, I trow, have the servi servorum
Had before 'em,
Such a breach of decorum;
Such a gross violation of morum bonorum,
And won't have again sæcula sæculorum.
Come hither to me, my cardinals three,
Doctors and proctors of every degree.
Go, fetch me a book—go, fetch me a bell
As large as a dustman's, and a candle as well,
I'll send him where good manners won't let me tell."

How We Look At It.

The long-winded investigations into the dealings of Congressmen in that stock which at first tasted as sweet but at the last bites like a serpent and stings like an adder—the famed Credit Mobilier—have so far utterly failed to prove that the stock-dabbling members of Congress were influenced in their legislative action by their ownership of such stock. That many of them did own such stock has been proved; some of them boldly acknowledged it, and stated that they invested their money as they fancied they had a right to, where they thought it would be most profitable, and that they had no excuses or apologies to make for entering into a legitimate business transaction; at least, one of the persons implicated talked that way, and nobody seemed to have any interest in cross-questioning him.

The worst and most humiliating feature is the prevarication—to speak very mildly—which some of the "Honorable" gentlemen have resorted to. If their transactions were honorable, we can only regard with contemptuous pity the weakness which could induce them to resort to petty quibbling or absolute falsehood, to shield themselves from imputations originally started solely to influence the Presidential election; if their transactions were really dishonorable and corrupt, falsehood will not mend the matter any, that we can see. Had Mr. Brooks, instead of indignantly and positively denying that he had ever had any connection, directly or indirectly, with the Credit Mobilier, done as Ex-Representative Boyer of Pennsylvania did, and made a plain statement of facts, defending his action on the ground that he had a perfect right to invest his private funds where he pleased and had never been improperly influenced in legislation by his personal interests, he would have come off all right; and so with certain republican Congressmen, whose reputations are not now so bright as they were three months ago. The official record of the votes of the reputation-damaged officials shows that they were not bought, or at least that they did not by any means always vote as the Pacific Railroad interest would have had them; and Mr. James Brooks, after he had become a purchaser of Credit Mobilier stock, ably opposed a big scheme in the interest of the Union Pacific road.

Assuming the innocence of all the parties implicated, (which is "assuming" a great deal, no doubt,) we can account for their conduct since a party by the name of Dana first attacked them, only on the supposition that they were all frightened out of their wits by the clamor of a "virtuous" press. That they had reason to be frightened, is true. Every man of them knew that there was no hope of fair play or impartial judgement for him, from his political opponents,—that "trifles light as air" would be magnified into "confirmations strong as proofs of holy writ," when brought up against a political adversary. But if they were really innocent in intention, they should have remembered that cowardice is a poor protection from the storm of slander and misrepresentation which greets nearly every eminent public man in this country at some period of his career, if it does not last all through it; and if guilty, they should have remembered that a bold rogue is less despicable than a sneaking one—that even that thief o' the world, Boss Tweed, fighting to the bitter end in an infamous cause, is less contemptible than the flying Tom Fields or Dick Connolley.

Defalcation at Exeter.

The quiet town of Exeter has been excited over the disappearance of Mr. N. Appleton Shute, cashier of the National Granite Bank. He has been a large operator in gold, stocks and bonds, in State street, Boston, and is reported to have lost heavily in coal mine speculations. He left Exeter on foot, Monday, and has not since been heard from. On Tuesday, Mrs. Shute returned to the bank $5,000 worth of registered bonds which she said her husband left on the bed when he went away. On Wednesday, the bank officials grew suspicious and began examining the accounts, but found no discrepancy until Thursday, when a deficit of $20,000 was discovered. Further developments on Friday brought the defalcation up to $125,000.

Mr. Shute is 40 years old and has a wife and two children. He has been cashier of the bank for ten years, and such was his reputation and the esteem in which he was held, it is stated that for three years the bank authorities did not secure the renewal of his bonds, and the bank has no security for its loss. He has been a man of strict habits and his sudden flight has astonished the community. It is supposed that he used the money in speculations, intending to return it, but becoming involved was unable to restore it. His family have returned to the protection of Mrs. Shute's parents.

Credit Mobilier.

On Friday, Messrs. Colfax and Kelley cross-examined Oakes Ames before the Credit Mobilier investigating committee. The latter insisted that he paid each of them the checks in question, and both repeated their assertions, solemnly swearing again that they had never received either the checks or the proceeds of them. Mr. Ames, on his part, presented sworn transcripts from his books of their accounts, and the sergeant-at-arms was summoned and produced the checks of dates as sworn. If Ames paid the sergeant-at-arms, as Ames swears and the sergeant-at-arms acknowledges, and Colfax and Kelley did not receive the money, whose pocket is it in now?

A Washington dispatch to the Boston Journal, Saturday, says Senator Patterson's friends are astounded at the testimony concerning him by Oakes Ames. Mr. Ames was asked whether he had any further papers with regard to Senator Patterson's connection with the Credit Mobilier. Mr. Ames replied that he had; Mr. Patterson had sworn here that he had not received stock or money on account. Mr. Ames then produced the following receipts:

WASHINGTON, June 22, 1866.

Received of Oakes Ames eighteen hundred dollars on account of dividend received by him as trustee in stock held for my account. J. W. PATTERSON."

BOSTON, May 6, 1871.

Received of Oakes Ames two hundred shares Union Pacific Railroad stock and $737 in cash, on account of Credit Mobilier stock, and there is still due on the transaction thirty shares of stock in the Credit Mobilier of America and $2000 in the income bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad.

J. W. PATTERSON."

Mr. Ames said the above papers were in his handwriting but the signatures were those of Senator Patterson. Witness then produced in addition to the above a letter from Senator Patterson, dated January 4, 1873. The letter is as follows:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4, 1873.

Hon. Oakes Ames:

My Dear Sir.—The facts in respect to the Credit Mobilier, so far as I have any connection with it, are as follows: You came to me one day, knowing that a want of means was a chronic evil with me, and said, "Patterson, if you would like I can let you have thirty shares of stock in the Credit Mobilier, which I think will be a profitable investment, and will be a good thing for you." My reply in substance was that if you had anything which I could properly invest in, and out of which I could make some money, I should be glad to take it, for that I had not the money at that time, and must defer it till I could get it. Your reply was that you presumed I could have it later when it might be convenient, and you regarded it a perfectly legitimate transaction. At that time you did not and could not anticipate you should ever ask for further legislation from Congress in respect to the road, and you never did except when it was forced upon you by the Secretary. After this conversation with me you may have had the impression that I should take the stock some time, but for some reason or other, perhaps for a want of funds, I never took any of the stock. If I never had any stock in the Company I could not, as I did not, have its dividends. If pressed to know if I purchased at any time bonds or stock of the road you can say I did at the time they attempted to embarrass you when the value of the stock was depressed, and I paid you the full market value for it. I paid you $7000 in money for stock and bonds. The stock I put into the hands of Mr. Morton immediately to sell as soon as it should go up reasonably in the market, which he did.

I saw Mr. Morton on my way through, and he said he had never held any stock in the Credit Mobilier for any one, but did not wish to have his name brought into the examination if it could be avoided. I am going to Ohio; I will see you on my return.

Don't fail to correct your original statement before the Committee; it must not be reported as it now stands.

Very truly, &c., J. W. PATTERSON.

Mr. Ames said he had frequent conversations with Mr. Patterson on the subject of the above letter. The facts to which the letter alluded had frequently been spoken of between himself and Patterson. He had received several letters from Patterson since, but he had torn them up.

Readables.

John R. Johnson, a Swede, has been sentenced to be hung April 10, 1874, at New Haven, for murdering Johanna Hess of Meriden, Conn.

The recent storm in Maine was attended by hail, thunder and lightning.

The London papers express indignation in the strongest terms at the heartless conduct of the captain of the steamer which sank the Northfleet. Sixty survivors of the disaster have arrived in London.

The Kentucky senate has passed a bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday. Progress!

In the case of ex-Mayor Putnam and others indicted at Portland for conspiracy to replevin liquors in the custody of State officers, the jury after seven hours returned a verdict of not guilty. The trial lasted seven days. Judge Symonds congratulated the jury upon the verdict.

Small-pox rages in Lima, Peru. It is said that the town of Lota, Chili, has been actually depopulated by the fatal epidemic.

Small-pox is decreasing in Boston.

The President has signed the act abolishing the grades of Admiral and Vice Admiral.

The Boston Shoe and Leather Association has passed resolutions opposing the repeal of the United States bankrupt law.

Hon. Charles Hale has tendered his resignation as Assistant Secretary of State. The nomination of Mr. J. C. Bancroft Davis to succeed him was confirmed by the U. S. Senate on Friday.

The naval appropriation bill passed the House on Friday.

The steamer which ran down the Northfleet was the Pelayo, bound from Antwerp for Havana. Public indignation at the heartless conduct of the captain of the steamer is unbounded. A later report is that a sunken steamship has been discovered near the scene of the accident, and is supposed to be the one which destroyed the ship, and to have gone down before the ship did.

NEW TREATMENT OF CANCERS.—The cure of a cancer upon the cheek of Mr. C. A. Chace of Kansas City, in fourteen days, by placing him in a Turkish bath at a temperature of 170, and the application of a poultice, is mentioned in the Transcript of Saturday and in other papers as a novel and wonderful thing. But an equally interesting operation was performed last month in our own vicinity by Dr. B. Shepard, of No. 7 Montgomery Place, upon Mr. Dan. Eastman of Lancaster, N. H., 65 years old. A large cancer had been skillfully extracted from the side of Mr. E. by Dr. Bugbee with a knife last summer, but soon reappeared. Dr. S. by the application of a plaster, and a certain constitutional treatment, extracted the cancer, weighing nearly half a pound, and without pain or inconvenience; the cure being effected in thirty-three days. Boston News.

"A DOSE IN TIME," &c.—If "a stitch in time saves nine," it is equally certain that a dose of a healthy tonic like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken at this inclement season of the year may save many an unpleasant twinge. A dose, however, is not sufficient. The system should be thoro'ly charged with this genial vegetable stimulant and invigorant. Commence taking it with the commencement of the atmospheric changes which distinguish the winter from the autumn. Thereby you will avoid those disturbances of the digestive and secretive organs, and those painful diseases of the muscles and the nerves of sensation, which often render the period of the year which should be the merriest a season of penance and disquietude. The extraordinary vigor and regularity which this exhilarating restorative imparts to the most important functions of the body, render it an invaluable remedy for nervous debility, constipation, indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and intermittent fevers.

CORNS.—Since pride and fashion have had control of mankind, and shoemakers were compelled to make boots and shoes to fit farmy instead of the feet, the suffering from Corns, Bunions, Ingrowing Nails, Sore Insteps, Blistered Heels, Callosities on the bottom of the feet, &c., cannot be described. But Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies will cure all such torments, and proper fitting boots will prevent their reproduction. Sold by all druggists. a12

"Vive l' Empereur!" were the words that greeted the Prince Imperial on his return from his father's funeral. He replied: "L' Empereur est mort. Vive la France!" Talleyrand himself never said anything more astute and appropriate. Our prophet adds: "A Prince capable of that speech, at seventeen years of age, is fit to be Emperor of France before he is thirty. It all depends on this: Was it his own inspiration, or was he 'coached?'"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

An Unlucky Likeness.

There is a certain man in this city, who, although there is nothing in his appearance to indicate that he is dishonest, looks exactly like a thief. He arrived here from Portland several months ago, and was instantly pounced upon by the City Marshal and kept in custody for twenty-four hours, on suspicion of having stolen something in Lawrence, Mass. He told a plain and straightforward story, to the effect that he regularly earned his living and did not steal it, that he had been at work in a first-class hotel in Portland for the four or five months previous, that his late employers would give him a good character, and that he knew nothing at all about Lawrence or what had or had not been stolen there. The Marshal's faith in having got the man he "wanted" was sadly shaken by this story and the manner in which the man bore himself, but the likeness between the photograph of the Lawrence thief, sent on by the Lawrence police, and the man in custody, was too striking to justify a discharge without further enquiry, which was accordingly made and found to corroborate the man's account in every particular. In addition, he found an old acquaintance in this city—a gentleman well known and of good reputation—who stated that he knew much of his story to be true and believed the whole of it to be. The man was of course discharged, and immediately procured work at one of the principal hotels, where he has been employed, to the satisfaction of landlord and patrons, ever since. Last week the City Marshal received a letter from the Lawrence police, informing him that the man they were after was employed at the ——— House, and requesting his arrest; but as the Marshal had already identified the man once, as not being a thief, of course he was not molested. The real culprit is believed to be with a circus, and the working man he so strikingly resembles hopes he will soon get caught, as the fun of being so affectionately looked after by the police is about played out.

A marine belonging to the receiving ship Sabine fell into the cellar over which the Dorr bake house formerly stood, dislocating his thigh and receiving other injuries, Friday night.

Readers of the Portsmouth Journal who are well informed upon the current history of the country, will be amused by the issue of this week. Its silence in regard to the topic of the day is quite characteristic. It however finds room for a quarter of a column in which to dilate upon the awful wickedness of Congressman Brooks, the one Democrat who is tainted with the Credit Mobilier bribery business. In regard to Senator Paterson, the Journal placidly remarks that he told "his story, which is straightforward and to the point." The Journal is an organ.—Evening Hand-Organ.

Petting A Wildcat.

A man in the employ of Dr. Isaiah Edgerly of Lee killed a large wildcat near Wadley's Falls on Thursday. He was teaming unground plaster and heard his dog, a small one, bark. Looking up he saw the animal on a tree and threw a piece of plaster at him. The cat leaped to the ground and ran for the man, who seized another piece of plaster, threw it at and stunned him. He jumped on the animal just as he began to rise, held him down, took out his knife and cut his throat. Capt. Lowell Jenness of this city, who saw the cat, says it was four feet and an inch long, from the ends of the forelegs to the ends of the hind, but very poor as if half famished. Persons living in the vicinity have heard cries in the night like those of a child, and suppose they came from this animal. Children were not allowed to cross these woods to go to school on account of these noises. It is thought the animal escaped from Ev. Foss' caravan.

Mr. David Murray, of Newmarket, writes as follows: "In a window in the Treadwell house, so-called, near Newmarket Junction, is a pane of glass on which is written with the point of a diamond: "S. Treadwell, 1647." Mrs. Newhall, of Greenland, who is a daughter of the late Charles Treadwell, is of the opinion that the pane was brought from England to Portsmouth and there kept in the family until her grandfather, Nathaniel Treadwell, moved to Newmarket about 60 years ago." What kind of boys have lived in Portsmouth and Newmarket for the last 256 years, that they have allowed that pane of glass to exist so long? Our belief in the total depravity of boys has received a rude shock.

A few days ago Mr. Seth L. Davis of Errol, after recovering from a fever, went into the woods to cut timber; but after working a little while he felt sick and returned home and went to bed, and immediately thereafter died. He was postmaster of the town, and an excellent man.

SMALL POX PARTIES AT HENZEL'S ISLAND.—Recently while Capt. Robert Shillaber and his aids were preparing to thoroughly cleanse and fumigate the Pest House on Henzel's Island,—now known as Pest Island, it became necessary to knock off from the walls a portion of the dilapidated coating of whitewash which had been accumulating thereon for many years, in order to properly and neatly (this is "Bob's" custom always) put on the repair and finishing touches to the ancient structure. When it is recollected that this building has stood one-hundred-and-twenty-three years (having been built in 1749 for inoculation parties,) and that in all this time more than one-hundred coats of whitewash have been given its interior, it can be readily understood that the condition of these walls in their honey-combed appearance were "about right" for the reception of contagion. On being lightly struck with a bar by "Capt. Bob" the flakes came off in cakes more than an eighth of an inch thick, revealing beneath their surface, ye what? why "handwriting on the wall,"—a roll of names, cut into the rough woodwork in the chirography of "ye olden times," evidently the names of those who formed small pox parties, or "social disease assemblies," as one old lady called them, going to this place for the purpose of being secure from taking the small pox in the natural way, by being vaccinated for it, as mentioned in the second series of Rambles, Page 263.

Of the names and dates most legible, we give the following, and doubtless some of the older readers of the journal will discover, with us, many well known names;

N. T. Remo, 1776.
Betsy We Pobb, 1770.
Nathl. Sherburne, June 5, 1773.
Elliphalet Ladd, June 8, 1773.
Dual Rogers, April 6, 1773.
Dilly Martin, August, 1776.

This was probably the lady spoken of in the Rambles, Page 263, second series, who was invited "to take the small pox." See the communication there published.

Nancy Lounery, March 1778.
J. Briard, March 1778.
Elizabeth Dannrell, 1778.
G. Long March, March 9, 1778.
John Beck, 1779.
Jno. Warner, March 9, 1778.
B. Fernald, 1781.
Hannah Grant, 1781.
S. H. Clark, 1797.
W. Melcher, 1797.
Seth Walker, 1797, (Register of deeds.)
Timothy Gerrish, 1797. (Then jailor.)
Lucy Hall, (no date.)
M. Gardner, (no date.)
H. Ladd, August 3, 1801.

We give the above as only a portion of the names inscribed on the walls, door panels, and ceiling—these being the most legible and now for the first time for half a century brought into the light by the worn-out condition of the whitewash. Aside from the sufferings which these volunteer, willing subjects must have undergone, there are many records left of how socially and even hilariously the time passed indoor and outdoors during the four and five weeks the patients were confined to the place. We have been gratified by lately listening to the stories of an aged lady of this city, now nearly four score and ten years, who although not one of the "victims," recalls many reminiscences of these ancient days on "Henzel's Island." Candy-pulls, love-making, mock burials, mock auctions, in fact a yankee's "thousand and one" amusements, accomplished with daily out-door air and exercise far more for the benefit of the diseased body than the administering of medicine could perhaps. Dr. Hall Jackson, was for many years, if we are not misinformed, in charge of the Pest House, and it was through his efforts that so general an inoculation took place here. Certain it is that his long experience at the Essex Hospital in suffering with and treating for the disease, gave him a prestige which made him famous in those days.

An aged resident who recently visited the Pest House, to renew her recollections of "ye dayes" she spent at this place, discovered most of the furniture still there which was in use over seventy-two years ago—even to the very table on which the lady herself was placed when she underwent inoculation.

Without consultation or a guide this venerable lady, now of 86 years, started from the front door entrance of the house, walked leisurely down to the lonely resting places of those who had died in this house, until as if by instinct she stopped in front of an unmarked mound, when, on being questioned, she stated that it was the grave of her "mother, who was buried there some 78 years previous."

It is a little singular that of the numerous "arched homes" here to be seen, only one has any distinguishing mark—a wood head board bearing the initials of S. J. S.

The same old wooden latches with strings, are still in condition and use on some of the doors. The iron kettle is yet there in the fire-place, where tradition says (we hope it's a mistake,) after the infected articles were washed, old "Cipio" the unsuspecting servant was several times found boiling water therein for his coffee. Time, that thief of all things, has made way, or else the many intense fires built under it, long since made way with the capacious brass kettle used for boiling the molasses for the candy scrapes. This same "sweet kettle," as it was always called, was frequently brought into requisition to "do up" six and even nine gallons of molasses at one time, for people then ate honey, and that proverbial sweet tooth, though how those indulging in so much candy, retained such good teeth in those days, as compared with our time, is one of the unexplained mysteries. Adulteration! Adulteration! cries the modernist, and no doubt it is so.

The keeper of the Pest House was Mr. Nath'l. Lear, of Newcastle, who probably assumed charge on the day of its opening. Mr. Lear was a fisherman, and employed the greater part of his time in this business, leaving to his wife, Kesiah by name, the whole duties of the house. She was one of the most capable nurses, was known as "Aunt Kissy," and many a sick one at the hospital owed recovery to the extreme and seemingly never tireless care she exercised over them. Mr. Lear, while attempting one day to board his vessel which was lying inside this harbor, preparatory to sailing for the shoals fishing ground, fell overboard, and before assistance could be rendered was drowned. His body was recovered. While the house was in charge of these people, there was a fine garden in front of the house, which was kept in the nicest order, and where the convalescent were glad to lend their "labors of love" to the devoted matron of the house in keeping her flower beds in the best of order, as a partial compense for her kind care. Here, too, were a number of fruit trees, kept in a high state of "profilicence," and each autumn they bestowed their produce in generous quantities upon the house larder, said fruit never coming to the light, however, except under the prescribed rules of Mrs. Lear. What a change time has wrought! for now there is no sign of a tree on the island, except in a single willow.—which, doubtless, if the old Pythagonian theory is right, "weeps" at the change.

There is no record that any other person was ever appointed to become keeper and take permanent residence in the house. Singular as it may seem, no record has been kept of the deaths which have occurred here, although the now-crumbling mounds in the grave yard close by shows them to be many.

The following are all that we have been able to obtain: Mrs. Beck, in 1793, James Philips, Dec. 1834, Lysander Degett, of Union, Me. June 10, 1850, Susan J. Spinney, July 6, 1850.

At present there are fifteen moveable bedsteads or bunks in the old house, "awaiting occupants," as the unterrified "my brother Bob" expresses it. But let us hope that the good fortune which has thus far attended our city may long continue, and we be free from this loathsome disease.—Journal.

The C. M. Epidemic.

The terrible and widespread ravages of that extraordinary disease called Credit Mobilier are alarming the whole nation. The epizootic was as mild as the measles compared to it. It has already carried off many most distinguished victims. It did not come from Canada like the epizootic nor from Asia like the cholera, nor from the West Indies like the yellow fever. It is believed to have started somewhere in Pennsylvania, and, meeting with a favorable condition of the atmosphere in Washington, District of Columbia, stayed there, and was developed by reason of the defective sanitary arrangements in the political system of the capitol. Great sympathy is felt for Massachusetts, so many of her distinguished citizens have been swept off. The subjoined list of deaths will be read with painful interest by the public. The notices are inserted (contrary to our usual custom) free of charge.

AMES, HORACE, of Massachusetts.—Died of Credit Mobilier (long and lingering illness), aged 69.

O lofty worth, where virtue were unknown:
O shining light, whose glamor was unseen;
Where latent spaces of godlike work has shown
What men were out, but what they might have been.
Thou told the truth, tho' hid 'neath many cloaks,
O concentrated essence of a Hoax.

All stockholders of the Union Pacific Railroad who received higher dividends than 120 per cent, are cordially invited to attend the funeral. Massachusetts papers please copy.

ALLEN, JOHN B., of Massachusetts.—Died of C. M. (not cholera morbus—was discovered of the disease too late for the physic), aged about a century.

Over this sad wreck let mankind mourn daily;
Proud knocked down every epitaph in this Alley.

This is nobody's funeral.

ALLISON, JOHN B., of Iowa, died of C. M. (an overdose of dividend hastened his departure), aged 16 years.

Long dead to us, sweet Allison,
The Hoax thou couldst not rally;
If so soon done, why sort begun,
Thou fragrant son of Alley?

Resolve will be embalmed.

BINGHAM, JOHN A., of Ohio, died of C. M. (supposed to have caught the fatal infection from Dawes), aged 57 years.

Mean for him, within, he'll wake you no more
With shrewd against theft, Buckeye Bingham.
The death bells shall boom how he garnered his store,
And gentle Ben Butler will ring 'em.

Announcement of funeral hereafter. Ohio papers please copy.

BROOKS, JOS., of New York, died of C. M. (putting to the test that he was well in health, no remedies were administered), aged 62.

He chattered, chattered as he went
To join the great Salt River;
Hoax might threat or Hoax relent,
But he'd date forever.
Many well-filled "hocks" his way he picked,
With watered "Credits" over,
McCrack might "Jam," McCrack convict,
His Brooks dashed fewer.

His funeral will have no political significance.

COBURN, SCHUYLER, of Indiana, died of C. M. (the agonies of the poor victim were intense; to the last he insisted that it was something else besides Credit Mobilier) aged 46.

A beautiful collar cometh our pathway,
Too lively and fair to remain;
They smothered him on racks till the soul of Colfax
Flapped up into Heaven again.

May the fate of poor Schuyler warn men of a similar,
Who dividends gets in the brain!

Indiana papers please copy.

DAWES, HENRY L., of Massachusetts, died of C. M. (he had the reputation of having a powerful constitution, but it was evidently a delusion), aged 17.

Sidewalker! Loafer! Thou hast left us;
Plymouth Rock thy fate will feel;
For a postage-mass bread as Old Remedy is supposed.

Funeral strictly private. No wake.

GARFIELD, JAMES A., of Ohio, died of C. M. (struggled hard against the mortal epidemic, but it was no use. He owed to unanimity), aged only 42.

Here rests his head upon its lap of earth,
A youth to fortune and to fame known;
Nobler frowned upon his humble birth,
And Hoax Amos henceforth marked him for his own.

Will be buried at Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D. C. No cards.

KELLEY, WILLIAM D., of Pennsylvania, died of C. M. (his much iron in his blood and too little prudence of himself made him an easy victim to the fell destroyer), aged 69.

Weep not "pig iron," public dear,
He is not dead, tho' sleeping here;
His thunder's hushed, his eye is dim,
Nobbler put a hand on him.

His remains will be "protected" in a metallic casket. A one-horse funeral announced hereafter.

PATTERSON, JAMES W., of New Hampshire, died of C. M. (his sufferings drew tears from his friends; he persisted to the end in supposing it was a different complaint), aged 50 years.

Peaceful be Uriah's slumber,
Hoop-ed he is in burial low;
Thirty shares his coffin cumber,
How it is yourself you know.

Mourning by Senators for thirty days. A granite sarcophagus will enclose the mummy.

SCOFIELD, GLENNI W., of Pennsylvania, died of C. M. (passed off quietly), aged 52.

Hoax Amos, the Ancient Mariner, Stopped Navy Scofield bland.
He held him with his glittering eye
And with his skinny hand.
Then Scofield did a hellish thing
And it did work him we.
He ten shares clipped him on the wing
And laid the Quaker low.

Pennsylvania papers please copy. Funeral at an early day. Music by the band: "Down in a coal mine."

WILSON, HENRY, of Massachusetts, died of C. M. (great hopes were entertained of his recovery), aged 63.

His cronies were long tried to have,
Like martyr on a rack,
Till had Hoax Amos, of sinful games,
Had cased him of his stock.
He "coin" had ne'er into the void been cast
Had he "erased" firm and stock onto his "last."

Natick, (Mass.) papers please copy. Memorial services at Faneuil Hall. No Irish need apply.

WILSON, JAMES F., of Iowa, died of C. M. (astonished everybody, he had hitherto enjoyed such excellent health), aged 45.

Tears, idle tears! he knew not what they meant,
But counted them three dollars for a share;
They blotted out a life we thought well spent—
Ah! was his conscience nothing but a mare?

Rev. Dr. Newman will conduct the services and preach the panegyric from his campaign notes. Free list entirely suspended.—N. Y. Herald.

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred PULMONARY DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is endorsing and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that purchased by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

$1000 REWARD.
BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupuline, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Alleviator absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Cure and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are relieving, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the severest Instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heals of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleviator for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexceeded by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Chronicle

They Digged It Deep.

From Belgium by way of California is not the most direct route for news to come to this part of the world. Yet a San Francisco newspaper contains some government correspondence in which the whole world is interested, but which takes that way to come before the public eye. In the year 1849, it appears therefrom, the United States, France, Great Britain, Russia, and Belgium combined in a scheme which reached its fulfilment in December, 1872. It was a sort of modernized edition of the early Babel fiasco. But while in those days the effort was to build a tower to get above the world, the present improved aim was to dig a hole into the world and study its nature. Under careful engineers and philosophers, and also considerable under the earth's surface, a hole was dug for years and years by patient miners near Bruges, in Belgium. They grew warmer and warmer, and in a few years discovered a new law, that heat increased as the square of the distance from the surface. So did the expense of digging, but the governments quietly paid the costs and the work went on. The men had to throw away their clothes and reduce their wardrobes to the Adamite notion of disregard, and still later had to be protected by an "athermatous and adiathermic paste," which gave them many of the attributes of salamander. On the fifth of November, 1872, they were down 37,810 feet. The compass knew no north, but only pointed up, and water was heavier there than gold was at the surface. That day strange sounds were heard below, and on the next morning lava began to flow up and out, and has continued so to do ever since. The philosophers on the spot declare that the outflow is due to the centrifugal force of the earth's motion, which drives out the molten interior as soon as it finds an outlet. This must now continue till a heap 23,000 feet high is raised. At that point the pressure counterbalances the outward force. In other words the old quotation has been reversed, and of the muse is born a mountain. Lava will gather till this mountain of 23,000 feet shall stand there. To attain this it is probable that the whole of Belgium will be buried, much of the sea will be filled, and probably even England will be firmly united to the main land. If so will England be Europe or Europe become England? That is the question. It has been suggested no doubt by other events to some minds before to-day. But with the present tendency to look on things materially, what a pity it is that the story is a patent hoax and so the question cannot be determined. What the sensation in England would be to see the main land rolling over to them cannot well be imagined by an American and really it is only a waste of time for anybody to try. The story says that the matter has been kept quiet because the Belgian government has the control of the telegraph and this must be taken as a warning in this country; for if the world cannot be told when we make mountains out of mole hills it will cut off most of the news of the day.

The Shute Defalcation.

The deficit in the National Granite State Bank is about $40,000, which covers the bank's surplus. The savings bank, which has $400,000 in deposits, loses $150,000 or more. Mr. Shute's bonds had not been renewed for three years. His securities from twenty-two bondsmen amount to $55,000. The savings bank loss will doubtless cause it to wind up its affairs. Mr. Shute's private transactions with individuals appear to have been on the square, and money and other valuables deposited with him for safe keeping have been found untouched. Mrs. Shute has returned to Exeter. Detectives were secretly following her while absent. The banks offer $10,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of Mr. Shute. It is thought that parties in Boston were accomplices in advising him. The National Granite State Bank has $100,000 capital.

S. J. Court.

On Monday, Franklin B. Evans was arraigned for murder, and got down on his knees and tried to pray after pleading not guilty. His counsel, D. Webster Locke, of Kingston, asked for the assignment of additional counsel as he could find no one to help him. Trial next Monday; defence, insanity. Evans declared on being remanded to jail that he guessed they would hang him, fast enough; everybody seemed to be down on him.

Charles Randall's case, for assault on his mother-in-law, was not proved.

The jury acquitted Dennis Scolley, charged with stealing an overcoat at Newmarket.

COAL DEPOSIT OF CENTRAL ILLINOIS. The following is the report of Dr. R. P. Stevens on the coal deposits of Central and Southern Illinois: Dr. Stevens was a colaborer of Robert Rantoul and others 20 years ago in preliminary surveys of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, and Pennsylvania. His judgment as probably the most accomplished expert for this region will be looked for with interest.

NEW YORK, Dec. 24, '72.

GENTLEMEN:—In answer to your inquiries, I have to say, that in my capacity as a Geological expert I am quite well acquainted with the mineral resources of the State of Illinois, having been heretofore in this character in the examination of the route of the pioneer railroads of that State.

I therefore know the character of the country over which your road contemplates running from Jacksonville to Shawneetown on the Ohio River.

From Jacksonville to Centralia the route is over a surface admirably adapted to corn and grass. From Centralia to Shawneetown, the route is over a region which furnishes the best wheat of Illinois. The flour made from wheat grown in this section of the State is fully equal to that of Richmond, Va. From Mt. Vernon to Shawneetown is an old-cultivated portion of the State.

The success of building railroads over agricultural portions of the State has been fully proved by the Illinois Central Railroad.

Every portion of the State having a width of thirty miles has now, or soon will have, resources in local traffic to support and pay for building a first-class road.

The whole length of your road is over the coal-beds of the great coal-field of the State.

In many places, as at Die Quoia, the coal comes to the surface; in others it lies deep beneath the surface,—such is that of Macoupin County.

The sample of coal you have presented as coming from Virden I recognize as belonging to the lower series, such as appears at Brazil, Indiana, and at Murphysboro, on the Big Muddy River in Illinois.

It belongs to the class of block-coals—i. e., a free-burning, non-caking coal. It is adapted to the grate and locomotive fire, and also for smelting. From its behavior in the crucible I judge it will sustain a good burden in the furnace.

It appears to be quite solid and firm, without any signs of sulphur. Ash is white in color, and the coke solid. Each separate piece of coal placed in the crucible maintains its form as coke. This is a good sign for use of raw coal in blast-furnaces.

The quantitive analysis made by Prof. C. A. Seeley shows it to fully equal any coal of Illinois for gas purposes.

Every test shows it to be one of the very best coals of the western coal-fields. E. P. STEVENS.

Prof. of Mineralogy and Geology, American Institute. To Messrs. Gibson, Cammeyn & Co., 50 Exchange Place, New York.

Credit Mobilier.

The passage-at-arms before the investigating committee on Friday is thus described by a New York Herald correspondent:—

Judge Kelley was allowed the first attack on the witness who had turned State's evidence, to see whether Oakes Ames would yet persist in his naughty stories about good and great men. Oakes sat in his usual seat, nearly in front of Judge Poland. He displayed to-day more feeling than one would think him capable of, to judge from his impassiveness on former occasions. When Judge Kelley assailed him this morning, Ames shaded his eyes with an envelope and gazed out at Kelley as a bloated spider would at a buzzing blue-bottle fly which had become entangled in its web. Kelley made an experiment, but it was a failure. He tried what a game of bluff would do. The member from Pennsylvania turned the batteries of his rhetorical thunder upon Ames at the commencement, his voice booming out in threatening, sonorous cadences. His terrible eye was turned full upon Ames as he valiely strove to frighten him. Oakes had taken his position, and was not to be frightened. He looked amused at times, and then, again, angry, at the deceit of his friend in whom he had once believed. Kelley made a professional show of ignorance. That seems to be the leading characteristic of all the accused Congressmen.

He asked Ames how much stock he held for him, in the most brow-beating way imaginable. Ames replied pleebily, giving the necessary figures. Kelley cross-examined him like a grand inquisitor. It appeared as if he were put to his last card, and in the language of the sporting world, was trying to bluff Oakes Ames' four aces with a single pair. Kelley's manner was very abusive, but as Ames began to get wakened up, retaliation came, and Kelley subsided. His voice, from an angry bellow became a gentle murmur, and his face, which had glared with indignant virtue, looked sad, as if the ashes of desolation were already sprinkled upon his brow.

There was a sensation in the room when Kelley, having pressed Ames to the wall with bullying questions, asked him, "Where is my property, then?" The reply was prompt. The burly form of Oakes Ames stood erect for a moment, as he pulled from his pocket the certificate on ten shares Credit Mobilier and passed them over to the rightful owner. Kelley looked at the certificate with much the same expression that Macbeth might have assumed when reaching out after the dagger. He clutched it at first, and then tossed it over to Judge Poland as if it were some unclean thing, whose touch alone was pollution. He asked the chairman to hold the certificate subject to his disposal. Judge Poland assumed charge of the ten shares, thereby changing place with Oakes Ames as trustee. The Judge is made the subject of considerable chaff since he has come into possession of these shares. His courage in this respect is wonderful, for there is some mysterious terror about the very name of Credit Mobilier to a Congressman, to say nothing of having ten shares in one's possession.

A Fire Bug's Enterprise.

About half past 9 o'clock Sunday evening, the watchman stationed at the railroad bridge discovered a fire in the northern end of Wendell's Block. A window had been broken in by some miscreant, kerosene poured around and fire applied, and when discovered the flames were under such headway that but a few minutes more would have doomed the building. The timely discovery of the incendiary attempt and the prompt action of the discoverers prevented serious damage, the fire being put out without an alarm being given.

P. W. T. A. S.

At a specirl meeting of the Portsmouth Washington Total Abstinence Society, held Monday evening, the following delegates were chosen to attend the State Temperance Convention at Concord to-morrow:

John S. Rand, Jeremiah C. Carr, William D. Fernald, A. H. Harlow, Charles Robinson, Benjamin Cheever, John M. Davis, Henry L. Garrett, Fred. F. Moses, J. T. Larrabee. A. F. Craig.

Shipbuilding.

The new three-masted schooner now being built at the Raynes ship-yard by Wm. F. Fernald, Esq., to be named the "Edwin I. Morrison," is so nearly completed that she will be launched next week. She is owned by Capt. E. H. Atwood and others of Boston and will be commanded by Capt. Lavender. This vessel is of unusual strength, her frame being of the best New Hampshire white oak, and beams and planking of oak and southern hard pine; she is iron and copper fastened, copper bilge and butt bolted, and thoroughly treenailed through both planking and ceiling with locust treenails. Her dimensions are 135 feet keel, 33 feet beam and 15 feet depth of hold; extreme length, 152 feet. She is the largest schooner ever built on this river, being of about 700 tons.

Capt. Geo. Preble of Bath, inspector of the French Lloyds for this district, superintended her building and will rate her A 1 for eleven years. The vessels built by Mr. Fernald are noted for the beauty of their model, combining speed and carrying capacity. He built some of the fastest merchant vessels afloat, of which the Barques Wasp, Fury, Jehu and Scud, although built years ago, and the ship Jean Ingelow, one of the best ships built upon this river, are evidence.

A Soaring Pair.

On Sunday the police arrested and locked up two prisoners of lofty notions, for conduct tending to disturb the quiet and sanctity of the Sabbath, against the peace and dignity of the State and the statute in such case made and provided. The offenders first made their appearance on Market Square, and when the police went for them they soared heavenward—a very proper proceeding for Sunday—and progressed towards Kittery; but after getting half way across the river the attractions of earth proved too much for them, and they returned to Bow Street, where they were captured by the officers and borne in triumph to the station. Visitors to that institution assert that a handsomer and more respectable-looking pair of geese have never been imprisoned there.

A Tribute.

The exercises at the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School on Sunday last were most solemn and impressive; it was a season of mourning for the loss of a valued and beloved teacher. Rev. Mr. Dinsmore presided, and appropriate remarks were made by the Superintendent, also by Messrs. Perry, Newton, Bell, and Reese. The following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas our Heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom has come near us in the sudden death of our brother, Payne Durkee, a beloved teacher and former superintendent of our school; therefore,

Resolved, That while the thought of his sudden departure fills our hearts with unfeigned grief, we do unanimously express our admiration for his purity of character and our appreciation of his earnest and consistent Christian life.

Resolved, That in the discharge of religious duty he has left us an example worthy of imitation.

Resolved, That we tenderly sympathize with the widow and relatives of the deceased in their sad bereavement.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be transmitted to the bereaved relatives and that they be recorded upon the books of the school.

Laconics.

The friends of Mr. John H. Smith have been purchasing tickets liberally for his benefit to-night. Give him a bumper, boys; he deserves your best efforts. The programme is good and the home talent will astonish the natives.

We are requested by a friend of Hon. William B. Small to say that Mr. S. did not recommend the appointment of Mr. J. E. Rider to any position in any custom house.

The House has appropriated $20,000 for piping and gas works to light the Navy Yard. The appropriations for Receiver and Inspector and for Clerk of Accounts were stricken out. These offices are now filled by Gen. M. F. Wentworth and Mr. E. C. Moody. The appropriation for clerk to Receiver and Inspector was also stricken out.

The costumes for Trafton's grand Masquerade Ball on Thursday night will be at the Manager's store on Congress Street this afternoon, for inspection and selection; the Boston costumer cannot be present, but all will be waited on by Mr. Trafton. We are assured that none of the costumes have been worn for a year past, and that no fears of infection need be entertained.

The republican papers which published the laws passed by the 42d Congress are loath to admit that Senator Patterson could be induced to give false evidence before the investigating committee at Washington.

The Pythian Amateurs are to perform "Damon & Pythias," with a farce, at Biddeford on Friday evening, and will carry the Marine Band with them.

"Man, Bird and Beast, or The New Gospel of Humanity," is the title of Dr. A. P. Stevens' lecture which will be delivered at Congress Hall this evening at half past 7 o'clock. Tickets, 25 cts. Let there be a large attendance to help swell the funds of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The lecture will be a spicy one, or Dr. Stevens must have lost his old-time ability.

The committee of seventy chose William H. Sise, Esq., Chief Marshal of the Fourth of July procession, Monday evening.

Railroad Voracity.

One of the Massachusetts railroads—no matter which—desired a piece of land belonging to a farmer, and the owner asked more for it than the company was willing to pay for it. Finding that he would not come to terms, the managers of the corporation came to the legislature and asked for the passage of a general law to meet their particular case—a law under which railroads would find little difficulty in obtaining possession of any coveted real estate. The Railroad Committee has given all interested parties a hearing, and have reported that it is inexpedient to give railroads the privilege asked; this report is the more gratifying because it is in marked contrast with the usages of Railroad Committees in former years, when these corporations have had little difficulty in getting all they asked for.—Boston Traveler.

These Massachusetts railroad managers are behind the times; are old fogies; we in New Hampshire do not bother the legislature, or consult the laws, when we want private lands for railroad; use we do not even give notice to the owners that their land is wanted; we do none of these; it is obsolete. Our course is simpler, and saves trouble, at least at the moment.

Our "railroad kings" are "potentates," indeed, and when they want land simply take it; at least such has been the course pursued towards the undersigned by our latest and therefore best specimen of railroad Presidents. He, backed by his directors and officers, among whom are counted a Bank and Trust Co. President, and half the prominent legal talent of the city, all supported by the whole power of the Eastern Railroad Corporation, marches his gang of laborers, with their teams, upon the land coveted, and sets them at work!

This is simply and exactly what has been done in the past few weeks by the Portsmouth & Dover railroad Co., on land in this city belonging to the subscriber; and a more flagrant, high handed, and clearer outrage upon private rights, or a more lawless exhibition of contempt for the fundamental and statute laws of the State, was never perpetrated, even by a railroad corporation. Without notice that the road has been located across his property, without consent being asked, or notice of its intention given, without the slightest compliance with the forms so minutely pointed out by a special statute as to what "shall be" done, before the right of way is acquired, this Railroad Corporation, backed as we know it to be, repudiates all these safeguards thrown around us, by the power which created it; ignores the laws, and seizing in absolute contempt and defiance, the land it requires, proceeds to remove and destroy fences, cut down trees, build embankments and culverts, and other acts of sovereign ownership on private property, to which it has not acquired the slightest right. This, I feel it necessary to reiterate, is just what it has done in the last few weeks; and as if to heap greater indignity upon the owner, and contempt upon the laws, if that were possible, keeps its gangs of laborers thus at work, after suit for damages for the trespass had been served upon it! Was the owner of this land singled out for such unheard of indignity because he dared to oppose the manner in which this road was to be built, from its first iniquitous inception?

They couldn't wait to comply with the law; are they conscious of some weakness in the web in which we are enveloped, that counsels this haste? May be a thorough sounding of each link—iron though it be—will discover it yet, to the victims.

This city is the largest stockholder in this road and is largely responsible for the acts of its directors; every man, woman and child in it is doubly interested in this matter, and it behooves our authorities to see to it that there is no possibility of the charter of this road being repealed, consequent upon its palpable and unmistakable violation of the organic and special laws, upon the observance of which its being is contingent, before they advance any more bonds in payment of work not done. A sheriff executes a prisoner, legally, after sentence is passed; if he does before, he is hung himself.

Messrs. Editors, the writer's position upon this railroad question having been mis-represented, he thinks the public, alike interested, should have the naked facts, otherwise your courtesy would not have been tasked.

MARK H. WENTWORTH.

The Roll.

We commence the publication to-day of the names and addresses of sons and daughters of Portsmouth recorded on the book kept for that purpose in the City Clerk's office. Corrections and additions are solicited by the committee of invitations, and may be delivered to Messrs. Wm. H. Sise, M. Bufford, J. Albert Sanborn or to Gardner M. Goodrich.

Morning Chronicle.

POOR LITTLE STEPHEN GIRARD. The man lives in Philadelphia who, when young and poor, entered a bank, and says, he, "Please, sir, don't you want a boy?" And the stately personage said, "No, little boy; I don't want a little boy." The little boy whose heart was too full for utterance, chewing a piece of licorice stick he had bought with a cent stolen from his good and pious aunt, with sobs plainly audible, and with great globules of water rolling down his cheeks, glided silently down the marble steps of the bank. Bending his noble form, the bank man dodged behind a door, for he thought the little boy was going to shy a stone at him. But the boy picked up some thing and stuck it in his poor but ragged jacket. "Come here, little boy;" said the little boy did come here; and the bank man said, "Lo, what picket thou up?" And he answered and replied, "A pin." And the bank man said, "Little boy, are you good?" and he said he was. And the bank man said, "How do you vote?—excuse me do you go to Sunday school?" and he said he did. Then the man took down a peck of pure gold and flowing with pure ink, and he wrote on a piece of paper, "St. Peter," and he asked the little boy what it stood for, and he said "Salt Peter." Then the bank man said it meant "Saint Peter." The little boy said "Oh!" Then the bank man took the little boy to his bosom, and the little boy said "Oh!" again, for he squeezed him. The bank man took the little boy into partnership, and gave him half the profits and all the capital, and he married the bank man's daughter, and now all he has is all his own, too

My uncle told me this story, and I spent six weeks picking up pins in front of a bank. I expected the bank man would call me in and say, "Little boy, are you good?" and I was going to say "Yes;" and when he asked me what "St. John" stood for, I was going to say "Salt John." But I guess the bank man wasn't anxious to have a partner, and I guess, the daughter was a son, for one day says he to me, "Little boy, what's that you're picking up?" says I, awful meekly, "Pins," says he, "Let's see 'em," and he took 'em, and I took off my cap, all ready to go in the bank and become a partner, and marry his daughter. But I didn't get any invitation; he said, "Those pins belong to the bank, and if I catch you hanging around here any more I'll set the dog on you!" Then I left, and the mean old cuss kept the pins. Such is life as I find it.—Mark Twain.

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some one feature of excellence or claim, some advantage in running or needles or feed or price—and many of them are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

IS THE GRAND ideal

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and crosscrews its advantages over all others combined.

It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England.

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases, for the Asthma, Coughs, Croup, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the cause of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of the FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SCULL HOOP, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scarching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

STONEWALL JACKSON.

In the autobiography of Joseph W. Revere, entitled "Keel and Saddle," and published by Osgood & Co., of Boston, a few pages are devoted to the late "Stonewall" Jackson. The first relates to a conversation with Jackson on a Mississippi steamer in the spring of 1852. Revere tells the story thus, and we give his narrative here with some doubts, but as perhaps worthy of consideration:

Among my fellow-passengers on the steamer was Lieutenant Thomas J. Jackson, of the United States Army, who seemed a remarkably quiet, reserved, although very intelligent officer, and with whom I soon became acquainted, for there is everywhere a sort of camaraderie among officers of the two services which attracts them to each other in a crowd of strangers. For days the inland voyage continued, and our nights were partly spent upon the hurricane deck of the steamer, engaged in conversation.

One of those conversations was so peculiar that it fixed itself upon my memory, and subsequent events proved it worthy of record although, I confess, I hesitate to put in writing anything which seems to border so nearly on the marvellous.

One clear, starlight night, as we glided along the calm river, our conversation turned upon the firmament and its countless orbs that looked down upon us, Jackson asked me if I had ever been induced to take a flight from the study of nautical astronomy, practiced by all the naval officers, into the realms of astrology. I replied that I had always been interested more or less in those mathematical studies required in nautical calculations; and that, from the exact rules demanded for working the various problems of the ephemeris, I had sometimes, to amuse the idle hours of a sea life, worked out the nativities of my shipmates. I had even taken Zadkiel's Almanac and used his rules, but without believing in the science of judicial astrology. Jackson, however, was not so incredulous, although it was evident that he had not then decided fully within himself as to the truth or falsehood of this exploded science.

"Why," said he, "should we be ridiculed for believing in this as in other occult sciences in this nineteenth century? Magnetism! magnetic somnambulism!—who shall say that the science of necrostation will not be made practically useful to mankind? Why should not the buoyant and elastic element surrounding our earth be made the vehicle of transportation from clime to clime for man and his increased necessities? I will go farther, and ask, Who can doubt but that it will eventually be so used like its twin-element upon which we are now afloat? The means of directing those forces which we know exist have not yet been discovered; but that does not prove that the air will not some day find its Fulton or its Watt. The imperfect vision of things often appears to the intelligence before the things themselves. The learned are free to confess their ignorance, but they should not elevate it into a principle. They may understand and explain an immense number of phenomena, but the causes of these often entirely escape them, or they are compelled to take them upon trust as insoluble mysteries. Ask these savans the why and the wherefore of the natural actions they investigate, and they assume a solemn air and refer you to the fabulous ages of science. It is much easier to deny any relation of spirits to matter than to demonstrate it.

If the illuminati of the middle ages have not made science at least we cannot deny they have made poetry. Sentiment led them into the sphere of illusion, it is true; but illusion is often the shadow of truth. Let it be remembered that Kepler was an astrologer. The mathematician Carden relates that the events of his life were announced to him through dreams, presentiments and apparitions, by his familiar genius and by the movements of the stars. These were strong-minded men. Even Napoleon believed in his destiny, and is said to have carried his belief in the supernatural further than his historians will admit. Those bright orbs above us are living creatres. Each one of them is animated by a certain intelligence gifted with forces, and they act directly upon our planet. Each ray of light falling to earth finds its destination in the animate world. Not a living being, not even a flower, but has its patron and guide on high in one of those orbs suspended in ether. Why should not this wonderful influence transmitted through space, this communion of souls as it may be called, this correspondence of the spheres, forming a universal bond of union, determine also the destinies of the beings they are known to influence? Whenever one of those worlds approaches another, does not each endeavor to draw the other within the sphere of its affection? And who in this day will deny the Newtonian theory?

To foretell events, to pierce the heavy mists that conceals from us the secrets of fate, is a universal longing felt in the hut of the savage as well as in the palaces of the great. So fierce and universal a desire must be one of nature's mysteries. She has already opened our eyes to so many it cannot be that she means to deceive us in this one.

If we do not read in the great book eternally open before us in the skies, as we have already done in that book the leaves of which are in the strata of the earth, 'tis because we have only learned to spell as yet in the alphabet of mystery."

Before we parted at Pittsburg, a day or two after this conversation, I had given Jackson the necessary data for calculating a horoscope, and in the course of a few months I received from him a letter, which I preserved, enclosing a scheme of my nativity. As any one who may have calculated these schemes by the rules must know, a horoscope may be interpreted in various, even contradictory, terms by different persons, and this was no exception to the rule. The only reason I had for remembering it at all was that our destinies seemed to run in parallel lines, and so far it was remarkable. It was this peculiarity that caused Jackson to communicate with me and the reason why I laid it carefully aside for a re-examination.

These several planets were placed in their respective houses above and below the horizon, and Saturn being near the meridian and approaching a square with the moon, great danger was to be apprehended by the native at the period when the aspect became complete. Mars also bore a threatening aspect, while Jupiter was below the horizon and semi-sextile, which was not altogether unfavorable. There was no trine, and the sextile was weak. Altogether, from the evil aspect of the square of Saturn, which threatened an opposition—that most dreaded of all the evil aspects of the heavens—the scheme was quite dangerous and malign.

The precise time and nature of the threatened danger, requiring a second calculation, accompanied the scheme, prognosticating the culmination of the malign aspect within some ten years, or during the first days of May, 1863, at which time the native ran great risk of life and fortunes; but, in case he survived that peril, the ominous period would never again recur.

In his letter Jackson says: "I have gone over these calculations several times, as their result is almost an exact reproduction of my own. . . . It is clear to me that we shall both be exposed to a common danger at the time indicated."

Having but little faith in the almost unpedated science of astrology, I took little heed of either his scheme of nativity or his letter, regarding the former as ingenious, but as merely a proof of an ardent and somewhat enthusiastic temperament, while I little imagined at that time that the rather unpolished and rugged exterior of Lieutenant Jackson concealed a character destined to become famous among his countrymen.

The second extract relates to the circumstances attending Jackson's death.

I served in the army until after the battle of Chancellorsville, participating in all its important engagements and the greater part of the time commanding a brigade. At the battle above named I was an involuntary witness of an event which had an important bearing on the issue of the war, and which has been a subject of prolonged controversy. I refer to the death of Stonewall Jackson. The circumstances under which I acquired the right to give testimony in the matter were somewhat remarkable, and I here give a full statement of them:

The left of my brigade line lay near the plank road at Chancellorsville, and after night fall I rode forward, according to my invariable habit, to inspect my picket line. The moon had risen and partially illuminated the woods. I began my inspection on the right of the picket line, progressing gradually to the left, where I stopped to rectify the post of a sentinel not far from the plank road. While thus engaged I heard the sound of hoofs from the direction of the enemy's line and paused to listen. Soon a cavalcade appeared, approaching us. The foremost horseman detached himself from the main body, which halted not far from us, and riding cautiously near seemed to pierce the gloom. He was so close to us that the soldier nearest me levelled his rifle for a shot at him; but I forbade him, as I did not wish to have our position revealed, and it would have been useless to kill the man, whom I judged to be a staff officer making a reconnoissance.

Having completed his observations, this person rejoined the group in his rear, and all returned at a gallop. The clatter of hoofs soon ceased to be audible, and the silence of the night was unbroken, save by the melancholy cries of the whip-poor-will, which we heard in one continued wail, like spirit voices, when the horizon was lighted up by a sudden flash in the direction of the enemy, succeeded by the well-known rattle of a volley of musketry from at least a battalion. A second volley quickly followed the first, and I heard cries in the same direction.

Fearing that some of our troops might be in that locality, and that there was danger of our firing upon friends, I left my orderly and rode toward the Confederate lines.

A riderless horse dashed past me towards our lines, and I raised up in presence of a group of several persons gathered around a man laying on the ground apparently badly wounded. I saw at once that these were Confederate officers, and visions of the Libby began to flit through my mind; but, reflecting that I was well armed and mounted, and that I had on the great-coat of a private soldier, such as was worn by both parties, I sat still, regarding the group in silence, but prepared to use either my spare or my sabre, as occasion might demand.

The silence was broken by one of the Confederates, who appeared to regard me with astonishment; then, speaking in a tone of authority, he ordered me to "ride up there and see what troops those were," indicating the rebel position. I instantly made a gesture of assent and rode slowly in the direction indicated until out of sight of the group, then made a circuit round it and returned within my own lines. Just as I recovered the challenge of our picket the notice of our artillery posted on the plank road began firing, and I could plainly hear the grape crashing through the trees near the spot occupied by the group of Confederate officers.

About a fortnight afterwards I saw a Richmond newspaper at the camp at Falmouth, in which were detailed the circumstances of the death of Stonewall Jackson. These left no doubt in my own mind that the person I had seen lying on the ground was that officer, and that his singular prediction, mentioned previously in these pages had been verified.

The following is an extract from the newspaper account:

"General Jackson, having gone some distance in front of his line on Saturday evening, was returning about eight o'clock, attended by his staff. The cavalcade was, in the darkness, mistaken for a body of the enemy's cavalry, and fired on by a regiment of his own corps."

Then, after detailing what took place after the General fell from his horse, the account proceeds:

"The Turnpike was utterly deserted, with the exception of Captains Wilbourn and Wynn; but, in the thinning of the thicket on the left, some person was observed by the side of the wood, sitting on his horse motionless and silent. The unknown individual was clad in a dark dress, which strongly resembled the Federal uniform; but it seemed impossible that he could have penetrated to that spot without being discovered, and what followed seemed to prove that he belonged to the Confederates. Captain Wilbourn directed him to ride up there and see what troops those were—the men who fired on Jackson—and the stranger rode slowly in the direction pointed out, but never returned with any answer. Who this silent personage was is left to posterity." etc.—Richmond Enquirer, May 12, 1863.

Jackson's death happened in strange coincidence with his horoscopic prediction made years before; but the coincidence was, I believe, merely fortuitous, and I mention it here only to show what mysterious "giving-out" we sometimes experience in life."

WASHINGTON, D. C., JAN. 25.

The weather charts and predictions issued by the War Department are becoming very popular and have proved of immense advantage to commerce by the cautionary signals raised at shipping points, giving notice of dangerous storms or winds. So accurate are these predictions found, after long testing, that the reading public regularly consult their morning papers to see what "Old Probabilities" has to say about the weather. The information sent from point to point of the advance of the ice freshets, have also been very beneficial on great navigable rivers. In looking over these weather charts it has been a matter of curiosity to notice how the cold waves have advanced over the country. Three days before the cold reaches the Atlantic coast, the thermometer at St. Paul and Duluth indicates a very low temperature. The cold wave, which in every instance has come down from the Northwest, seems to travel much more rapidly down the Mississippi valley, then eastward; and it is very much colder on the western shape of the Alleghanies than on the eastern.

The temperance question is growing upon the public attention, and numerous temperance organizations, open and secret, are in operation and making a decided impression on public attention. Low as is the state of public sentiment with you, it is infinitely in advance of the sentiment outside of New England, and as one travels south, general drinking becomes more common and the grocery where liquor is not sold is the exception in the rule. It is proposed by the police of this city to hold a ball in the Inauguration Ball Building, before it is taken down, the proceeds to form the nucleus of a fund for an Inebriate Asylum.

In the House, on Monday, two very extraordinary votes were passed; one to pay members who had obtained or retained seats after a contest, the expenses incurred in contesting; the other was to repeal the bankrupt law, which was passed under a suspension of the rules by a two-thirds vote. The three democratic members from New Hampshire voted for repeal, thereby exhibiting their sympathy and care for those in the irretrievable bondage of debt. Were they looking for increased law business when they leave Congress?

The Credit Mobilier keeps its hold on the public interest, and its developments branch out in all directions. Some of the cases are illustrative of the mistake made when a man is in a bad spot, that he does not own up instead of denying. The broad mantle of charity shelters the weak and erring when they confess, own up and try to amend; while evasion, denials, fabrications and the like beget entanglements which end in a loss of self respect, if not the respect of all others. It is a melancholy spectacle to see Patterson and Collax, Garfield and Allison, with heretofore honored names, plunging about wildly in such quagmires, and sinking deeper at every struggle. The significance of the prayer, never to be led in temptation, was never more apparent. When the people shall sternly resolve against jobs and subsidies, and against candidates for office who propose to buy their way in, then, and only then, will such scandals be heard of no more.

The Kansas Senatorial investigation shows the wholesale purchase of the legislature at $1000 a head when Caldwell was elected, while rival candidates were paid all their expenses and a much larger sum. Caldwell must be sent home in disgrace by the votes of men who stand in similar positions to some extent, or have endeavored to. The Senator just elected from Nevada has bought his way in, and so has the Senator from South Carolina. I trust, in view of these cases of staggering corruption, the people of New Hampshire will never allow the proposed constitutional convention, if it should be held, to reduce the House below 250 members, and that they will cause the State Senate to be increased until there is one senator for every five representatives. Large legislative bodies may be cumbersome, but they are less liable to become venal and corrupt, and it is much easier to ferret out and expose bad transactions in a large body than in a small one. The agents must be so numerous that some of them will be leaky, and there are twenty chances to defeat corruption in a large body to one in a small body. And while on the subject, I will add that in any event of change, have the single ticket system carried in all practicable cases.

The internal improvement schemes will be considerably discussed, but without result at this session. But little more will be done from present appearances, than to pass regular appropriation bills. Possibly the salaries of the old Bureau officers may be increased as recommended by the Finance committee of the Senate, as the increase recommended is far below that fixed for officers of the same grade which have been created since the war.

The franking privilege will probably be abolished. The idea that it will save much is a mistake. It will increase the Post-office revenues to the extent it is abused on letters, which would be a very small sum. It will diminish the printing of documents sent out to the people and save much more in that item than any where else. When that question was once under discussion, I heard an ex-Postmaster General declare that it would not save $25,000 a year in the transportation of the mails. I have no doubt his estimate is much nearer the truth than the estimates and statements of which we have heard so much. The civil service and franking privilege talk is largely made up of humbug and entire ignorance of facts and knowledge of their practical operations.

The amendment to the bill of the House, to increase the number of the new war vessels to be built, from six to ten, passed the Senate under the judicious management of Senator Cragin, who had it in charge.

The syndicate will be used again in funding the five per cent. bonds, as before, since the Ways and Means committee endorse it. It costs as little as any effective measure which could be devised. It gives three months' interest on the new bonds and one-half of one per cent. on the cost of the exchange. Perhaps it would be as plain to say the syndicate took the new bonds at 98 1-4 in exchange for six per cent. bonds at par, and are to get what advantage they can from deposits where the exchange was being effected.

Numerous aspirants are trying to combine for the offices of the new House of Representatives. The old officers are popular and have held their places a long time. I think N. G. Ordway has been sergeant-at-arms longer than his predecessors, and he still holds his popularity with the old members. The Board of Public Works will do their best to beat him. They are a great power from their social position and wealth, and few men would have had the pluck and perseverance to expose them, when they were spending $5,000,000 a year and have a retinue of employes almost without number and with the support of every paper in the city subsidized to aid them. Think of $147,000 paid in seven months to newspapers for advertising! Some of the advertising bills would have bought the newspaper establishments outright, presses, types and all! Their friends are now running about and Rings are not as popular as they were, or I should say Mr. Ordway would be certain of defeat. If he is again a candidate, he will be hard to beat. The old members all like him though many of them may be obliged to support candidates from their own States or section. His office has been a regular bank, with a clerk as cashier, where members of the House deposit their pay and other funds they may have; and it is paid out on checks as they want it, or by obtaining for them drafts, to be sent wherever needed. His accommodation and attentions have made him popular and strong with the old members, and no ordinary man will succeed against him, notwithstanding the long time he has been in office. X E.

Gen. Hawley of Connecticut has shown by his recent letter, urging his friends not to revenge his defeat for Senator, that he is a "gentleman in politics."

We shall give the additional names received by the committee, with the addresses, monthly. Persons receiving circulars from the committee are requested to respond if they intend visiting Portsmouth on the 4th.

The Reunion.

The general committee having charge of the proposed celebration of the 250th anniversary of the settlement of Portsmouth and the 20th anniversary of the return of the Sons, next Fourth of July, had an enthusiastic meeting, Monday evening. The committee empowered to negotiate for the Rundlett field reported though its chairman, Mr. William R. Boardman, that it could not be obtained. The subject was recommitted for the purpose of securing some suitable place for the location of a tent. After the election of Wm. H. Sise, Esq., for Chief Marshal, the vote limiting the committee to seventy in number was rescinded and it was voted to increase the number to one hundred. A vacancy having occurred in the general committee, Mr. J. Horace Kent was chosen to fill it. The following named gentlemen were then added to the committee.

Thomas Tredick, jr., Thomas Neil, George E. Hanson, Dr. James R. May, J. Albert Walker, Dr. A. P. Stevens, Wm. B. Lowd, Gershom F. Melcher, Dr. John W. Parsons, Wm. C. Ham, Dr. Brainard Dearborn, John Pender, Hiram B. Lord, Hiram C. Locke, Wm. A. Vaughan, jr., James S. Peirce, James E. Dennett, Daniel E. Leavitt, Edward P. Marden, Howard M. Messer, William L. Dwight, John Sise, John J. Pickering, Oliver S. Loomis, Lewis W. Brewster, Calvin Page, Samuel H. Goodall, Dr. E. B. Goodall, Josheph C. Perkins, Charles B. Parker.

The committee on invitations held a brief session, during which Messrs. Daniel J. Vaughan, Augustus W. Odiorne and John E. Colcord were added to the committee, and Mr. Gardner M. Goodrich was chosen an addtional secretary.

Adjourned to next Monday evening at 7.30.

Revenue Pay.

Mr. Henry S. Vanderbilt, of the Treasury Department, has sent us the Treasury Register, containing a list of salaries, &c. For the district of Portsmouth we find that the Collector received $1248, 22; Surveyor, $438,68; Deputy Collector and Inspector $1460; Weigher, Gauger and Measurer, $1500; Inspectors, (two) $1460 each; Janitor, $500; Inspector at Dover, $250; at Newcastle, $650; at Colebrook $1460. Total expense in the State, $10,426.90. For the district of York, Me., the Collector's salary is $250; Inspector $100. Two Portsmouth men in the Boston custom house receive $4 per diem each.

The Wallace Sisters.

Our citizens have the opportunity of attending a first class entertainment this evening, and the Agent assures us that it will be genuine burlesque without the indecencies which have heretofore made such performances unpopular. The programme of the opening evening is in the parlance of the day, "immense." The famous Clodoche troupe are with the company, (which consists of thirty-one members,) and their wonderful funny saltations are well worth the admission price. The burlesque bell ringers and Prof. Henry's cornet playing will be very enjoyable.

Before the burlesque, the comedy, "The Village Maid," will be produced, "Aladdin, The Wonderful Scamp" being the closing piece. In both, the Wallace Sisters take part. Of their performances, under the care of their mother, our exchanges speak in glowing terms. The eldest, Jennie Wallace, is eighteen years of age. Her banjo solos, which she introduced in the burlesques, are always received with encores. Miss Minnie Wallace is fifteen years of age; Maud is thirteen. Throughout the entire West the theatres have invariably proved too small to accommodate those who congregate to see these little artistes.

A Query.

Messrs Editors:—Being a tax payer, I wish to enquire if Railroad companies have the right, after illegally entering a man's premises to build their road, (the City furnishing a large part of the funds,) to grossly insult a gentleman through their counsel if he happens not to agree to be robbed of his property without an appeal to proper authorities.

P. L.

Laconics.

Charles W. Gardner, Esq., of this city, delivered the closing lecture of the lyceum course in North Hampton, on Tuesday evening; subject, "The Sum of Virtues."

The proposed lecture before the Kittery lyceum, Monday evening, was postponed on account of the weather, to Monday evening next, Feb. 3d, when it will be delivered "rain or shine"

Dr. O. Fitzgerald, the clairvoyant physician and surgeon, is at the Franklin House, Room 4, and will remain until Friday evening. He undertakes no cases that he cannot cure.

The Drum and Flute Corps will meet this (Wednesday) evening at 8 1-2 o'clock.

A horse belonging to Mr. Henry L. Garrett tried his hand — or legs — at running away, Tuesday, but was stopped by the toll-gate at Portsmouth bridge. There have been more barnless runaways this winter than we ever knew before, averaging two or three a day.

SIGNIFICANT VOTES.—Three votes of more than usual significance were taken in the House on Monday. The first was that on the proposition of the district board of public works, looking to the assumption by Congress of a liberal portion of the debt which they have lately imposed on the district, which was defeated by a much more decisive and emphatic vote than the opponents of the board and its policy have ever before been able to command, indicating that this Congress will make no further appropriation for its relief. Next came the attempt of the southern members to obtain a vote of instruction to the ways and means committee to do what they are certain not to do except under explicit orders, —namely, report a bill refunding the cotton tax of fifty or sixty million dollars. Having shown something of its temper by these two votes, the House next took up General Farnsworth's motion to concur in the Senate amendments to the bill repealing the franking privilege, and agreed to them by a majority which was a surprise to every one. Forty-eight members only voted to retain the privilege, and 143, or many more than the necessary two-thirds, to dispense entirely with it. As would naturally be expected, nearly all the members whose terms expire on the 4th of next March, voted for the repeal, only sixteen of those who retire at that time voting to continue the privilege to their successors.

State News.

Charles Grey had his right arm caught in the picker at the Belknap mills, at Laconia, Monday morning, and it was torn off just below the elbow.

The bondsmen of the defaulting cashier of the Exeter Savings Bank, Shute, are John J. Bell, William B. Morrill, William P. Moulton, Stephen W. Dearborn, Joseph C. Hilliard, Nathaniel Gordon, Edmund Elliott, W. W. Stickney, George D. Wentworth.

That best of good men, John M. Hill, Esq., of Concord, who has served many years as Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, has declined further service in that capacity.

Morning Chronicle.

BERWICK.—Isaiah Earl, a watchman at the Newichawannick Company's woolen mill, South Berwick, was found dead Sunday morning, lying on his face in the weaving room entry, shot through the heart. From his position it is supposed he fell while trying to reach the bell-rope to sound an alarm. His lantern was on the window sill, near a broken pane of glass, and his pistol with one barrel discharged, on the cover of the elevator in the weaving room. He had driven two pins in the watchman's watch, and was cold and stiff, showing that he was shot soon after relieving the other watchman. Coroner Marshall was summoned and the verdict was accidental death. Deceased was fifty-six years old, has been in the employ of the Company many years, and leaves a wife and seven children.

The meat store of Wm. F. Libbey, on the Berwick side, was entered by thieves, Sunday night, and the contents of the money drawer taken. An attempt was also made to break into the adjoining grocery store of A. K. Downs, but the burglars were unsuccessful. It is supposed the burglars must have been an organized gang, as recently frequent robberies have been committed.

Dr. Levi Brooks, a Claremont druggist, committed suicide about noon, on Sunday, by taking strychnine mixed with morphine. Mr. Brooks was a noted chemist and a worthy citizen. He was forty-six years old, and leaves a wife, three sons and three daughters.

The Singer

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or noiseless or feed or price; well many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the world-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

IS THE

OLDEST

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model. Just two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all others combined.

Its readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and lighter to run than any other; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the canon of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL give speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of the FAMILY REMEDY prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong medicinal agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lopuline, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a world celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an approving public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the sorest Insteps, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

Mr. Maynard's Hired Man.

"Hickory, dickory, dock:
The mouse ran up the clock;
The clock struck one,
And down he run;
Hickory——"

"Oh, my good gracious! how dare you?" Fanny laid the pink bundle down in a rocking chair full of pillows. The bundle protested with a vigorous movements and in another moment the rocking chair and the baby came down together.

"Now, you awful man, the child is sick!" cried Fanny with a scared look, as she lifted the they morsel from the floor; but the pillows had protected it, and the startled baby, after the effort at curling her lips, broke into a charming smile.

"No harm done; and I trust I am forgiven," said Matthew Donn.

"No, you are not forgiven. I shall never forgive you, Mr. Matthew Donn; so please leave baby and me. I have nothing more to say."

"Well, I—I'm going."

"You can go, sir."

The young man went softly, slowly out; but he looked neither grieved nor angry; on the other side of the door he smiled.

The circumstances are these:

Fanny had been amusing her sister's child, and the little cherub seemed never to tire of musical sounds; so Fanny, who had "Mother Goose" at heart, liked nothing better than to sit in the cosy sitting room, which was really in the nursery, and sing these old, old melodies.

Matthew Doon was the hired man, and on this particular morning had stolen in quietly behind Miss Fanny, and tempted of—what? surely not of the Evil One—had bent over and kissed her on the forehead.

And this he had dared to do; knowing that Fanny was a city young lady, living in a fashionable quarter, and used to the best society.

Fanny's sister had married a rich farmer not quite two years before. People talked of these Brysons burying themselves alive; but both Olive and Fanny loved the country better than the town. Every summer Fanny was glad to leave the "suffy old house," as she called it, and almost by one leap find herself in paradise, breathing air redolent of white clover and sweet briar. During the winter the sister's corresponded regularly: and Olive had sung the praises of Matthew Donn, their hired man, so often that Fanny found herself thinking of his acquaintance as one of the pleasant probabilities of her next visit.

"We don't intend to treat him as help," wrote Olive, holding her baby on one knee and steadying the paper with a bronze weight; "for he is not in the least like the men in these parts. I should be ashamed not to ask him to come to the table; and just for the novelty of it, I want you to peep into his room. Harry calls him rara avis; and the two really enjoy themselves together almost like brothers; he is nearly as handsome as my Harry; he, you know, is the handsomest man in the world!"

And the pleasant pen ran on and told about planting, the prospective sweet corn, and pea blossoms, and how the grape vines were full of tiniest branches, and the young peach trees were going to do splendidly; and Adela had two cunning milk-white teeth, and I know not how much more loving nonsense.

Now Fanny had a rich lover, and, like most such lovers, he was not prepossessing in his personal appearance. In her own written language to Olive, he pestered her to death. To be sure it was pleasant to see his splendid equipage in front of their door, with the two superb grays, for on rare occasions Fanny yielded to his solicitations to take a ride; and he always managed to drive her by his castle of a brown stone front, to tempt her; for Fanny was as fond of beautiful things as women ought to be, and was aware of the advantage which money can give.

Both her father and mother were anxious she should marry the Hon. Ebenezer Wolcott, but Fanny was high spirited and they seldom advised her. The girl knew that they were living beyond their means for her sake, and this knowledge had been bitterly earned. She and Olive had many conferences over it.

"I think if you were married," said Olive, "papa would come here and take a small house; then business need not press him so in his old age."

Ebenezer had done the proper things—had offered Fanny his heart, his house, his carriage and his horses, and although he was known for a pugnacious old gentleman, terribly set in his way, he was honorable, and he loved beautiful Fanny Bryson with all his heart. And Fanny had told him that she could not then decide—that she was going for the summer months to sister Olive's—at the close of her visit she would give him an answer.

"And may I come out there sometimes?" asked Eben.

Fancy gave a reluctant consent, and wished with all her heart that she had refused him; so, with the understanding that he was to call as a friend, the two parted.

At the depot Fanny found her sister's carriage in waiting, and was accosted by the handsomest as well as the tallest man she had ever seen. Six feet high, and proportionately majestic, he seemed like Apollo and Hercules in one.

"Can this be the hired man?" thought Fanny; and then looked at his dress. Not a trace of servitude about him; but he treated her with the utmost deference, said but little, drove with the precision of a man accustomed to horses and drew up before the cottage in grand style.

Fanny was in her sister's arms, and after her, the baby came in for a fair share of kisses.

"Well, is that your hired man?" queried Fanny, after her comfortable insalment in one of the luxurious easy-chairs.

"Yes, dear; that is Matthew Donn. How do you like him?"

"He looks like a gentleman," said Fanny after a little pause.

"He is a gentleman, dear, in the best sense of the word; I told you that."

"And does he speak English well?"

"Why, child, he isn't a foreigner," laughed Olive.

"I mean grammatically," said Fanny.

"Oh, yes, I presume he has a common school education," replied Olive, "and something better. I know there are certain classical books in his room; whether he ever reads them or not I can't say."

"Why in the world does he hire out;" cried Fanny, with dismay in her voice.

"Why shouldn't he?" asked Olive, laughing heartily again. "He likes the country, is used to horses, and—and I suppose he can't get anything better to do."

"But a man like him might—be somebody!" ejaculated Fanny, with vehemence. "My patience! has he no ambition. I'm afraid I shall despise him."

"Perhaps, dear, he wouldn't mind if you did," said Olive, hiding her face in the white neck of her baby. "He is so very independent."

Surely, why should he care what she thought of him? soliloquized Fanny, her cheeks flushing.

The next day she met him at the table. It seemed strange enough to sit down with hired help, but she was forced to confess that in nothing did he give the impression of being a menial.

"Shall we take hold of that five acre lot this morning?" he asked, respectfully, of Mr. Maynard, Olive's husband.

"No; I prefer you should look to the drainage of that patch east of the hill," was the answer. "There'll be no rain yet awhile, and I want to prepare that land for potatoes."

Fanny watched Matthew Donn out on the sly, and Olive caught her at it.

"I want to see what kind of a dress he works in," said Fanny with tell-tale cheeks.

"Don't you think him a little handsome in his blouse and heavy field boots?" asked Olive.

"He is certainly very handsome," said Fanny, frankly; "but why in the world—however," she said, stopping short, "it's none of my business; but such a man as that should surely work his own land."

"That's true," said Olive quietly.

Time passed on. Fanny became accustomed to eat, sit, and even talk with the hired man. One day Olive took her up into his room. Fanny stood aghast. It was exquisite in its way as a lady's boudoir.

"He furnished it himself," said Olive, in reply to Fanny's look of surprise.

"A Wilton carpet," murmured Fanny; "marble-top set; that Psyche! those—those flowers!—and what is this?"

She lifted a lovely little mi[illegible] from the table,—one of the m[illegible]tiful and refined faces she h[illegible] seen.

"Oh, one of his friends, I su[illegible]" said Olive, in her undemonstrati[illegible]

"And see how perfectly neat eve[illegible] is kept: always in this beautiful [illegible] Do you wonder Harry calls him [illegible] avis?"

"Indeed, I cannot," said Fa[illegible] slowly, "but he must spend every cent he earns to furnish himself in this extraordinary manner."

"He has nothing else to do with his money, dear," said Olive; "he don't even buy cigars. For my part, I think he is perfectly elegant."

Fanny said nothing, but she found herself wishing that she knew who was the original of that lovely miniature, and trying to reconcile the tastes and surroundings of the man himself with his servile occupation. Not but what the work was good enough, and honorable for any man; but why wasn't he laboring for himself instead of another?

For days she thought of the miniature. Every time she met him, heard him talk or sing—he had a fine voice, and was not averse to using it—up popped the mysterious face with the Spanish eyes and the clustering curls.

Mr. Eben Wolcott, meantime, had taken advantage of her reluctant permission and brought his dashing team to Winnicut. Poor Fanny, at sight of his respectable aldermanic person, his gold-bowed spectacles, and thick grey whiskers, felt a strange sinking at the heart. Why would that six-footer rise up in her imagination and cause by mere force of contrast a repulsion so terrible?

"It's positively wicked for men to seem to encourage that man," she said, almost passionately, one morning, the day after a drive.

"Which man?" asked Olive, innocently, and their eyes met.

The red blood flew all over poor Fanny's face; she felt hot to the crown of her head—and yet why should she?

"That's a pretty question to ask!" she exclaimed, nearly angry;

"Well, dear, but how am I to know who 'that man' is?" queried Olive, with a conscious look.

"You know it is Mr. Wolcott," said Fanny, nearly crying;

"Well, he is a good man, and a rich one," was the answer. "I know girls who would jump at the chance; as the saying is I would either marry him or cast him off."

"Pshaw!" said Fanny, biting her red lips, and a few moments after she left the room conscious of a new, a painful, and at the same time strangely delightful experience. No use to try to conceal it to herself—not the slightest. She loved Matthew Donn, her sister's betrothed.

How she passed the room half distracted, sobbing without tears, forming wild resolves, and then throwing herself down with a sense of her utter helplessness, I shall not describe. How could she ever meet him again? Could she keep her almost painful secret, and did Olive guess at it? What would Olive think—counsel her if she knew?

Only the next time that Mr. Enos Wolcott came out she quietly dismissed him, and then made up her mind that she must go home. If she could only fly to the ends of the earth.

But Fanny did not go, for Olive would not hear of it. A slight cold confined Olive to her room, but one evening she sent Fanny out and bade her peremptorily to take Harry and go for a walk. Then she summoned her husband to give him his orders, but when he came down stairs Fanny was gone, and Matthew, with a wicked little smile, was taking down his hat.

"That's right, Donn," said Harry, breaking into a laugh; "she ought to know better than to be alone. By the way I happen to know that she has dismissed that old alderman."

Donn smiled again and went out, closing the door behind him. There was a bright moon, displaying flower, leaf, and bud. Supposing that Fanny would only make the round of the place, he ran swiftly down to the back gate, and met her just as she had reached the great elm that stood guarding the lane.

She started at sight of him.

"You will allow me to walk with you?" he said. "There is a squad in this neighborhood, and some one might molest you."

Fanny could not say no; could not talk, even, for with ready tact he took all the conversation on himself. What did he not touch? Opera, art, nature, city, country—all derived new beauty from the glamour of his tongue. Was it strange that Fanny found herself leaning on his arm and listening with rapt attention to the eloquence of his speech? From that time there was a certain tacit understanding between them and all went smoothly till the morning he kissed her. For that Fanny was angry at herself but she was angrier with him. All day long she was full of moods, changing from grave to gay, from of reflection to the wildest merriment.

"Fanny," said Harry, coming up to his wife's room after tea, "Mr. Donn wishes to speak with you, down stairs."

All the lovely color faded out of her face at this announcement. She longed to assert herself; but might they not read the truth in her eyes if she refused?

Slowly she went down stairs.

Donn was in the parlor, walking back and forth. He came to meet her with outstretched hands.

"I want you to forgive my rudeness of this morning," he said, "in my assumed character I had no right to take such a liberty, or in my own."

"Your assumed character!" she exclaimed, trembling as she sat down.

"Yes. My friend Harry met me a year ago, when we were both travel-

"My real name is Don Mathews," he added, smiling, "and there is no need of my working for a living; but I really think I shall go into partnership with my friend Harry and turn farmer. But you have not told me whether you forgive me."

"I—I don't know," retorted Fanny, half laughing, half crying.

"Fanny, Fanny, if you knew how I love you," he cried, suddenly stopping in front of her, "I do think you would."

"I—I am so glad."

It was not polite, perhaps, this confession, but it was very natural.

"And I think I can match your alderman's house," he added, taking her hands in his; "dear, dear Fanny."

"And his horses," laughed Fanny, looking up with beaming eyes.

"Yes, dearest, and perhaps—himself" and the ringing laugh, united, resounded through the house.

Of course Harry—who had an inkling—and Olive came down stairs, and of course everybody was happy over it.

"Harry," said Don, after a moment, "I think I am cured."

New York Correspondence.

Father Streeter in Portsmouth—The verdicts of Stokes and Foster—Tweed Jury—Possible Future of "the Ring"—Portsmouth Democrats.

My Dear Chronicle:—I am induced, very much under protest, however, to have another talk with you. When this correspondent shall arrive in Portsmouth on the morning of the 4th of July, 73, he advises the compositor having in charge his previous letter, if he "still lives," to do one of any number of things that shall make sure his personal safety. Among many of his mis-spellings, he makes pastor read parlor; and I am reminded of the story of old Father Streeter, whom many of the Universalists remember, when he preached in that delightful church (before its alteration). He told of an evangelical brother who when making pastoral calls unfortunately aired to be ushered to the dining room or kitchen, with a "single eye" to the good things therein. Meeting him one day, Father Streeter enquired for his health, and he replied that he "was not quite well; his dream of the previous night had troubled him greatly." Narrating his dream in firstlys and secondlys, it was, in substance, that he had dreamed of being in Heaven, and "saw men and women of all denominations there but the Universalist." Father Streeter, with a manner none ever forgot who have seen it, said, "The ruling passion, my brother, the ruling passion! You should have gone into the parlor!" The venerable old father would, if living, be a happy visitor at the jubilee, to himself and his people. Will the Invitation Committee forgive, in this connection, a single suggestion, namely:—To invite, with especial efforts to secure attendance, every living clergyman ever settled in Portsmouth. It would certainly prove a pleasant feature, and would serve to keep the Boston and other delegations upon their good behavior:—New Yorkers all right.

Our city is rarely without some generally exciting topics. Credit Mobilier is getting tedious. The Tilton-Beecher scandal is being badly managed—silence is not assent, nor is self-denial; and the public believe it has a right to either one or the other. There is an unhealthy agitation, of the usual spasmodic character, and nursed by the city press, upon the frequency of murders. The path out of it all seems to us very clear. Abolish the unchristian death penalty; take away all power to pardon except from Courts; make all taking of life punishable with imprisonment for life; change essentially the jury system; abolish the elective judiciary; declare and enforce punishment as a remedy, not a vengeance; make education imperative.

The results in the cases of Foster and Stokes do not satisfy the fair and thinking portion of the community. Of Foster, it is not believed, nor is it proven, that he intended the killing of his victim; but that it was an unfortunate blow by an intoxicated man in a wrangle in which all parties were at fault. Yet Judge Ingraham renders what seems a monstrous opinion, namely, that a second of time is sufficient to establish a premeditation that will constitute murder. Foster's conviction and hanging are only in answer to the demand of a maddened public opinion. Of Stokes, this is equally true; and, such trials and verdicts in obedience to such behests, and in violation of the spirit of the law, are, in our judgment, a greater crime against public weal, than murder itself.

I believe it to be thoroughly established that the empanelling of a jury for the trial of capital cases, under the present system, is absolutely impossible; that, to be a competent juror in any case that has in any degree occupied the public mind, is to be either a knave or a fool. Take a single glance at the personnel of the "Tweed Jury," and then realize that such men are to try a case involving directly six millions, and indirectly scores of millions; involving the most complicated questions of municipal finance; to settle upon testimony, and decide an issue after perhaps months of jangling, distortions and bewilderment of eleven lawyers. Now, if it were practicable, let this man Tweed and his confederates be tried by the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, the Corn Exchange, or any other reputable business body, and would there be any doubt as to their verdict, or the destiny of these precious villains? But should they go unpunished for the reason of the employment of vast monies, the community has great occasion for thankfulness and greater occasion for an untiring vigilance in the reform that has taken the hands of these men from off the treasury of the city. However fabulous may seem the gigantic frauds already proven, those that were in contemplation were as the ocean to the river, and in which the startling impudence and bold audacity seems almost equal to the crime. There were schemes that needed only legislation, and it is not forgotten that Tammany owned the legislature that would have enabled them to have robbed the city of over an half hundred millions. I am aware that it is quite as easy to write large as small figures; but mark the following: The Central Park contains 900 acres, and has a boundary of six and one-quarter miles. Run a line 200 feet inside of this boundary and parallel with it; divide it into house-lots and estimate their value at the enormous rates at which they would be held. Bear in mind that these men did no accounting to the city; they were the city. Tweed, who now sits supplicant at a court of justice, did, in the days of the infamous "Ring," by a single beck, determine court decisions; did assess and abate taxes at his pleasures; collect and disburse money with heed to no one, and was as thoroughly a despot as ever cursed a tax-ridden community. Already were avenues widened, the lower Parks stripped of everything like verdure, new streets cut and all for the single purpose of making possible and profitable a half-dozen street railway franchises. There was no dearth of projects for getting money, and it was rarely spent but to get again.

Nor is it fair to charge this high-handed scoundrelism or any support of it upon the democratic party: for we "Sons" know that to us boys democratic mea meant honor and trust; meant conscience and conviction; that the illustrious names of Woodbury, Manning, Gardner, Laighton, Greenleaf, Bennett, Jenness and many others, were the synonyms of a lofty patriotism and a true manhood. G.

Credit Mobilier.

Vice President Colfax appeared again before Judge Poland's committee of investigation on Tuesday. A receipt for $1200 in Mr. Colfax's handwriting was found among the papers of the sergeant-at-arms. Mr. Colfax, however, denies that it was received from Mr. Ames and telegraphed to a friend from whom he received money at that time, to come on and testify.

The general verdict upon the case of Senator Logan is that he occupied about the most enviable place of all those who actually had stock carried for them, as he never received a single cent of advantage from the transactios. Within a few days after receiving a check for $329, the first surplus due him after the par value of the stock and interest upon it were paid, he returned the money, and was so careful about it as to calculate the interest on it for the few days he had the question of accepting it under advisement, and repaying even this small sum to Mr. Ames. His reason for repaying was not derived from a knowledge of the McComb suit, but because of information a friend gave him of the character of the contracts from which the dividends came.

At the investigation on Wednesday, a check for $1800, payable to J. W. Patterson and signed by Oakes Ames, was exhibited, and Ames said the amount was a cash dividend on Credit Mobilier stock. Ames then was asked if he had another receipt from Patterson and he produced the following:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14, 1866.

Received of Oakes Ames $2328 for three bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad Co., sold for me, being dividend of 80 per cent. in bonds on stock of Credit Mobilier of America, held by him as trustee on my account.

The Shute Defalcation.

An Exeter dispatch to the Boston Advertiser says that the bank commissioners completed the investigation of the Exeter Savings Bank, and find a defalcation exceeding $120,000. The bond of the savings bank is for $35,000. It has been kept in a private box in the bank vault, but upon examination it was not to be found. It is thought that Shute must have destroyed it. The examination of the national bank is not completed, and the directors do not feel authorized to name any sum as the probable deficit, though it will exceed the sum previously given—$40,000. Director Chas. G. Conner went to New York, Saturday last, to confer with the detectives there. He returned feeling quite confident of favorable results from his trip.

We have examined into the condition of the Exeter Savings Bank, and find that by its books the amount of deposits is $491,817 20, and its surplus $12,064 83, making a total of $413,881.-03. We find property to the amount of $293,299 27, making the amount abstracted $120,631 76. The bank can pay about 73 per cent. on its deposits with its own property, and about eight and seven-tenths per cent. additional upon the payment of the Treasurer's bond of $35,000, making a total of about 81 7-10 per cent. In the above estimate all the stocks are reckoned at par value. No account is made of items of interest due the bank upon its notes, which would perhaps amount to $1000 or $1200. The investments of the bank are excellent. Every note and security is believed to be entirely good. All concerned in is management, save its defaulting treasurer, are men of character and ability, and up to the time of his leaving the treasurer ever had the entire confidence of the community.

CENTAUR.

At midnight on his wooded hills,
he Centaur lay dreaming of the hour,
When mankind, cured of aching ills,
Should know his all-healing power.

Nor long he waited. The blind could see,—
Straightened were limbs by pain long bent,
Cripples ran, and the lame on bended knee
Gave thanks for the Centaur Liniment.

The Centaur Liniment is the greatest pain-reliever the world has ever seen. Rheumatism, whether inflammatory, sciatic or nervous, is made to disappear. Swellings cease to pain, wounds are healed, burns are cured without a scar, and stings and bites are rendered harmless.

Mrs. R. Prowell, 492 Atlantic St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have had the rheumatism for ten years. I have tried everything. The Centaur Liniment is the only thing that does me good."

Mr. Chas. Hill, 616 Pine St., Philadelphia, writes: "That two bottles of Centaur Liniment has cured a most severe sprain of his ankle."

J. H. Martin of 533 Seventh Avenue, N. Y., says: "The Centaur Liniment has cured me of a terrible case of inflammatory rheumatism and cannot be too highly recommended."

59 BROADWAY, N. Y., Aug. 21st, 1872.

"All horse owners should have the Centaur Liniment. We used it in our stables and find it the best thing ever adopted."

H. MARSH,
Supt. Adams Express Co. Stables."

Such testimonials can be repeated indefinitely. Try it once. We will warrant it every time. Sold by all Druggists.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Lacontes.

The many friends of Mr. Samuel M. DeMerritt will be pleased to learn that a letter received in this city from him states that he is recovering his health. His former pupils and host of friends will be glad to learn of his convalescence.

By an advertisement elsewhere it will be seen that Dr. J. E. Strong has returned to this city, and having secured rooms at the corner of State and Pleasant streets, is prepared to administer the Sulphur Bath. We know Dr. Strong to be a reliable man and his baths to be efficacious. He informs us that a bath is a preventive of small-pox, and we are inclined to believe his statement to be correct

Commander George Dewey has been ordered to the command of U. S. S. Narragansett.

Skiff and Gaylord's Minstrels are coming Feb. 13th.

J. C. Tiffany & Son have secured the contract for lighting the Navy Yard with gas, and will put in their new Olefiant patent, at a cost of $20,000.

Feminine knee vaccination is becoming popular and the poor physicians are becoming wealthy.

Mr. Albert Clark of Eliot discovered the recent incendiary fire in the Wendell block. The room where the fire was set was being fixed up for Timothy Chellis, and it is said that certain persons have threatened that he shall never occupy it.

The lecture by Dr. A. P. Stevens on Tuesday evening was listened to by a large and discriminating audience, who were well repaid for their attendance. The lecture showed much research and before its close the hearers were put in possession of the main facts which are of public record of the humaritarian efforts of Bergh and Angell, the famed duo of the new dispensation, interpersed with trite sayings from the abundance which the lecturer always has at command.

On Wednesday Dennis Meade was charged before Judge Page with breaking glass in the Franklin House, was fined $10 and costs, appealed, and was bound over to answer at a higher court.

While Prof. Henry's band was passing Congress Block, Wednesday afternoon, a horse hitched to a post became frightened and began winding himself around the post, kicking the sleigh as he found he could go no further. Mr. David Marshall and the owner of the sleigh rushed to the rescue and the horse was soon released from his entanglement by backing him around the way he had advanced.

A new case of small pox was discovered on Tuesday, that of Mr. John Grogan, Market Street, manufacturer of pop beer. He caught it from the Rice family, one of whom, when he thought he had the chicken pox, went about town showing his "break-out."

Mr. G. T. Ingraham, Jr., of this city, has contracted with Hon. Frank Jones for supplying 40,000 railroad ties for the Portsmouth & Dover R. R., to be delivered in May. Messrs J. R. Holmes of this city and Frank G. Arey, of Brewer, Me., are to furnish and build the fence between Dover and Portsmouth—6500 rods.

The Wallace Sisters.

The second and closing entertainment advertised for this evening will draw a crowd. The Wallace Sisters and their associates have established themselves as favorites. Last night's programme was replete with good things and that of this evening is still more attractive. Minnie and Maud Wallace are particularly pleasing in their clog exercises, and Jennie excels in her burlesque characters and banjo solos. The costumes are "gorgeous" —to use the words of the bill. "The Wrong Man," a farce, and the famous burlesque, "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," are the chief attractions of the evening. In the latter, Jennie, as "Earl Darnley," Minnie, as "Lady Constance," and Maud as "De Boissy," appear with the "German Band," and Sydney Smith as "Bluff King Hal," J. B. Buckley doing "Francis I." The irresistibly funny Clodoche troupe are interspersed among the good things of the evening. The Isle of Wight scene between "Francis" and "Hal" is looked for with interest by the lovers of the ludicrous. The appearance of the "untamed steeds" will be hailed with delight. Go, and take your wives and children.

A NOVEL MARRIAGE BOND.—A suit has just been tried before the Supreme Judicial Court of New Hampshire, in which Dr. Edward Sharp of Philadelphia was plaintiff, and Reuben B. Hall of Nashua, defendant. The Doctor was married to Miss Hall at Philadelphia in September, 1870, and Mr. and Mrs. Hall, the parents of the bride, were present at the ceremony, which took place at the residence of Washington Baldwin of Philadelphia. About an hour before the marriage, Mr. Hall, the father of the bride, signed a bond agreeing to pay his daughter during her life $1,200 annually, or the interest on $30,000. Mr. Hall, after the marriage, refused to fulfill the conditions of the bond, and this suit was brought to compel him to do so. The defendant claimed that the bond was obtained by fraud. He testified that on the morning of the marriage his daughter told him that Dr. Sharp would not marry her if a marriage gift of $20,000 was not made to her, and that she would consequently be ruined, as she was pregnant by him. It turned out that there was no pregnancy, and the defendant claimed that there was a conspiracy on the part of his daughter and Dr. Sharp to rob him of a large sum of money. Mrs. Hall corroborated her husband's testimony. Mrs. Sharp, the bride, denied the statement of her father, and testified that he voluntarily signed the bond. Mr. Bladin, who drew up the bond testified to the same effect. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff.

PAUL AND APOLLOS.—W. H. Simpson, Esq. of the Belfast Journal has a decidedly original way of dealing with a subject, no matter of what import, that takes excellently with the public. The following point in relation to the effort of a York county man in the Legislature is well taken: Mr Paul of Kittery is a compassionate man; by his motion the Judiciary committee at Augusta is instructed to inquire into the expediency of dispensing with the five days' notice of intention of marriage. How the billing and cooing doves will bless his name. But let it be remembered that "Paul plants and Apollos waters, but God gives the increase."

State News.

The small-pox cases in the vicinity of Franklin have assumed a very malignant form, the patient being seldom sick more than three or four days.

A house and furniture, and a barn and four horses, near Bristol, were burned Jan. 27th. Loss $3000; insured $1000. The buildings were owned by Ayer & Sanborn, and occupied by Chas. Warren.

Mr. Jeremiah Wheeler, of Manchester, committed suicide by hanging, Jan. 27th. He was about 72 years old, and leaves two daughters.

EXPECTANCY.—The Haverhill Gazette favors its readers with the following cheerful conundrums:—

Reader, do you not discover a failing in your body? Are you not reminded that decay has already set in? Die you must, whether you are prepared or not, and is it not best to be prepared?

We presume Bro. K. lives in expectation that "every day will be the next?"

OUT AND IN.—Let us not be inconsolable. Patterson of New Hampshire, to be sure, is going out of public life "with pleasure," and thinks "all decent men" will do the same; but we shall not be out of Pattersons yet, for there comes one in from South Carolina. One of them sold out, the other bought in; and both seem to have inherited the fortune of "Billy;" both have been "struck" by investigating committees. Boston Times.

A BRAVE BRAKEMAN.—A train was snowed up on a Wisconsin railroad recently, and the passengers began to suffer from hunger, no provisions being attainable. Intelligence of their condition having reached Calmar, seven miles distant, a brakeman named James Wilson, taking thirty pounds of cracker and cheese, set out to walk to the train. The Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin describes his walk and its sequel as follows:—

"The wind blew a gale, and, with the thermometer at twenty-seven below, he had a hard road to travel. It was hard work, but notwithstanding he felt his face and ears freezing, on he trudged, until he reached the train, almost exhausted and unable to speak distinctly, his face, ears and nose badly frozen.

The train reached by Mr. Wilson was one on which, among the passengers, was Mr. John Lawler, of Prairie du Chien, who had some ladies under his care. Mr. Lawler applied snow to the frozen face of Wilson, and did all that was needed to restore him as much as possible. Mr. Lawler then took from his own neck a massive gold chain, which he had worn for a long time, and putting it around Wilson's neck, remarked; "It's a pretty good man that has worn the chain, but I've found a better, and he shall have it." The chain is reputed to be worth up among the hundreds of dollars, and was a handsome present, worthily bestowed. Under touching circumstances like these, the writer of such an incident can hardly tell which to admire the most, the true heroism of the brakeman, who perilled his life to carry aid to his fellow-creatures, or the man who so promptly and generously rewarded the deed of the hero."

Readables.

An old bog swamp at Emdden, Maine, on which nothing but bushes has grown for the past seventy-five years, was recently overflowed for mill purposes. Soon after the water was raised large pine logs, sound and of the finest quality, began to rise out of the mud, and it is estimated that 100,000 feet of prime lumber will be sawed from this source. It is supposed that hundred of years ago the beavers built a dam on the site of the present one, and that the water caused the destruction of the forest with which the bog was then covered and the subsequent preservation of the logs.

Uniontown, Penn., has a charming boy whose grave has been dug three times, but who invariably revives in season to break up the family gathering and spoil the minister's prayer.

The Imperialists are busy in France.

Small-pox is increasing in Baltimore.

Dr Fitzgerald, the Clairvoyant Physician and Surgeon, at the Franklin House, Room 4, will remain until Friday evening, Jan. 31st, for the treatment of all chronic and long standing diseases. Positively three days only.

PUB. DOC.—A Philadelphia editor thus relieves his mind on a subject familiar to all newspaper offices, the inevitable Pub. Doc.: "We owe our thanks to Judge Kelly for the latest Patent Office reports. We already have sixteen hundred of these interesting volumes in our little library, but they have been read and re-read so many times that we know every page of them by heart. This new volume came opportunely and gratefully on Christmas morning, and that night we gathered our little family around the fire and read it through to them. The affecting tale entitled 'Improvement in Monkey Wrenches' seemed to touch every heart, and when we came to the climax of the little story about 'Reversible Pieboards,' there was not a dry eye between the front door and the stable. During the reading of the piteous narrative entitled 'Gum Washers for Carriage Axles,' the whole family gave expression to boisterous emotion, and the hired girl was so much excited that she lost her presence of mind and went around to her mother's inadvertently with six pounds of sugar and a butter kettle full of flour, and came home at midnight intoxicated. We can never sufficiently thank Judge Kelly for the innocent enjoyment thus furnished us. The memory of that happy evening will linger in our minds very much longer than that hired girl ever lingers when she lights on a lot of substance which she thinks will suit the constitution of her aged parent."

—We forbear mentioning the name of a wealthy rural citizen who attended a gathering in this city a few evenings since and upon being called upon for a speech, said: "Gentlemen and women; I aint no speecher; more'n twenty years back I came here, a poor, idiot boy, and now what are I?"

FRUITS & VEGETABLES.

Having lost nothing but water, they return, when path water, to their original condition, both in quantity and flavor.

DIRECTIONS:—To every pound of Fruit add four quarts cold water, come to a boil slowly and stew 10 to 20 minutes, add half the usual amount of Sugar used with fresh fruit.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then boil 1 to 2 hours, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the Retorts of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

These are the cheapest and best fruits in the Market, and you cannot tell them from fresh fruit when cooked.

The Singer

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or to-date or fancy, some advantage in running or needles or feed or price—and many of them are as we have said very good machines, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

IS THE

OLDEST

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model, does you dollar the sewing done in this country and preserve its advantages over all others combined.

It is really kept clean, and has THE BESTTENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and heavier lock power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

N. B. Those purchasing for cash, before the 1 of January next, will have a consideration allowed them.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible disease engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," no does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a powerful sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all pedema, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other compound. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distracting pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or poisonous compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Corn Cure is a healing ointment, and instantaneous relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ill," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

POWER.

"Hurra! Hurroar! Hurro-a-r!" "The grand old fellow!" "Isn't he magnificent?" "Don't seem to mind it one bit!" "Yes, he does, see how he struts!" "You bet he knows all about it!" "Hurroar!" And amid this confusion of tongues and torrents of admiration, the triumphal procession halted before Mr. Leonard's front door, which, being open, the hero of the day dashed through, on to a cellar way, down which he disappeared, and in a minute was lost to the sight of his enthusiastic escort.

Who was he? a great general? a great statesman? a great public idol? Bless your sweet lips, no. Only a great, broad-chested, shaggy, black, long-eared, heavy-jawed dog, named Power, of the species employed by the monks of St Bernard to hunt for lost or missing travelers in the snow. But having done a noble deed, he has won the right to be recognized by all noble souls.

He has a record, quaint and adventurous; and I, by virtue of a daily and almost intimate acquaintance with him, am proud of the honor of being his biographer. Three years ago he came into Dick's possession, in a fashion peculiar to that young gentleman's ideas of the value of the useful over the ornamental

"Take this basket, my son, and bring home from the store six pounds of loaf sugar," said his mamma one June morning, as she was straining currant juice for jelly. There were two routes to the grocers, the long one taking in a sharp elbow of the wharf of a river, alongside which always lay some oyster sloops and other trading vessels, while the short one was simply a three-minutes' run across a grass-covered common, and a five minutes' sober walk back.

Dick was gone a full half hour. When he re-entered the kitchen, it was with a very flushed face, the basket, with its lid pressed tightly down, hung from his right arm, and his entire figure wore an expression which Lonie, in telling the story afterward, significantly said, "didn't look like loaf sugar."

"You were slow this time, my son," said mamma, as she proceeded to open the basket.

"Yes ma'am, because you see—"

"What! what!" exclaimed the amazed lady, as lifting the lid, there lay curled up, a sleek, fat, black puppy, four or six months old, who looked in her face with a pair of reddish-brown eyes, as honest, and quite as roguish as Dick's.

"That is just it, mother; I knew you would be glad," said Dick, laying his hand patronizingly on the dog's head; "I had got the sugar, and was coming home slow-like, for cool, around by the river, when up the bank came a scraggy old fellow, with a pipe in his mouth, and a dog tucked under his arm like a school book."

"Hallo, youngster! What have you got in there to eat?" he asked.

"Nothing. It's sugar for preserves," I said.

"Got any more young ones home like yourself?"

"Yes, one sister and the baby."

"Humph! Well, don't you know preserves are as bad as poison? They rot your teeth, spoil your stomach, and don't stick to the bone nohow. See here! This dog's no common kind. He'll get big as a calf, and will be as smart as you in less than no time. He'll keep the whole town clear of rats. He can swim like a fish, climb like a goat, and will guard your house like a cannon. I want just such a fine little fellow as you to have him. Come, let's swap; I'll take the sugar off your hands—its only trash—and you may have the dog. I wouldn't take ten dollars for him from anybody else."

"He talked so fast, mother, I had scarcely time to think before the dog was in my basket, and the bundle of sugar in the man's hands."

"Run home fast," he said. "Tell your pap he's a St. Bernard, and his name is Power."

"And I did come quick, mother, though he's awful heavy. Now ain't you very glad?"

"You poor deluded boy; I think not. You see, Dick, I sent you for sugar."

"Yes, mother, and I'll run for more right off; but just suppose one day Bruce would get lost in the snow, and this dog would save his life; then what?"

Such special pleading was irresistible. Mother tried to feel immediately convinced; more sugar was purchased, and had some one kept a faithful diary of the events of every succeeding day, they would have found that from the time Power stepped out of the basket upon the kitchen table, shook himself, took a deliberate survey of his surroundings, and leaping to the floor, began to lick Bruce's little bare toes, he had been up to the present, as prominent and important as any member of Dick and Lonie's family. And surely, if courage, fidelity, affection, intelligence and playfulness gave any claim to such a distinction, he boldly won it.

"Where did you come from, Power? Who was your master?" Lonie used to ask as she peeped into his beautiful eyes. But they gave back no reply. His origin remained a mystery. From the first night, however, when jumping on a chair beside Bruce's bed, he curiously watched the snowy lids close over the sleepy blue eyes, and snuggling his own black nose between his broad fore-paws, snoozed through the hours with one eye open,—from that night he seemed to have found his kingdom and his king. Notwithstanding the many sly laughs at Dick's "speculation," Power speedily fulfilled the prophecy made concerning him, especially the one least complimentary to Dick, viz: "he'll soon be as smart as you." He did nothing by halves or "make believes." Whether it was a reckless rough and tumble romp with the children, during which he would nearly wag his tail and flap his ears off in his enthusiasm; a daily fight with his opposite neighbor, an irritable Billy goat; or obedience to Bruce's faintest call for "Pow-wow," all was done in "dreadful earnest." With what saint-like patience he allowed the latter to gouge in his eyes after the two tiny babies reflected there, to twist up his long ears as tightly as paper lamp-lighters, and to tickle his healthy red tongue until he would sneeze like a snuff taker, no one could know but the martyr himself. Surely, never had a king a more devoted or willing subject, and if Power did, on two occasions, eat up his master's little dumpy stockings, and blue morocco shoes, it was construed into a mark of ardent affection, and forgiven upon condition that he would not eat up the baby too. It was soon discovered that he positively hated three things; negroes, cats, and, strangest of all, notwithstanding his master's assertion, water. A bath, when he was a puppy, almost threw him into convulsions; the heaviest blows would not affect him half so much as a teaspoonful of water thrown into his face, and when he lapped it from a stream or trough, he invariably shut his eyes.

"Why does Power dislike colored people so? I am sure he is blacker than any of them," Dick would often say when, if a man or woman, however well dressed or gentle, would enter the house, he would snarl like an angry wolf, and look unutterable things." Doubtless somewhere in his early history, a blow or insult from one of that race had been given him; and that he never forgot none knew better than an unlucky stable boy, who, once, while watering the street, turned the hose on Power's back. From that hour, though never touching him, Power contrived to inspire him with such a wholesome fear, that he had to seek another home. He despised cats for their stealthy, sneaking habits. Previous to this transfer to Dick, Frisk; a cat with a red streak down his white back, had been Lonie's pet. Frisk was a vivacious, self-important, deceitful little fellow, who hospitably rubbed noses with Power, the puppy, the first evening of his arrival, and slily drank all the sour milk Dick had got for supper. The next morning seeing Frisk tip-toeing in his velvet-soled shoes toward the mangling-board, on which cook had left lying, for one minute, a fresh beefsteak, he quietly seized him by the back of the neck, and hurled him—as Dick, without intending any irreverence, afterwards told his father—adding as though from the effect of habit,

——"far, far away,"

"Where saints in glory stand,
Bright, bright as day."

It was a mistake, however; Frisk merely landed a few feet from the stable door, but henceforth was never allowed any more than any other strange cat, to approach the house. What then was the surprise of the family when early one morning while they were breakfasting, Power walked into the room, carrying in his mouth a seemingly drowned kitten, as black, save a white star upon its breast, as the blackest hair in his own rough coat. Walking slowly around the table and looking at each one with the most beseeching eyes, he finally laid the kitten down upon the hem of Grandmother's dress, with a show of tenderness as solemn as it was ludicrous, and began licking it. Soon the second era of every cat's proverbial nine lives dawned for this one, for opening its eyes, he freely miowed. Power licked with increasing energy, nor desisted until Lonie, getting a basket and an old shawl, tucked the rescued one in it, and set it in the chimney corner. Power stretched himself near by as though determined to see how this thing was going to end. After greedily lapping some milk, and taking another short nap, the kitten revived greatly; seeing which, Power caught up the basket in which it lay, and promenading up and down the floor, waved his plumy tail as triumphantly as though it was a victor's flag. Of course the kitten, thus strangely preserved, found a home, and in her deliverer a fast and fearless friend. She took a daily nap, nestled between his fore-paws, and upon awakening, invariably washed his huge nose with her tongue.

One morning, when about a year old, he followed Dick and his father to the early market. Mr. Leonard's butcher, noticing with what an air of intelligent curiosity he surveyed the pieces of choice meat hanging from their several hooks, first put a roast of beef in Mr. Leonard's basket, and then threw Power a large bone. From that time he became self-supporting. Finding a small chip basket empty, the following morning, at the same hour, he started off to market, on his own responsibility.

The butcher, recognizing him, put a skin-bone in it, and Power trotted homeward. Soon finding the burden too heavy he was seen to stop and think. The result was, he wisely brought the bone home and left the basket on the street. Afterward, three times a week regularly he was gone from seven to eight o'clock in the morning, and as regularly, on returning, carried his bones to a certain corner of the cellar, where he piled them for sale keeping, and future dinners.

His dread of water was only equalled by his fearlessness of fire. So when Fourth of July night came, and other dogs were cowering in awful fear, Power was the happiest one alive. A pack of fire-crackers exploding beneath his feet, set him almost frantic with delight. As the rockets went whizzing up into the air, he quivered in every muscle with excitement as his glance followed the fiery streak, until he saw the shower of stars descending, when he leaped to catch them, snapping at the empty air like a mad creature. From the time the booming of cannon announced the dawn of Independence day, until near midnight, he was on the street. With a penny flag fastened behind each of his ears, tail as erect as a gun at the command "Shoulder arms!" and eyes sparkling as though each one reflected a tiny ten-fire, he seemed to say "I'm a torpedo! I'm a pack of fire-crackers! I'm the craziest pin-wheel that ever spinned and dazzled and whirled and tangled! Oh, will not somebody touch me off?" When the fifth came, he spent hours wandering through the powder-strewed streets, pawing all the half-burned fire-crackers he could find, and looking almost too melancholy to live. A certain door in the house, up stairs, swung roughly upon its hinges, awkwardly making an unpleasant noise when opened. One day it was heard to creak, creak, most deliberately for fully five minutes.

"What can be moving the hall-room door? it puts my teeth on edge," said grandmother, as she hurried to close it. To her surprise, there stood Power panting it to and fro with his foot, with head beat on one side, as though in ecstasy with the sweet sound; yet a few days afterward, when a brass band, heading a fire-man's procession, passed the house, playing the "Anvil Chorus," he howled dismally, and hid in the darkest corner of the cellar. Nothing could reconcile him to the approach of a menagerie, with its usual musical accompaniments, but the presence of the elephant. At the first glimpse of the monster, he would rush to its side—keeping at safe distance, however, from its swaying trunk—and with a proud, protecting mien, as though he was the largest elephant of them all, step along as though realizing, for the first time, that he had found his proper position in life. Of all days in the week, Sundays were to him the dreariest and most incomprehensible. Accustomed to follow the children everywhere, he could not understand why, on every returning first day, the entire family took a long walk, while he was pent up in the yard. With a worthy determination to know the truth, he escaped one morning, and hiding behind a watchman's box waited until he saw them coming, when believing himself unseen, he stealthily followed. Dick's sharp eyes detected his favorite, but he prudently held his peace, hoping Power would contrive some way of getting into the church. The family pew being far up the middle aisle, he saw no sign of him until the congregation arose to sing—as usual at close of morning service—the long metre doxology; then a prolonged, fearfully dismal howl reverberated through the building, startling the most devout worshippers present, and Power bounded through the vestibule, as though dog patience could stand those horrid noises no longer. There was a hotel across from the church at right angles. After that Sunday, invariably with every returning one, Power waited until he thought the family were in their pew; then leaping the fence, he sought the hotel's long veranda, whereon he lay and snoozed until he heard the distant strains of then rising, he walked over to the church door and waited the appearance of his friends. So accurate did he become in distinguishing the tune of "Old Hundred" from all others, that the gentlemen at the hotel nicknamed him "Old Dox."

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow,"

All these details make a long beginning of what was meant to be a brief history, but without them you would not have known how intelligent and rational the dog is, whose heroic deed seemed worthy the generous impulse of an immortal soul.

It was a perfect summer day in the opening term of a long school holiday, and grandmother's darlings were as restless as caged butterflies, for a country frolic. A mile or so from Leighton was a strip of woodland, called Sporting Green, where all that was greenest in grass, spiciest and shadiest in pine boughs, purest and cleanest in running water, and daintiest in the way of moss fringe and wild flower embroidery seemed combined. A family council was held at the breakfast table. A Jersey wagon, capable of holding the five Leonards, including Grandma and the three Deans, was hired; with Tom and Dick for drivers, a well-filled dinner basket inside, Grandmother's pocket fat with the promise of a new out-door game, and a story never before told, and Power for footman or pioneer, just as he fancied, they started off in the gayest of good humors. Half way thence, and they came to a brook, six or eight inches deep and twelve feet wide. The wagon had passed over it, and Tom had jerked the rein for a rapid trot, when Power was heard yelping and barking some behind. They had entirely forgotten his antipathy to water; as they looked back at him, he stood on the farthest margin of the stream with his eyes shut, and trembling as though he had an ague fit. His only reply to their coaxing appeals to follow them was a series of most unearthly howls, expressing his impossibility to come one step nearer.

"Let the old fool go back then," said Dick, losing his temper.

"Brute fool, Brute, him go back with Powwow," said the young king, looking out of the back of the wagon.

There seemed no alternative but to follow Bessie's suggestion, which was, "that Tom and Dick had better wade across and carry Power over between them."

It was a laughable sight when, lifting the heavy fellow between them, they bore him over, as though he was a log. He lay as one passive in their hands, they meanwhile laughing immoderately; it is a wonder they did not let him fall. Once more on dry land, he thanked his tail and bounded ahead as though he considered the queer transaction a capital joke. The "Green" was soon reached, and found already alive with a merry party of friends who were in advance of them. "Oh, we're glad you've come," cried one of the first arrivals, "this is even so much nicer than it was last summer. Mr. Lane has dammed up the cascade and made a big lake just under the hill, and—oh, I never saw such a lovely place since I was born."

"Gran'ma, is Bruce born, is he?" earnestly asked that young inquirer, disentangling himself from Daisy and Harry.

"Yes, my dear, very much so," she replied.

"Then Bruce be a hoppergrass, and see lovely place, too," and breaking loose, with Power at his side, he tumbled into the soft grass and unlimited freedom. For one hour all was a wild, noisy "getting ready for some real fun." The fairy lake, a deep pool about twenty feet square, of wonderful clearness and coolness, lay alongside the hill near by, seemingly as harmless and lovely as the happy girls who peeped at the reflection of their faces in its reed-fringed margin. Tom was high up in a fir tree in search of cone tassels for Louie's "rustic work." Dick, another boy, and Power were on the track of a ground mole; Grandma was sewing across a stump, with three little girls for her ballast. Bruce had not been a minute out of her sight when suddenly a scream of terror, and the cry, "Bruce is in the water!" rang through the "Green." The panic, the confusion, the sudden rush of everybody to the little lake, any child can imagine but not the awful anguish of Grandma and her children as for an instant they saw a dark head rise to the surface and sink again, at least six feet away from the shore. It was but an instant, though, scarcely a breath of time before there was a sound of galloping feet over the turf, a plunge into the lake, a few bold strokes, a dive, and up rose Power, the gallant hero, who feared water as some men fear death, with the body of his precious little master in his strong jaws, ready for Tom's arms which were outstretched behind him. Bruce was not drowned—only for a time insensible. Of course the picnic was broken up, for Grandma had them drive her party home immediately, the rest of the children following, as fast as they could walk, too excited to remain behind. There needed no coaxing to make Power recross the stream. The brave heart which had conquered an awful fear to save a life would not have stopped now, with the dear boy just out of sight of him, though a river had rolled between. As the children entered the town, they told the story to whoever listened. The news flew, the crowd increased, Power was known everywhere, and for once had to endure the penalty of universal popularity. Being a sensible dog, and having done his duty, no wonder he fled from further praise when the cellar refuge was so near.

"Is Bruce killed, papa?" asked the little victim of his own curiosity, as his father lifted him from the wagon.

"No, thank God!—and Power, my son."

"Aha! Bruce was most killed," was the triumphant rejoinder. "When Pow-wow gets dry, Bruce jump in once more time."

Whether this child meant to break the spell of Power's fear, by his dangerous experiment, or thought an occasional drowning rare fun, we know not, but for dogs who, like Power, have hidden beneath their dumb lips and brute forms, love stronger than death, we would beg from little folks the tenderest consideration, and most unvarying kindness.—Mrs. Nellie Eyster, in Wood's Household Magazine.

Temperance Convention.

We are indebted to the Concord Patriot's full report of the doings at the State Temperance Convention, for the following:

In response to the call issued for a State Temperance Convention for the purpose of organizing a State Temperance Union, on a Christian and moral basis, about one hundred and fifty men and a dozen or more women assembled in Eagle Hall, (Wednesday) morning. A committee of three, consisting of B. F. Thorndike of Portsmouth, Augustus Berry of Bristol and J. D. Smith of Rochester, was chosen to select officers for the Convention.

Daniel M. Clough of Canterbury said that he thought that politics should so far enter into the proceedings as to declare that no candidates nominated by either of the great parties, who are not temperance men, shall receive the support of the temperance party.

Joseph Smith of East Concord thought that the movement should have a purely religious basis.

Mr. Woodbury of Maine being called upon made some remarks favoring the enactment of laws that would close the liquor traffic. Remarks were also made by Rev. Dr. Deering of Pittsfield, who thought that moral influence was ineffectual to restrain the drunkard from indulging his appetite, and that a law is needed that will put the offender behind the bars of a prison.

J. Horace Kent gave a brief history of his experience in the Washingtonian Home for Inebriates, and said that 33 1-3 per cent. of those who had sought relief at the institution, had remained or died temperate. He solemnly protested against politics being introduced into their deliberations.

The Committee on Nominations reported for President, Rev. Elisha Adams of Concord, with Vice Presidents from each county.

Dr. C. A. Norton made brief remarks upon the deplorable effects of intemperance, and expressed himself as willing and ready to do all in his power to check the sale and consumption of intoxicating liquors. He was followed by Rev. Dr. Wallace of Manchester and Mr. Goss, who spoke briefly. The Committee on Resolutions reported the following, which were laid upon the table, and afterwards taken up and adopted with a supplementary resolution offered by J. Horace Kent of Portsmouth:

Resolved, That we as a Convention express our unaltered convictions that the evils of intemperance are so gigantic and do so far exceed those of any other social sin, that it is the duty of all moral and Christian men to unite in strenuous efforts which shall have for their distinct object the reform of those already overcome by this vice and the training of the young that they may be kept from the evils of intemperance.

Resolved, That every man owes to himself, to those who have fallen, to those especially tempted, to those who are young and to the interests of morality in the community where he resides to be a pledged temperance man and an active worker in the cause.

Resolved, That denying neither the right nor the expediency of any advocate of temperance to labor in any way, this Convention do hereby put upon record their conviction that it is our paramount duty at this time to labor for the formation of temperance societies under any of the various names and forms that may seem best, that the cause may be promoted through the circulation of the pledge and the instruction of the people in the principles of the temperance reform.

Resolved, That the habitual use of alcohol in any of its forms will produce disease to such an extent as practically to overpower the will and thus render the inebriate incapable of self-control.

Resolved, That while we hold the vender of intoxicating drinks guilty before human and divine law, we do also hold that any man who in this age of knowledge as to the effects of intemperance shall allow himself to indulge in the use of any alcoholic drinks as a beverage, is to be looked upon not only as unfortunate, but as responsible for his wrong doing.

Resolved, That at a time when no other great moral question is agitating the community, it is the especial duty of temperance men to bring forward into prominence a cause which deserves the very first place in our social reforms.

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be respectfully requested to use all honorable means to suppress the importation and manufacture of alcoholic liquors, and that the officers of this Convention be instructed to send each of them a certified copy of these resolutions.

A constitution for the government of the society was presented and read by the Chairman of the Committee, Rev. V. A. Cooper of Nashua. It was taken up and passed by articles. One article in it allowing people who will not sign the temperance pledge to become co-operative members, excited considerable discussion, which had no effect to change the provision.

Papers were circulated among those present for those to sign who wished to become members, which could be done by the payment of one dollar.

After this the members were quietly dispersing, with the evident consciousness of having materially aided in the suppression of the vice which had been so earnestly considered and against which such peculiar resolutions had been passed, when Rev. Mr. Tilton, of Milford, rose to his feet and in a loud voice read the following resolution, which, notwithstanding an attempted burlesque by Rev. S. L. Blake, of Concord, who moved that it be read to the Governor, to be inserted in the next Fast Day proclamation, was passed with enthusiasm:

Resolved, That the members of this convention have great reason for confession of sin and humility before God for not having been more earnest in time past in laboring to remove the evils of intemperance from our borders.

Col. Henry D. Pierce of Hillsboro offered the resolution; there was a determined effort made to choke him off, but he was finally permitted to read it. It was voted lay it upon the table, and on a motion to take it therefrom, Mr. Kent threatened trouble if it should be passed, as he considered it a direct reflection upon the government of the State. A vote failed to get it from the table, the negative prevailing by two majority.

Resolved, That in the sentiment and spirit of the call for this convention, our workmen need to consolidate, and the public sentiment—and more particularly the prosecuting officers of our State—need to be educated up to the tone of the law; and we therefore profoundly regret, and as decidedly disapprove, the action in any capacity, of our State officers in relieving from imprisonment, and from their lawful and proper punishment, convicted and guilty criminals, enabling them to return and renew their unlawful and pernicious traffic, which has come to produce the most widespread and insufferable of all evils under which the humanity of our State literally groans.

D. J. Smith of Rochester offered the following, which again called up Kent of Portsmouth, who objected to it on the professed score of introducing politics into the Convention, and as he was decidedly tender on this point, rather startled the assembly by threat to withdraw. It was finally passed, Kent withdrawing his objection:

Resolved, That we favor and demand for moral and Christian reasons, the strict and impartial enforcement of the laws of the State for the suppression of the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The committee reported for permanent officers:

President, Rev. Asa D. Smith, of Hanover, with ten Vice-Presidents; Secretary, Rev. Elisha Adams; Treasurer, Peter Sanborn; Executive Committee, David A. Warde, E. S. Crawford, J. H. Gallinger, Concord; P. K. Chandler, Manchester; V. A. Cooper, Nashua, and S. L. Gerould, Goffstown.

The Convention then adjourned.

Credit Mobilier.

On Wednesday, Judge Poland read the following check:—

Sergeant-at-Arms, U. S. House of Representatives.

Pay to J. W. Patterson or bearer $1800, and charge to my account.

(signed) OAKES AMES.

Indorsed, J. W. PATTERSON.

Q. For what was this $1800 paid?

A. Dividends on 30 shares of Credit Mobilier stock.

Q. Did you take a receipt from him?

A. I did; you have it already, I believe.

Q. Have you any other receipt from Mr. Patterson?

A. I have. Witness produced the following:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14, 1866.

Received of Oakes Ames $2328 for three bonds of the Union Pacific Railroad Co., sold for me, being dividend of 80 per cent. in bonds on stock of Credit Mobilier of America, held by him as trustee on my account.

J. W. PATTERSON.

To this was appended the following:

"$2400 bonds at 97 cents, $2328; interest paid, $105; paid cash, $2223."

Witness testified that the figures were made at the time the receipt was given, but he did not remember whether they were made by Mr. Patterson or himself; the receipt itself was written by Mr. Patterson.

A Poor Democrat.

Gen. Banks doesn't make a nice Democrat. There are many articles in the creed that he don't take kindly to, and worse than all, he refuses to follow without question the old stagers in political orthodoxy. He had the effrontery, the other day, to tell our Democratic M. C., Hibbard, that when he whined about the navy yards of the country being run as political machines for the benefit of the Republicans he didn't know what he was talking about, and that, as far as the Charlestown navy yard was concerned, it has been controlled by and filled with Democrats. He even says he was almost induced to be a Democrat last fall in order to obtain some influence over the yard. Hear him:

"It is twenty years since I first represented this important interest in Congress, and in all that time, whether under Democratic or Republican rule, I have never had any considerable influence in its management. Democrats out of Congress and apparently out of power have sometimes kindly volunteered to aid me if I wanted to get a fellow or two employed there, and secretaries of the department have said to me that without the most careful observation, under Republican administration, all the yards were sure to be filled with Democrats. Now, what more than that does the gentleman from New Hampshire desire? I am sure I do not know; and if I was inclined, as perhaps I was, to veer a little toward the Democratic party in the campaign of the last autumn, it was in great degree with a view of getting some influence in that department if I could."—Monitor.

Henry J. Banks, Esq., of West Ossipee, whose death occurred Jan. 27th, was one of the most successful business men of Carroll County. He was a native of Tamworth, where he was a merchant and Postmaster. For some years he was in business in New York, but returned to New Hampshire and opened the West Ossipee Hotel. In company with a Mr. Butler he opened the Madison silver and lead mines. He had been a member of several legislatures. He was Postmaster at West Ossipee.

Mr. Joseph Wilder of Wilder Village left his home on the 25d to go to New Ipswich Centre, two and a half miles from which place he was thrown from his sleigh, his horse having run away. Mr. Wilder walked on in pursuit, carrying a buffalo robe, and stopped at a house on the way; but a few rods farther on he was found on the road dead. His age was 72 years.

A dwelling house belonging to Thomas B. Marston, at Lebanon, was burned on Sunday morning, with all its contents belonging to Henry Bisthron, its occupant, who had an insurance of $400. Mr. Marston's insurance of $500 will about half cover his loss.

Shute, the Exeter bank thief, it is believed; has sailed for Cuba or South America; and some people talk of the probability of a settlement. His bondsmen are his father, Nathaniel Shute, Gilman Barker, Woodbridge Odlin, Amos Tuck, Joshua Getchell, Harvey Kent, Nathaniel Gordon and Isaac S. Shute. The suspicion gains ground that he was not alone in his villainy.

On Wednesday, Jan. 22, as some of the neighbors were passing the house of Miss Abby V. Wentworth of Conway, they noticed a strange smell about the place, and on entering they found the house full of smoke, and the occupant lying on the hearth, with the upper part of her body nearly consumed by the fire, which had burned down through the floor into the cellar. Miss Wentworth, who was in fair circumstances, persisted in living alone, although an accident from fire had happened to her before.

John H. Brown, who obtained some notoriety, more than twenty years ago, as one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution against the Wentworth Brothers and one W.C.Clark, who were accused of the murder of Jonas L. Parker of Manchester, in 1845, died at the county poor farm at Wilton, on Tuesday, after a long illness. At the hearing in the case of the accused, which took place at the City Hall, Manchester, in 1850, Brown was subjected to a very severe cross-examination, which continued several days, by the late President Franklin Pierce, the counsel of Asa and Henry T. Wentworth, who then resided at Saco, Me. The accused were never indicted, and the question as to who murdered Mr. Parker has always remained a mystery.

GAS EXPLOSION.—At about half past 7 o'clock, Thursday morning, an explosion of gas occurred in a culvert through which the main pipe passes from the repair shop to the Print works, at Manchester. The floor of the repair shop was torn up for 100 feet, and John Weir, Wm. Devitt and Chas. W. Stevens were dangerously wounded. Weir and Devitt are about 60 years old and may die of their injuries. The intense cold heaved the ground and broke the pipe.

Gail Hamilton is ill with small-pox.

COLLECTING PAY FOR A COW.—Some years ago a widow living on the line of the Ohio & Mississippi railroad, about one hundred miles from St. Louis, owned a young cow of which she was particularly proud. As the woman was not possessed of much of this world's goods, the cow was an important source of income to her, as she made butter for sale, and also sold some milk in the neighborhood. One day the express train came thundering along, and struck and killed the widow's cow as it stood ruminating on the track.

The widow applied to the station agent for pay for the animal, and was told to send in a bill to the officer of the road. She did so, but received no reply, and, after writing several times without effect called on the paymaster the next time he went through the town to pay the section hands. The paymaster was very busy, and answered the old woman so abruptly that she became offended, and concluding that the road did not intend to make good her loss, swore revenge. Little attention was paid to her threats until about a week after, when the morning passenger train, bound west, came along. The station house at Flora is at the top of a gentle slope, about half a mile in length, and which the passenger trains always run up at the regular speed of twenty miles an hour.

It was a fine frosty morning and the sun was just rising as the engineer noticed what he supposed to be frost glistening on the rails. He sounded the whistle for the station, and putting on more steam, he started up the slope. The speed at which the train was approaching carried it about half up the rise, but the driving wheels of the locomotive sprung round on the rails without pulling an ounce. The train came to a dead stop and then began to slide backward. The engineer whistled down brakes and got out to inspect the rails. He found, as he expected that they were artistically covered with soft soap, and and as he had had some previous experience of that kind, knew exactly what to do. He backed down the track about half a mile, and putting on a full head of steam, charged at the rise with full speed. When he found the speed slackening he opened his sand valves and allowed the sand in the boxes to glide through the pipes and on the rails in front of the driving wheels. This, to some extent, counteracted the effect of the soap, and the train got nearly fifty yards farther than it did before.

It finally stopped again, and the engineer again backed out and again charged the slope. The process was repeated several times, and would have finally been successful had not the sand given out. The soil in the neighborhood was a soft dark loam, and where the railroad cut was made a stiff yellow clay was turned up. No sand could be procured anywhere, and finally the force of train men went to work to remove the soap. This they succeeded in doing after a half hour's work, and nearly an hour behind time the train reached the station.

A few days after a similar difficulty was experienced, and the road officials began to get decidedly angry. An attorney was sent out there to discover and prosecute the perpetrator, but soon after his arrival was confidently informed that the road would have no trouble in future if the widow was paid for the cow. He took the hint, telegraphed to the president, and receiving the necessary authority, paid for the animal and left the place. The track was never soaped afterwards, and the widow bought another cow.

CHARCOAL FOR POULTRY.—The benefit which fowls derive from eating charcoal is, I believe, acknowledged. The method of putting it before them is, however, not well understood. Pounded charcoal is not in the shape in which fowls usually find their food, and consequently is not very enticing to them. I have found that corn burnt on the cob, and the refuse—which consists almost entirely of the grains reduced to charcoal, and still retaining their perfect shape—placed before them, is greedily eaten by them, with a marked improvement in their health, as is shown by the brighter color of their combs, and their sooner producing a greater average of eggs to the flock than before.—S. Byfur Mason, in the Poultry World.

LIQUOR VS. LAW.—It has long been considered that a bill of spirituous liquor sold and delivered could not be collected through the Courts of this State, the courts holding that an illegal transaction cannot at law be enforced. But a recent case in Rockingham county has modified this view somewhat, if we have been correctly informed. A of Portsmouth bought of B in Boston, $3000 worth of liquor. B, through his attorney, J. H. George, brought suit for the pay, which A resisted, pleading the illegality of the sale. The jury finding that A bought the liquor intending not to pay for it, that the transaction was really obtaining goods under false pretensions, Judge Foster ruled that the plaintiff might recover, and judgment was entered accordingly. The defendant took exceptions and carried the case to the full bench, where the ruling of Judge Foster has just been sustained, Judge Doe delivering the opinion.—Monitor.

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running of needles or feed or prices and many of these new ones have sound very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

OLDEST

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and conquers its advantages over all others combined.

It is really kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION ever invented; is lighter speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the variation of work known to the art.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croup, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all stages prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared tortes of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

In the ultimate chain of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a TONIC, and powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lapulina, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, living rates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or polish compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and on just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

OCEAN BALLOONING.—Prof. Donaldson has been interviewed by a reporter of the Reading (Pa.) Eagle, with the following result:

Donaldson's first ascension was made in Reading last August, and since then he has visited the clouds twenty-four times in various parts of the South and West. He has lost several balloons; been bruised, scratched and injured in many ways; has been dropped into the Atlantic, and ducked in Lake Michigan; has been thrown against chimneys and landed in trees; has been lost, given up as dead, and found again; has put on his citizen's dress while two and a half miles high; has bursted and cut his balloon over a mile from earth, has performed on the trapeze for the benefit of an eagle, a mile above the clouds, and has won the distinction of being the most reckless and daring performing aeronaut in the known world.

He was well pleased on meeting the Eagle representative, and entered into conversation very readily. After giving the detailed accounts of his performances above mentioned, the reporter inquired: "What is the most daring thing you do, Professor?" Donaldson replied: "Well, to my mind, I have done nothing daring or reckless. A little trick which is amusing, and which I intend to do, will be done in this manner: I always go up without a basket on the bare trapeze bar. In the act where I fall backward and catch myself by the toes I will have the bar arranged so that it breaks as I fall, allowing me to tumble some twelve feet toward the earth, when I shall be caught by a rope. I will also have it to break and catch myself with my right hand. This will be done when I am half a mile high, and it will be well calculated to amuse the people."

Reporter—What would you call reckless performing?

Donaldson—I should like to anchor two balloons in the air about half a mile high, and walk a rope attached to both of them. That might be called reckless by nervous people. However, I dislike the business of frightening people. I shall hereafter pay more attention to scientific ballooning.

R—How about your proposed ocean trip?

D—I shall cross the Atlantic Ocean by balloon next summer, if I can satisfactorily arrange things by that time. I am positive it can be done, and I am determined to do it.

During my limited experience as an aeronaut I have ascertained many things that render it conclusive to my mind that the voyage can be successfully accomplished. I shall construct three balloons, have them joined together, with boat, ballast, provisions, and all the necessary requirements, and thus equipped I shall start in a calm season and perform the journey in about two days and a half. I shall make a voyage first, however, from St. Louis to Boston.

R.—How do you navigate the air?

D.—That is one of the discoveries of aeronauting. It is an established fact that at a certain altitude, say two and a half miles, there is a current of wind blowing from west to east. I shall ascend to that current and with it travel the 2,000 miles in about two days and a half.

R.—But is there not a possibility of failure?

D.—None that I can discover. I shall feel above the ocean as I always feel above the land, just as secure as I feel at this moment sitting in this chair. Of course I shall have a basket attached to the balloon on the ocean voyage.

R.—How high have you been, Professor?

D.—My barometer has indicated over three miles. I ascend and perform on the bar in my performing clothes, and when out of sight, above the clouds, I put my citizen's clothes on while standing on the bar?

R.—What is the ocean trip to cost?

D.—About $5,000.

After giving the reporter a graphic description of the many phenomena (?) to be witnessed above the clouds, the lights and shadows, the true causes of rain and hail, and many other interesting subjects, a detailed account of which the crowded state of our columns will not admit, the interview closed. The aeronaut is in excellent health, and as the reporter left, the Professor assured him that the Eagle, before long, could finish the balance of this article by recording the ocean voyage successfully accomplished.

TAX ON BUGS.—A lively law suit has just been concluded in London between a landlord and a family of tenants. The latter hired a house for a year, but at the close of the quarter returned the key, paid up to date and left the place, refusing to remain longer on account of the presence of a vast and increasing family of those insects who "painful vigils keep upon the slumbers of tired humanity—in fact, the predatory bed-bug was there. The point of the suit hinged on the question whether the bugs had been there or were imported by the new comers. The court decided the latter to be the case, and now the offended parties are not only compelled to stay through their contracted year, but also to pay the landlord a large per capita duty on the imported live stock.

State's Defalcation.

The Exeter News Letter says that on the 1st of January he gave his wife $100, enjoining her to make the most economical use of the money, as he was poor. In reply to her inquiry if he had lost the money he received for his house (sold about two years ago, to Mr. John Lowe, for $5000 in cash), he said he had lost it all, and was poor.

The Savings Bank will suspend for the present, and application will be made to Court for the appointment of receivers, who will take possession of its property and collect everything due the bank, when each depositor and every one holding a claim against the bank will receive such a proportion of the amount due them as the bank will be able to pay.

It is evident that the defaulter has been contemplating this embezzlement and flight for an indefinite time. He had always been a regular purchaser of a season ticket on the Boston & Maine railroad, but on the 1st of January he did not get a season ticket, but purchased package tickets instead. And it is also evident that he has made unlawful use of the bank's funds for some years, and it is believed that being the managing officer of the two institutions, when an examination of the affairs of one institution was being made he produced the securities of the other to make good the deficits, and vice versa. The News Letter says the Directors had no suspicion that Shute was engaged in stock speculations.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, Jan. 29.

My Dear Chronicle:—I am not exempt yet. I am attacked to-day by mail. The United States post office has been prostituted in my persecution. During the war the cry of the South was "Let us alone." I crave as much consideration as our rebellious brethren desired. But I can not get it.

A corn doctor's card has just been thrust into my hand, containing on its reverse, "Facts about the Bible," obtained by three years careful study, by a prisoner condemned to solitary confinement! Can no spiritual chiropodist remove this excrescence on morality? Will not a judicious system of cutting and burning relieve unoffending citizens from being persecuted with the views of morality emanating from condemned criminals?

A day or two since I received a tract entitled "old Jacob Moore," and I don' want any more of them. Now Jacob, according to his own account was "a poor guilty creature," and if I am to learn wisdom I should prefer to imbibe the precepts of virtue from those who themselves are virtuous. If he speaks truth, his testimony his worthless; if he lies, from mock humility, he destroys the pith of his argument.

Perhaps this Pharisaical custom of thrusting "I am holier than thou" into the faces of law-abiding citizens may in the end work damage to the cause of the really good and true. I quote the following from a San Francisco paper, the largest in circulation on the Pacific coast, if I err not:

The clergy, from their sacred calling, occupy a more favorable position for the promulgation of their views than persons of any other profession, for, while the lawyer is confronted by his opponent and the politician on the stump by the critics of the opposite party, the clergyman from his pulpit ventilates his peculiar ideas without fear of contradiction. This in time is apt to generate a feeling of self complacency, which may, and sometimes does, upon into an assumption of quasi-infallibility, and the preacher begins to believe that from what he may say, either in or out of his pulpit, there is no appeal. This may be submitted to by his own peculiar flock, but when the minister steps into public life, he must submit to the same rules which govern others who are less favored.

At the Japanese banquet on Tuesday evening last, the Rev. Dr. Stone offered this toast:

"The Brotherhood of Nations—Health and long life to all that labor for it, and quite the opposite to all that do not."

If this means anything, it means sickness and speedy death to those who do not agree with the Reverend Doctor's ideas on the subject. This is rather a queer illustration of Christianity to exhibit to the Pagan, for whose ultimate conversion we are all bound to pray, and does not accord with the injunction of the Rev. Dr. Stone's Lord and Master, who says:

"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."—Matthew, v. 44.

The incorporation into his text of a desire for the speedy conversion of those misguided persons who oppose "the brotherhood of man" would have been more in accordance with the teachings of Christianity and with the sacred calling of the gentleman proposing the sentiment.

And turn we now from Dr. Stone to Dr. Stebbins. Suppose that at the banquet alluded to, Governor Booth had arisen to make a speech, and had remarked: "I see before me many unregenerate people, and chief among them is Dr. Stebbins; chief, I say, because having the opportunity, he does not avail himself of it to preach the true doctrine of election; and when in the hour to come, when time shall be no more, I and the elect, sitting upon our bright thrones in Heaven, see him and his followers writhing in the torments of the hottest hell, and listen to their shrieks under the infernal torture of the demons, we will strike a higher note of praise and exaltation, that we, from the beginning, were chosen for glory while they were specially selected for eternal damnation."

Such remarks would embody the religious belief of a numerous sect of Christians, and any person holding the doctrine would have just as much right to apply them to Mr. Stebbins upon a festive occasion as that gentleman had to make use of the language he did to Governor Booth or ex-governor Haight, and which has before been commented upon in these columns.

The expressions of the reverend gentleman upon this occasion were unseemly, uncalled for and untrue. Unseemly, because a banquet given in honor of a high foreign Embassy is no place to ventilate the ideas of any one upon local politics; uncalled for, because nothing had been said, or was likely to be said, leading to any such controversy; and untrue, because neither of the gentlemen so coarsely alluded to have ever by their conduct subjected themselves to such criticism.

If these two instances are to be accepted as illustrations of clerical ideas of Christianity or propriety, it is to be hoped that the participation of the clergy in festive events may in future be confined to their professional performances at marriages and christenings.

The effect of these teachings is shown in those who are quick to censure others, who are ready to exalt themselves and consign to eternal misery all who differ from them in creed, forgetting the beautiful lessons inculcated in the 5th, 6th and 7th chapters of Matthew. But perhaps the beautiful story is antiquated, and its teachings may not be strictly "evangelical."

A more striking instance of complacent egotism I have never seen than the following, which I cut from the most widely circulated paper for youth printed in New England. Some people have a good opinion of themselves; and if they could say with truth all that Allan Tibbets says of himself, in the Colchester Republican, the feeling would be natural. It is large talking:

I am now in my 68th year. I never swore an oath, or took a chew of tobacco, or smoked a whole cigar; I never bought or sold a drink of whiskey or brandy for myself; I never owned or carried a pistol; I never made a kite or played a game of marbles; I never sang a song or played a game of checkers; I never played a game of billiards or croquet; I never played a game of cards. In a travel of over 100,000 miles by public conveyances I never met with an accident, or was a moment too late when it depended on my own exertion. I never skated a rod or struck a man a blow with my fist. I can repeat more of the Bible than any man living of whom I have any knowledge. I have given instruction to more than 200,000 pupils. I am the only person alive who composed the first church in this city and county. I have given away more real estate to this city than all its other inhabitants. I preached for fifteen years, and travelled more than 500 miles attending funerals, and all the salary I received was a pound of tea worth seventy-five cents; and yet, in all that time I made money. These hands of mine ministered to my necessities. I was raised a farmer in the State of New York, and had only a very commonse hool education. I have repeatedly walked twenty-four miles to church. I can read the Republican without glasses. I am possessed of a competency gained by my own industry. M.

AN EXPLANATORY ORDER.—The President, in an official order issued through the State department, says that the executive order of December 17, relating to the holding of State or municipal offices by federal officers, applies to the offices of alderman and councilmen and to all officers under all town or village governments, with or without salary or compensation. On the contrary, positions on boards of education, school committees, public libraries, religious or eleemosynary institutions, incorporated, established and sustained by State or municipal authority, and professorship in colleges, are not regarded as offices within the contemplation of the executive order. Officers of the federal government may, therefore, engage in such service provided the attention required by such employment does not interfere with the regular and efficient discharge of the duties of their office under the federal government. The head of the department under whom the federal officer is held will in all cases be the sole judge whether or not the employment does thus interfere. The executive order is not considered as prohibiting federal officers from being officers of the militia in the States and Territories, and unpaid service in local or municipal fire departments is not regarded as an office within the intent of the executive order, and may be performed by federal officers, provided it does not interfere with the regular and efficient discharge of duties of the federal office. Employment by the day, as mechanics or laborers in arsenals, navy yards, etc., does not constitute an office of any kind, and these thus employed are not within the contemplation of the executive order. Master workmen and others who hold appointments from the government or from any department, whether for a fixed time or at the pleasure of appointing power, are embraced within the operation of the order.

LITHOTRITY.—The process which proved fatal to Louis Napoleon is a French one, invented by Civiale. It offers itself as a bloodless substitute for the fearful operation of lithotomy, and it has the merit of vast ingenuity and some audacity. It uses a great variety of slender tubular instruments, through which drills may be passed or forceps-blades emerge and retract. But just with the news of this fatal attempt, comes a notice of a new knife for lithotomy, and the statement that the nine cases in which it has been used have all been successful.

W. J. C. Kenny, for many years freight agent of the Eastern R. R. at East Boston, retires Feb. 1 and assumes a like position recently vacated by Supt. Furber of the Boston & Maine. Thus this road has appropriated two of the absent men in the employ of the E. R. R., one at each end of the line, first being Payson Tucker at Portland, who is one of the most efficient and gentlemanly railroad conductors in Maine and whose departure was a serious loss to the old line.

Mark Twain publishes a card in the Hartford papers explaining the arrangements for his lecture on Friday evening, in aid of the poor of the city. His subject is to be the Sandwich islands, and he makes these statements as to the terms of admission: Lucca charges $4 a ticket, and so my first idea was to put our tickets at $4, too, and run opposition. But friends said, no, there was a difference—Lucca sings. I said, very well, I would sing, too. I showed them what I could do. But they still objected, and said that a mere disturbance was not singing. So I have come down to a dollar; but I do it with reluctance. Now we offer the following terms: All who have not already heard the lecture can pay a dollar and come in; and all who have heard it before can commute for two dollars a piece, and remain at home if they prefer. In which case the police will be instructed not to disturb them. But if they come to the hall they must behave, and not cry over old jokes that merely made them sad when they heard them before.

Some time ago a Danbury man loaned an eye doctor $100 to start in business. The trade wasn't very good, and the eye doctor sunk the money. What do you suppose his backer did? Sued the doctor? Not at all. He just got an umbrella with a hooked handle, and carried it under his arm. Three months afterwards that eye doctor paid back the $100 and next spring will lead one of our most accomplished heiresses to the altar.—Danbury News.

A SAD CASE.—Wednesday morning of last week, a horse and pung were found in Seabrook, near Hampton river. The horse had perished from exposure or exhaustion. A dog on the opposite side of the river was guardian of the team. The parties crossed the stream and followed the dog, which led them to his master. It seems that the team belonged in Haverhill and had been to Black Rocks, near the mouth of the Merrimac, for a load of clams. The driver left his horse unprotected in charge of his faithful dog, while he was filling himself with liquor. The horse being chilled, started up the beach, accompanied by the dog, until he came to the river, which he forded, and remained upon the other side, probably for the whole day. He was found, as before stated, dead, on one side of the river, and the dog watching upon the other, and the owner of the two brutes in a beastly state of intoxication.

SENATOR PATTERSON.—If the friends of Senator Patterson in Washington are "astounded" by the developments of the Credit Mobilier investigation, his friends in New Hampshire share that surprise to a painful degree. It is hinted in explanation that Senator Patterson says he signed a receipt without reading it. That plea is two weak and comes too late. We really hope that Senator Patterson will carry his tortuous testimony no further. The disgrace to himself, to his friends and to his State is already too deep and stinging.

In reflecting upon this matter, we think we see the fatal error that lies at the bottom of Senator Patterson's devious course. He entered politics ten years ago with a high personal reputation but with a very low idea of the ethics that obtain among politicians. Politicians are really no worse than other men, and there are but few sensible politicians who act upon the idea that "all is fair in politics." He who enters politics entertaining this idea is sure to be tripped by it sooner or later. A fear that Senator Patterson was half inclined to the "Liberal" movement turned the scale against him in the Senatorial contest last June. Many who had known him long and well had been forced by one circumstance and another to doubt his reliability both as a politician and a man. So, when his defeat came, the outside world, who knew him only by his fair reputation, were surprised, but that surprise was not shared by the well informed men of our own State. The Republican party, unlike any other that has gone before it, will not bestow its honors upon men of compromised reputations. It may be mistaken sometimes, and it may sometimes be slow to be undeceived, but when its faith in one of its idols is once shaken that idol is forever after a broken image.—Nashua Telegraph.

Centaur lay dreaming of the hour,
When mankind, cured of aching ills,

Straightened were limbs by pain long bent,
Cripples ran, and the lame on bended knee
Gave thanks for the Centaur Liniment.

When any householder shall know that any person within his family is sick of the small pox, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers: if any such householder shall refuse or neglect to do so he shall for such refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars.

The Singer

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running of needles or feed or prices—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER

IS THE

OLDEST

SEWING MACHINE

IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all others combined.

It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little attention; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tinctures of Lagellins, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but no thing has been so eminently successful, of obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unessaing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unequalled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, imparting strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HOW THE PACIFIC RAILROAD IS KEPT CLEAR OF SNOW.—We take the following from an interesting letter to the Chicago Tribune:

Observation along the extended portions on which the bed lay, from a few inches to three feet above the natural surface, showed the latter height to be the minimum requisite to give sufficient freedom and space for the wind to keep the bed clear of the snow. As respects the cuts, the slope which the snow took in the above instance—7 in 125—was naturally suggested as the proper one for the sides of the excavation. The true protection, then, lay; First, in rising the track, both on the open surface and in the cuts, to a height of at least three feet; secondly, in widening the cuts at the bottom sufficiently to give freedom and space to the snow, on either hand, and sloping the sides 7 in 125. For cuts of moderate depth, this plan has been found to answer without the use of sheds; in the case of deep cuts, however, the widening and sloping of which would be very expensive, snow-sheds have been retained or supplied.

Both Superintendent Sickels and Assistant Superintendent Clark accordingly became convinced, while "at the front" last winter, that at least two-thirds of the blockaded district could be effectually protected by simply raising the track; but, as ordinarily done, this was a work of far too great magnitude to accomplish in a single season; still, the necessity was urgent that the entire line be made secure against the uncertain emergencies of the present winter. A system was devised which should be far more expeditious than that of teams and manual labor. The locomotive was utilized, to draw both plows and scrapers, constructed on the following simple plan: A massive beam, extending across the bed from ditch to ditch, was fitted with two heavy plows at each end; and this "gang-plow," attached to a locomotive, was drawn at a maximum rate of two miles per hour; the locomotive scraper followed, excavating the furrows thus made on both sides, and throwing the dirt up against the bed.

Each set of these equipments was equal to a force of 200 men; and by this means an aggregate of about 100 miles of the bed of the snow region across and beyond Laramie Plains was raised from three to seven feet. Cuts were also widened—largely by the use of the steam shovel, operated by the locomotive—where their great depth did not preclude widening. To protect the deep cuts, where fencing was deemed inadequate, miles of new and substantial sheds have been built on a plan fully obviating the defects of the old fences; and the latter have been thoroughly repaired, lengthened, or rebuilt of better material. On this work exclusively, a force of 300 men was employed during the entire season. To the snow fences, additions amounting to 65 miles of the road have been made; and in many places, and for considerable distances, the fences have been placed in parallels several lines deep. The heavy work of last winter materially damaged the track at many points; and in all such cases new iron has been laid, and the track of the entire mountain division has been put into better condition than ever before. At the shops of the road, the already large equipment of snow-plows has been increased and greatly improved. Seventeen plows have been remodelled, and four mammoth ones constructed, weighing from 35 to 50 tons, and costing an average of $3000 each.

One of the most serious difficulties encountered last winter lay in obtaining an adequate supply of coal for extra consumption in clearing track over so great an extent of blockaded road. To meet any similar emergency in future, the storage capacity in that district has been increased 50 per cent., by the erection of eleven large coal-houses, which are kept constantly filled, ready for siege. In this connection, mention may be made of the arrangements for good water supply. During the construction of the road, and in its operation to a recent date, water had to be hauled from Green River, for all the uses of the road as far west as Rawlins, 142 miles. A system of artesian wells is in progress, with the most satisfactory results so far as completed. In the Bitter Creek Basin, four are in operation, from 500 to 1200 feet in depth, three carrying the water thirty feet and the other fifteen feet above the surface. The water obtained is pure and unfailing. The system is being extended east and west of this locality, to all points where the surface water is in any degree alkaline. Evidently this water supply is a sine qua non to the efficient operation of the road in the winter.

So far this winter, not a train has been delayed on the Union Pacific Road by snow, and there cannot possibly be greater liability to delay on this line, with the apparatus, offensive and defensive, above described, than there is on roads in the same latitude East. Indeed, as the event has so far proved, not nearly so great liability; for, on our roads, subject to greater occasional snow-fall, the providing of such extensive and costly works would be well nigh impracticable.

Readables.

The Bangor Whig says that advices from the woods state that lumbering is going on under great difficulties. The snow is very deep and the swamps were not sufficiently frozen before it came to make a good bottom, which renders teaming extremely difficult. Besides this, the horses used appear to have been much weakened by the epidemic, which affected them just before going into the woods, and many of them had the disease again.

Russia invades the country of the Khivans with an army of fifty thousand.

The Chicago papers are cheerful sheets. The Times "boasts" for the mortality tables of its city are something like this: "They Would Not Live Always." "One Hundred and Eighty-five who Refused to Stay Any Longer."

The Union Pacific railroad is open from Omaha to San Francisco, in spite of the snow.

A woman in Illinois has obtained a verdict of $1200 against a saloon keeper who sold her husband liquor, which made him drunk, whereupon he fell and broke his neck. Another woman out there was seen to spread soft soap upon the sidewalk over which her drunken husband would pass on his way home. She had an eye to business.

After several days of dry, electrical, north wind along the California coast line and far into the interior, with heavy sand-storms in the southern counties, the weather changed on Wednesday night and rain fell bountifully.

Gen. A. A. Humphreys, in a report just a transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of War, favors the continuance of certain works in New England.

A man at Hudson, Mich., found a baby on his steps, one night, and now says he would not take $1000 for it. His wife, though, casually remarked if any one would get up a purse of $7.50, they could have the infant and the old man too. No bidders, at last accounts, for "first choice" or "the field."

A case of small-pox or varioloid is reported in Exeter jail.

The precocious infant has been at it again. He emptied his father's powder-flask into the coal-scuttle, at New Jersey, last week, and stood stealthily by to await developments. When his mother replenished the fire the powder went off. And so did the mother. And the boy. And twelve baskets would have been utterly insufficient to contain the fragments. Both boy and mother have succeeded in collecting shattered portions of their frames, save lost eyesight in the last, and a peculiar disarrangement of anatomy which prevents the use of a slipper on the first.

Governor Dix declines to interfere in the case of John Gaffney, the murderer, sentenced to be hanged at Buffalo, February 7.

An impecunious unfortunate whose yearning desire for a drink could not be overcome, and whose finances were so low as to make the discovery of the requisite coin an impossibility, after having in vain implored the bar keeper to give him one on trust, took from his mouth a set of teeth and offered to pawn them for the desired liquor. His last argument was answered promptly and he got his drink, but now has to gum it.

A dispatch from London confirms the statements concerning the steamer which sank the emigrant ship Northfleet in the British Channel. It was the Spanish steamer Murillo,* which received no injury herself, and she stayed her course not a moment to ascertain what injury she had done, or save the lives of the unfortunate passengers on the Northfleet.

A special to the Boston Herald says Messrs. Patterson and Garfield have decided not to reappear before the Credit Mobilier investigation committee.

"He picked up the child and took it to its mother." A Missouri editor makes this quotation from a contemporary who was describing the rescue of a child from danger by one of the "border affairs," and then adds: "Why not be accurate, and say, if the child was a girl, he took her to her mother; or, if a boy, define his sex, and so give the little devil his due."

A California paper says: Streams are very high in Southern Oregon at the present time. The Umpqua raised one foot last night; it will raise the other, probably, within the next twenty-four hours, when it will run.

It is only honest farmers in Iowa who fill ducks with water and then let them freeze before taking them to market. In Minnesota the ducks freeze flying.

Gov. Noyes ignores all responsibility for the selection of Senator Patterson to preside over the Ohio Agricultural College. It was the work of the Board of Trustees, who will probably be relieved from the disagreeable duty of revoking their action by an early decimation of the proffered trust. The "irony of fate" is well illustrated by the fact that the intended President was also to have filled the chair of Moral Philosophy.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

Dr. Hochestetter in the Revue Hebdomadaire de Chimie, describes some curious experiments with sulphur, which serve to explain some volcanic phenomena. When sulphur is heated under water, and with a pressure of forty-five pounds to the square inch, the sulphur absorbs some of that fluid. As the sulphur cools this is driven out by steam, accompanied by explosions. When the quantity of sulphur is large, an upheaving takes place, craters are formed, and molten sulphur is ejected.

It is said that good Mr. Pomeroy, in a moment of abstraction, took the clerk of his Senate committee—on Pacific railroads—along, when he started for Topeka to hold prayer and conference meetings with inquiring Kansas legislatures. The result is that the committee find it impossible to transact business.

The Cincinnati Times has been doing conundrums. Here is the result of its labors: Who is the model father-in-law of the period? Answer—James Brooks. Who is the kind-hearted man that wants to help everybody? Answer—Oakes Ames. Who had Credit Mobilier stock and didn't know it? Answer—James W. Patterson.

The Boston Herald asks what sort of a Christian is he who makes early prayers and neglects to sprinkle ashes on his icy sidewalks? Verily, he is no nearer the kingdom than he who scatters orange peel about in the summer.

The race of fools are continually endeavoring to improve themselves off the face of the earth, but they do it so bunglingly that they have deplorably M. success. Three full grown idiots in Vermillion County, Indiana, lately undertook to walk half a mile in the snow barefooted, the one who suffered least to be rewarded with a pound of tobacco, and the one who suffered most to purchase the same. They merely had their toes amputated.

ACCIDENT TO AN ENGINE.—As the early passenger train of Thursday morning was proceeding between South Berwick Junction and Conway Junction—perhaps better known as Brock's Crossing—the engine blew out one of her cylinder heads and broke her parallel rods, and the pieces flew in all directions, one coming up through the cab immediately beneath the place where the engineer usually sits. The engine was one of the best on the road, known as the Gov. Goodwin, Ira Warren, engineer. She was backed into Portland. At Saco, where she arrived at 12 o'clock A. M., it was found necessary to use jack screws to adjust her springs that had become di-placed.

SMALL-POX.—A gentleman of Saco stepped into the first noon down train at Salmon Falls, on Friday, and entered the smoking-car. He there observed a man with his face broken out and in a decidedly uninviting condition, and he immediately divined it to be a case of small-pox and so gave the stranger a wide berth. At North Berwick, the Saco gentleman stepped into the baggage car, where he found several persons discussing the condition of the stranger, and they were of the opinion that it was a case of small-pox. The conductor entered the car where the sick man was and asked him the cause of his indisposition, when he remarked that he had a sore throat and did not feel well. That car was deserted, and when the train passed here the stranger had a whole car to himself. He probably went through to Portland.—Biddeford Times.

NATIONAL BAZAR.—The Boston Young Men's Christian Association has hit upon a novel way of paying its old debts. It has just opened a building that cost $125,000, and opened its eyes to the fact that it is $65,000 in debt. In order to raise money to remove this burden it is to have a "Bazar of All Nations" at Music Hall, opening on the 28th of April and continuing twenty-four days, at which shall be reproduced and illustrated the architecture, costumes, both civil and military, the street scenes, shops, and somewhat of the domestic life of twelve different nationalities, including the German, Swiss, Chinese, Italian, old English, Venetian, French, Russian, Scotch, Swedish, Turkish and Syrian. Architectural plans have already been prepared for a complete transformation of the interior of Music Hall, by which full-sized houses with some thirty feet front will be presented to the visitor as he would find them in visiting these various countries, decorated with the trade signs, banners, draperies, balconies, and awnings of the respective nationalities they represent. These buildings will be from eight to twenty feet in depth, and reaching through several stories to the very ceiling of the hall.

DAN GODFREY, the leader of the British Grenadier Band, has forwarded Mr. Gilmore a handsome service of plate for the dinner-table, from himself and the members of the band, and some personal ornaments from himself, accompanied by a most cordial letter, gratefully acknowledging the attention received by them from Mr. Gilmore when attending the Boston Jubilee. Enclosed also were copies of letters from the Prince of Wales, Duke of Cambridge and others, expressing their gratification at the friendly spirit in which the band was received in Boston.

THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.—We mentioned some time since a statement that a young man was engaged in the completion of The Mystery of Edwin Drood, writing as a medium, at the dictation of the spirit of Charles Dickens. The medium, we learn further, is a German printer of Brattleboro, Vt., thirty-five years of age, intelligent, but without genius so far as his friends understand him. He says he has never read a single one of the works of Mr. Dickens, much less the one in course of publication at the time of the novelist's death; yet he has produced some of the peculiar features of the latter, and some of his manuscript bears evidence at least of a very good imitation of Dickens' style.

We have been shown letters from two prominent citizens of Brattleboro, both of them disbelievers in spiritualism, and one of them especially cautious against all manner of isms, and they appear to be very much impressed with the work of the medium as far as it has progressed. One of them remarks that parts of the manuscript are "so unmistakably Dickens' style that no one not blind with prejudice would doubt it"—and of course we are reminded that it is one thing to have Dickens' style, and another to have his own work. The medium works three evenings a week, accomplishing eight or ten pages at a sitting, and he calculates—or, rather, the spirit of Mr. Dickens does—that it will take about six months to complete the Mystery.

He began on Christmas Eve last, according to the special request of the spirit—a period, remarks the latter, "the dearest, holiest to me of all the year when on earth." We have been shown several pages of manuscript, copied from the original, including the "Dedication," the "Preface — which treats of the whys and the wherefores," &c., and, to tell the truth are not particularly impressed with them. Some expressions are in the style of Mr. Dickens, but many more are decidedly unlike him; and the opening pages bear a striking similarity to the common place work of most mediums, being a gushing tribute to spiritualism and a general invitation to the cold unbelieving world to embrace the faith.—Rochester Democrat.

—The horrible effects of a recent storm up the river are depicted in graphic colors by an editor, who, among other pieces of descriptive writing, says: "The storm of last week would seem to have been even more terrible at Sioux City than here. LOCAL AFFAIRS.

A Mournful Prospect.

It is with feelings of intense concern that we contemplate the profound sorrow which will fill the hearts of the people of Portsmouth on the 4th of next month. The government tomahawk has been fitted with a new handle,—and a mighty long one it is, — and federal officials who at the same time hold State or municipal offices are notified that they must resign the latter,—or off come their heads. How deeply this order affects the welfare of our city can be seen by a glance at the brilliant array of home talent of whose services the city will be deprived after the 4th of next month. Yet the dark prospect will doubtless be lightened by such a display of magnanimous patriotism as the world has rarely seen, on the part of the threatened officials.

Ceasar, we are told in history, on one occasion came with his army to a wretched fishing village, whose entire wealth consisted of an eel-spear and a paper of fish-hooks rescued from the Boston fire, and where a pot of blue paint furnished a full suit of clothes for the whole population; yet Ceasar said he had rather be Mayor of that village than an alderman at Rome. There spoke an inordinate personal ambition; no thought of or care for country there; no hint of patriotism. But different sentiments animate the breast of the noble men threatened by the executive order concerning double-barrelled office holding, and we confidently expect to see them throw aside all prospect of ever being at the head of municipal affairs in Portsmouth, and immolate themselves on the altar of their country,—to see them calmly resign their positions on the Board of Aldermen and Common Council, and stick to the Navy Yard, the United States courts and the Treasury. Such patriotism should not go unrewarded, and if our information is correct it will not, for we understand that a movement is on foot to present to each official who sacrifices his personal interest in municipal affairs and devotes his talents and energies to the good of the nation, with a superb chromo, "valued" at ten dollars.

The following list of gentlemen whose patriotism is expected to outweigh their personal ambition, will be read with feelings little less sad than those aroused by the New York Herald's Credit Mobilier obituaries:—

A. F. Howard, Esq., City Solicitor, and U. S. Deputy Collector and Inspector.

Major Daniel J. Vaughan, U. S. Pension Agent, and Moderator of Ward One.

John E. Giddings, Master-workman at the Navy Yard, and member of the Board of Aldermen.

William W. Palfrey, Clerk to the Civil Engineer at the Navy Yard, and member of the Common Council.

Israel P. Miller, Writer to Receiver and Inspector in Bureau of Yards and Docks at the Navy Yard, and President of the Common Council.

Albert R. Hatch, Clerk of U. S. District Court, and member of the Board of Aldermen.

Daniel L. Randall, Foreman of Laborers at the Navy Yard, and Selectman of Ward Two.

John H. Locke, Inspector of Lumber, at the Navy Yard, and Selectman of Ward One.

If all the above-named officials resign their municipal positions, the "City Government" will be somewhat thinned out. The Board of Aldermen is one short of its full number now, and two resignations will reduce the membership to five,—any three of whom will be omnipotent in city affairs.

The Common Council will also be three members short, and will have to choose another chairman and re-arrange committees,—unless the whole Council resigns, which, considering its entire uselessness, would not be a bad plan. The Joint Committee on Accounts, which is appointed by the Mayor and consists of two Aldermen and one Common Councilman, will lose two members and have only its chairman left,—enough, however, to audit and approve in good shape the bills for the "repairs" on the City Building. But the vacancies will not exist long, as the city election takes place March 11th.

CURIOUS RELIC.—Mr. C. H. Stearns, of the fire alarm office, has in his possession an interesting memento of the Revolutionary War, in the shape of an antique and elaborately carved powder horn which he obtained from Mr. Geo. Silloway, a soldier of the war of 1812 stationed at the fort at the mouth of the Piscataqua river, near Portsmouth.

On one side of the horn, within a border of scroll work, is the name of the original owner, "Edward Sherburne, His Horn, Jan. 23, 1776."

Above this panel a file of British and one of Patriot troops are preparing to exchange a sharp fusillade. On the largest part of the horn the Lion and Unicorn act as supporters to a heart shaped escutcheon, bearing the inscription, "Success to Liberty," and underneath, "made at Cambridge." All the remaining space on the horn is crowded with curious engravings, representing a turtle, a fish, pine trees, deer and other beasts of the field difficult to identify.

Edward Sherburne, whose handiwork it is, one of the sons of Hon. Henry Sherburne, of Portsmouth, at the commencement of hostilities in the revolutionary war, repaired to Cambridge and entered as a volunteer in the service of his country at his own expense. Soon after he became Aid to Gen. Sullivan. At the evacuation of Boston, the army be ing ordered by Gen. Washington to New York, he proceeded thither at his own expense, and was in all the battles in New Jersey. When the army evacuated New York in consequence of the enemy taking possession, was ordered to Philadelphia. At the battle of Germantown he was severely wounded. While carrying orders in front of both armies he received the wound of which he died. The General commended him much for his bravery, and said much to his family in praise of his general character. He spent most of his property in the service of his country.

Laconics.

The annual meeting of the Eastern Railroad Company takes place to day at Boston. The trains from this city will doubtless be crowded by the fair sex.

The Railroad Commissioners concluded their deliberations on Saturday on the matter of land damages on the route of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad. The Noble estate, one-fifth, was awarded $500; and $1200 was awarded Mark H Wentworth, Esq., for crossing his farm. President Jones testified that the cost of the land on the route of the Road was $175 to $200 per acre.

Lieut. John F. Merry is detached from the Navy Yard and ordered to the U. S. S. Juniata.

The committee of one hundred will meet at the City Rooms this evening at half past 7 o'clock.

Le Follet says the bonnets now worn are much improved since the modification in their shape. They are still worn high, and quite backward on the head, with string tied under the chin, or under the back hair, according to the style of the rest of the toilet. The Spanish veil is much worn, and generally very becoming.

DO FISH HEAR?—Mr. Seth Green, who has so much experience in raising fish, was recently reported to have denied that fish could hear. Several parties took him up and cited authorities to prove the contrary. Mr. Green in a card in the Rochester Democrat defends his theory by the following anecdote:—

I will tell you how I got my opinion that fish cannot hear. I had a pond at Caledonia about one hundred feet long, fifteen feet wide and four feet deep, with a gentle current running through just enough to keep the fish moving their tails to retain their places. I had about 2,000 large trout in it, weighing from one to three and one-half pounds. These fish would lay for hours and perfectly still unless disturbed, except the gentle motion of there fins to keep them in place. I stationed Mr. David Day, about half way up the pond, had him lay flat, face down and with his arms extended into the water. He held a stone weighing six pounds in each hand. I then took my place on the top of the house, the convenient place to see, and lying down, waited until the fish took their accustomed places. After that I called to David to knock the stones together. David knocked and knocked, and not a fish made a motion, except the slightest movement continually kept up. There are but very few of your male readers who do not know what a sharp sound has gone through their heads while under water, when some mischievous boy bit two stones together under water. After the above experiment, I took my gun and fired it repeatedly as near the pond as I could and not have the trout see the flash. Not one stirred. Then I took a long plank, and standing back from the pond, I slapped it down upon the ground, and the fish would make a quick start. It was because of the jar, and that is the only way fish hear.

The jury at Manchester, after being out all night, failed to agree in the case of Joseph B. Stickney vs. T. B. How. The trial of this case had occupied nearly a week. The action was brought against the defendant, who is a physician and surgeon, alleged malpractice in the treatment of a fractured thigh-bone. The fracture was not discovered until the ninth day, and the patient was kept in bed about 100 days. Drs. Kimball of Lowell, Hitchcock of Fitchburg, Phillips of Windom, Vt., Mason of Providence, Graves of Nashua, and others, were examined as experts. The case excited much interest, especially among medical men.

The dwelling-house and shed of James B. Quimby of Lisbon, about four miles from the village, were destroyed by fire at one o'clock, Friday morning. Part of the contents were saved. Loss about $1000. The fire took from a defect in the chimney.

The trial of Evans, the murderer, commences to-day at Exeter. A panel of seventy jurors has been ordered from which to select a jury. Gen. Gilman Marston will conduct the prosecution, on account of the sickness of Solicitor Frink. Three days, it is thought, will bring the trial to a close.

Morning Chronicle.

HOW TO AVOID CONTAGION IN SMALL-POX.—The following suggestions and directions which are going the rounds will be of interest, and possibly of value to some of our readers:

1. On the first appearance of the disease, the patient should be placed in a separate apartment, as near the top of the house as possible, from which curtains, carpets, bedhangings, and other needless articles of furniture should be removed, and no person except the medical attendant and the nurse should be permitted to enter the room.

2. A basin containing a solution of chloride of lime, or carbolic acid, should be placed near the bed for the patient to spit in.

3. Handkerchiefs not to be used, but pieces of rags instead, for wiping the nose of the patient. Each piece, after being used, should be immediately burned.

4. A plentiful supply of water and towels should be kept for the use of the nurse, whose hands, of necessity will be soiled by the secretions of the patient. In one hand basin the water should be impregnated with Condy's fluid of chloride, by which the taint on the hands may at once be removed.

5. Outside the door of the sick room, a sheet should be suspended, so as to cover the entire doorway; this should be kept constantly wet with a solution of lime. The effect of this will be to keep every other part of the house free from infection.

6. The discharges of the bowels and kidneys of the patient should be received into vessels charged with disinfectants, such as the solution of carbolic acid or chloride of lime, and immediately removed. By these means the poison thrown off from internal surfaces may be rendered inert, and deprived of the power of propagating disease.

Sparges is of the opinion that the reason that the devil is always located in the printing office is because no one pi enough inclined is tolerated in such an establishment.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible disease engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Disease. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, has at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is endorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupulina, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Alleravtor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequaled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleravtor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution for the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

A HAPPY SECRETARY.—The Secretary of the Navy is noted for the very good and appropriate things he can say on the spur of the moment, which reputation is deserved. At the President's levee on Wednesday evening, Secretary Robeson, while talking with one lady, accidentally stepped on the train of another behind him. The wearer of the latter, feeling herself to be fixed to the spot, turned to the Secretary, and—finding him immovable, as have the relations and friends of the "middles" who are entreating for the Academy the privilege of assisting at the inauguration ceremonies—said, "I beg pardon, Mr. Secretary, you are standing on my train." Secretary Robeson turned instantly and replied, "Though I may not have the power to draw a mortal from the skies, I have pinned an angel to the earth." "Oh, Mr. Secretary," exclaimed the lady, "please step on my train again; I want to be a angel, and I'd rather not move."—N. Y. World.

Montpelier claims the champion dead beat. He is a railroad stockholder, and wanted to attend the stockholders' meeting at St. Albans. Of course the railroad passed him, and as he was obliged to stay over night, he slept in an arm-chair at the hotel. Six cents worth of crackers furnished him with supper and breakfast.

A school teacher in Bashan district (Webster) was drawn to the schoolhouse on a hand-sled, by six boys, on the 29th, three-fourths of a mile, the highways being filled with snow, and the mercury 5 degrees below zero.

A CURIOSITY.—Last Tuesday evening a gentleman in Saco had occasion to take a gallon oyster can down town. Just before starting out, his wife poured some hot water into it, shook it up and then poured it out, putting in the bung. The gentleman took the can in his hand and started down town, but while on the way he heard a noise as if proceeding from the can, which he immediately raised and found that one side of it was bent in and doubled up as if some one had taken hold with the fingers and thumb and pressed it between them. The other side of the can, toward the gentleman's person, was of the ordinary shape. This "freak" was probably caused by the displacement of the cold air by the hot water, the close stoppage of the can and then taking it suddenly into the cold air; the air within suddenly became condensed, causing a vacuum, and the pressure of the atmosphere upon the outside caused the warping of the can. The can will be placed in the York Institute.—Biddeford Times.

CARELESSNESS IN DRESS.—Many women who before their marriage made it their duty to please the man they wished to marry lose their affections after marrying by carelessness in dress. Men are fastidious in this matter. Even those who are careless in regard to their own appearance take delight in seeing their wives neat in appearance. They miss those coquettish garments and neatly dressed hair and the thousand tasty and fanciful little articles with which young women adorn themselves more than they would be willing to allow. The neatness and order which charmed them too often give place to a slovenly morning gown, frowsy hair, slipshod and unlaced shoes and the like. Men reason that they should have the same desire to please the man they have chosen after marriage as before it. The last new song loses it charm, coming from the lips of a slattern. The poetry goes out of life at a glance, and the household loses brightness. The wife who, on account of household cares, neglects her personal appearance, commits a grave mistake, which too often bears bitter fruit, and their husbands leave their society for that of others without really knowing the cause. Most men are too proud to tell them. Let the women give the same care to dress after marriage which they gave it before, and not rush from the room to "dress up" only when there is a prospect of company. Let them consider that that which gives them a charm in the eyes of their friend has a like effect on a husband, and they will see that he will not have so many business calls in the city in the evening, but will have the same delight in their society as in the days of courtship.

POLITICAL DISABILITIES REMOVED.—The House passed with a great hurrah and amid confusion, fun, and some excitement, late this afternoon, the bill relieving Hon. William A. Graham, of North Carolina, from his political disabilities. In the midst of the disorder, Mr. Peters, of Maine, shouted out in reply to some objection to the bill, that he didn't care what Graham had done, he was an excellent gentleman and a good fellow and ought to be relieved, in which he seemed to strike the keynote. When the viva voce vote was called for nearly every member present voted "yea" in a perfect yell; nobody shouted "no"! Mr Graham it will be remembered, was a candidate for Vice-President in 1852 on the ticket with Gen. Scott.—Cor. Post.

To Republican Voters.

Two years ago you lost the election in this State through local feuds, distracting national questions, and too great confidence in your own strength and too little in the strength of your opponents. A year ago you threw aside all petty differences and resolutely engaged to redeem the State. You boldly pronounced for the re-election of U. S. Grant and a continuance of the policy of his administration for another term. Your boldness and sagacity were the inspiration of the victory that crowned the spring campaign of 1872. You struck the keynote for the Philadelphia convention; you led the elections whose advance verdict gave an irresistible impulse to the republican cause, and in the roll-call of States in November you more than fulfilled your early promise.

We are now entered upon another campaign. In State convention we have solemnly reaffirmed the principles that won the overwhelming endorsement of the country in the recent election, and we have firmly demanded that they shall be made effectual in the administration of the State and Nation. A response to that demand has come already in the absolute abolition of the franking privilege, which promptly begins the work of reform to which the Philadelphia platform pledged the Republican party. That work must be promptly and resolutely carried forward, and to that end the ascendency and integrity of the party that has undertaken it must be maintained. If any of the many we have intrusted with the work falter or fail, they should be sent to the rear, while the true and firm close up the ranks and press right on. Stragglers cannot be permitted to impair the efficiency or defeat the mission of the Republican organization. Individuals are nothing; the Republican party, with its great work done and yet to be done, is everything.

The coming contest in our State ought to be easily won. We have no divisions in our ranks; no national issues to distract us. Our candidates are among the ablest and truest men of the States. We have only to cast our votes on the 11th of March to repeat the brilliant victory that we won on the 5th of November. But let us not be over confident. Our old opponent confronts us. He has cut off all alliances and lapsed into the organization that was surrendered at Baltimore. It is an attempt to backslide after a new confession of faith. It is additional evidence that the principles maintained in common during the presidential campaign can be safely entrusted only to the republican party which has steadily and triumphantly upheld them for eighteen years.

We have now a large and reliable republican majority in New Hampshire, and the result of the next election ought to increase rather than diminish it. Our fierce political contests absorb too much of the time and attention of those whose efforts should be jointly directed to the development of the resources of the State. With the ascendancy of the Republican party firmly established, the latent enterprise and energy of our people will feel no repression, the best of our political struggles will abate, and merit will take the place of partisan activity, and magnanimity the place of party exclusiveness. To attain this "era of good feeling," so essential to the best interests of the State, we invite the co-operation of all sensible and patriotic men.

OREN C. MOORE,
Chairman Republican State Committee.
B. F. PRESCOTT, Secretary.

S. J. Court.

The following are the jurors:—Sewell W. Dow, Hampton, Foreman; Daniel Moulton, Hampton; Eben F. Garland, Exeter; Timothy Lynch, Greenland; Nathan Berry, Greenland; Morris H. Smith, North Hampton; Jeremiah Tilton, Kensington; John Sanborn, Epping; John Gordon, Newton; Ezra M. Gale, Newton; Wm. M. Hunnewell, Exeter; Moses J. French, Kingston.

The Newburyport Ghost.

Probably no ghost story has ever travelled further, been more widely copied in the papers, or has been more generally believed than that of the ghost in a Newburyport school-house, said to be. So great has the excitement become, that several illustrated papers have given it most base representations, with an exception—that of Frank Leslie's Illustrated. Leslie sent his artist there and he stayed four days and obtained a very perfect picture and description of the affair alleged to have taken place. One artist, with an ambition worthy a better cause, offered Miss Perkins, the heroine, $100 for her picture, but like a modest, retiring lady as she is, she refused the offer.

In order to glean some truthful history of the affair, two members of the Boston press visited Newburyport last night and viewed the schoolhouse and interviewed several of the prominent men of the town, among others, members of the school board and teachers in the other schools, some of the latter of whom have visited the school building several times, and have, as will be seen, investigated the strange sounds from a scientific standard.

Presuming that most of our readers are familiar with the history as it has been given, we will not dwell upon that more than to say that the reputed strange sights and sounds first occurred about a year ago. The little boy with the golden locks and pretty face was not seen by Miss Perkins until about two months ago. About that time an officer arrested a Currier boy as the chap who was creating the sensation. Through threats and promises he was made to confess that he was the cause of the mischief, but he afterwards told his mother that he never had anything to do with it and told the policeman what he did so as to get away. The following verses were written by Mrs. Currier, the mother of the boy, and published in a Newburyport paper:

"Now, I will tell you the reason why,
Ellen and Mary did tell a lie;
To the station house they made him go,
And scared him to it, as you all know.
And now he is sorry as sorry can be,
For he wasn't the ghost and the ghost wasn't he;
He is a good boy now, and his name is Currier,
And he tells his mamma that he won't again worry her."

The teacher said that she also saw a human face looking into the school room through the glass door that leads to the entry. It is now well known that this was nothing but the hands, which some of the boys put up on the outside, and as it was dark and the teacher having got somewhat nervous, she imagined that it was a face.

Again she said she saw the same face looking down the ventilator. This face, so near as can be ascertained was simply another representation of the same kind. As has been said, Miss Perkins claims to have seen the boy going up the stairs, and says that when she struck at him he vanished; previous to this, we are told, she said that it was a real boy that she struck at, and that she hit him.

Then it was said that there were noises overhead as of something dragging and thumping; this has been ascertained to have been caused by an old tin ventilator in the shape of a stove-pipe.

Strange sounds were heard to come from the cellar; the boys have owned up to having been the instruments of this trouble. Other strange and seemingly unaccountable sounds were traced to different houses and stables in the neighborhood. Now but one thing remains to be fathomed; that of the sound of lips which were said to have freightened the teacher and school. An Alderman of the city visited the school one afternoon and thought he detected the strange sound of lips, whereupon he called the scholars out into the aisle and the sounds immediately ceased. Investigation revealed the fact that the sounds were but the echoes caused by the peculiar construction of the benches.

About six weeks ago the School Committee voted to close the school to visitors, and a carpenter has been employed to do a little tinkering. For a month nothing has been seen or heard out of the usual course, and the school has continued until the present week without interruption, and the sensation would have died out but for the fact that the papers have taken it in hand and set it circulating.

Miss Perkins, the teacher, is spoken of by every one as a very estimable young lady, and is said to have never attended spiritual meetings, and even now, notwithstanding the spiritualists tell her that she is a superior medium, she disclaims any and all belief in the creed.

The excitement has so worked upon her mind that she is now confined to her room, which, as she is an orphan and helps support her grandparents, is very unfortunate.

Finally, what was it? It was the wind drumming through an old and peculiarly constructed schoolhouse, together with the work of mischievous boys. As least that is what those who have fully investigated the affair say. There are, however, even now, some of the most sober-minded people of Newburyport, and members of the Orthodox church withal, who still believe that the sights and sounds were caused by some supernatural agencies. Boston Times.

HOW IT CAME OUT.—Oakes Ames' letters to McComb concerning the Credit Mobilier transactions were stolen by three burglars from the referee's office in Philadelphia, last summer, who obtained admission on a pretence of measuring the room for a carpet. They were offered to Augustus Schell, chairman of the democratic national committee, who declined to have anything to do with them, and they were ultimately sold to Dana for $1500.

VACCINATION, COLD, FEVER AND DEATH.—The Manchester Union says that Hester A. Donaldson, aged 19, went to that city about a month ago, and a week ago was vaccinated with virus taken from a cow. On Monday of last week, she was taken sick, and died of fever on Friday, superinduced by cold taken after vaccination. The Union says there are some circumstances connected with her illness and death which render it a particularly painful case and casts odium upon some members of the medical profession.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN MEDICINE.—It is difficult to induce the medical profession to abandon the old grooves in which it has traveled for centuries. Purgation, venesection, opium ization and blisteration and its team of venerable hobbies, and it does not like to harness up the new four-in-hand of invigoration, regulation, purification and renovation, and take a new departure. Advanced practitioners, however, who are not wedded to old dogmas, admit that in Hostetter's Stomach Bisters we possess, so to speak a counter-charm to the malign influences that produce various diseased conditions. They do not deny that in cases of general debility, in nervous complaints, and in all disturbances of the liver, the bowels, and the digestive organs, this powerful and wholesome vegetable remedy effects extraordinary cures. The public rendered this verdict many years ago, and the enlightened members of the profession acquiesce in it. Better late than never.

PORTSMOUTH GAS LIGHT CO.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of stockholders of the Portsmouth Gas Light Company will be held in the office of the Agent, over No. 36 Market street, Portsmouth, at 3 o'clock, P. M., on Tuesday, February 11th, 1873 for the choice of officers for the ensuing year, and for any other business which may legally come before them. DAVID KIMBALL, Clerk.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success o the Company is far beyond that o any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model. Over two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all others combined.

It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

N. B. Those purchasing for cash, before the 1 of January next, will have a consideration allowed them.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

A Correction.

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 3.

Messrs. Editors:—I desire to correct some of the misstatements contained in an article copied in the CHRONICLE of Feb. 1st, under the head of "Local Affairs."

☞The Mayor has not been "instructed to call the Common Council together," so that the errors in the new ordinance could be corrected by the concurrent action of the two Boards. By vote of the Aldermen, at a meeting held Dec. 28th, the Bill relating to the Fire department was put back on its second reading, and referred, with the City Solicitor's opinion thereon, to Ald. Giddings, Waldron and Hatch, with such Councilmen as the Council may appoint, for amendment. The Aldermen acted promptly; the other Board has not appointed its committee.

The joint Rules of the City Councils provide that the Councils may meet Thursday evenings of each week; therefore there was no need to call a special meeting. The Council does not stand adjourned to the call of the Mayor, though it has not held a meeting since the 21st of November, if the records are correct, the absence of a quorum alone preventing.

The base insinuation that any ill feeling exists between the Mayor and the majority of the Aldermen, that could prevent justice being done the firemen, is out of place in the columns of a paper edited by a gentleman with whom I am intimately associated in the City Government. If I have ever made any "professions of friendship for 'the Fireman" who requested the republication of the epistle to the New York Mercury, I am heartily ashamed of it.

Yours Respectfully.

T. E. O. MARVIN.

We give place to Mayor Marvin's communication, as we did to the extract from the correspondence of the New York Mercury at the request of a fireman, adding only by way of remark that the fact that one of the editors of this paper is "intimately associated in the city government" with the Mayor, does not give the latter gentleman a censor's privilege, and that so far as the correspondence referred to is concerned, it was not "out of place in our columns" to allow a criticism on the Mayor's supposed conduct to appear. His Honor is not justified in classing as his opponents, those who do not deem it necessary to defend every action he chooses to take, in matters grave or trivial.—Eds.Chron.]

Small-pox at Newcastle.

A young man named Tredick, at Newcastle, has the small-pox. It is a light case. If our information is correct, the disease was contracted in a singular manner. Young Tredick and another boy were gunning at "the Pool," and landed on Pest Island, where a little dog ran down to them and was patted and caressed. Not long afterward Tredick was taken ill with small pox, and he and his companion on the gunning excursion are now isolated. As it is not known that the youth had been exposed to the disease except at the Pest Island in the manner above described, it is supposed the dog must have carried the infection from the hospital in his hair and communicated it to the boy by actual contact. If this is so, people should be shy of caressing strange dogs while small pox is prevalent.

Laconics.

The thermometer has indicated two degrees below zero at the Isles of Shoals once this winter, which is said to be remarkable there.

The small-pox scare didn't deter a larger crowd than usual from going to Boston on Monday, to attend the annual meeting of the Eastern Railroad.

Daniel Corkery, conductor on the Portsmouth, Great Falls and Conway freight train, was seriously injured at East Wakefield on Saturday afternoon by being run over by the engine of his train, which passed over his right leg below the knee. He was carried to his home in Union and his leg was amputated.

James Stanley, who stole the buffalo robe from deputy sheriff Lougee, was released from jail on Monday. Marshal Johnson gave him notice to leave town, as men of his character were not wanted here.

The Biddeford Times says the Pythian club played to a slim audience there, tho' their performance was good.

We have information which leads us to believe that the vacancy in the Custom House will not be filled at present; also that the nomination of Mr. John E. Rider for a position in the Boston Custom House will not be confirmed by Secretary Bontwell.

Corporal Rogers, a marine, is missing from the U. S. S. Sabine. He bore a good character, and as his month's pay was due and he had $500 in a savings bank, it is unlikely he ran away and it is feared he has been drowned.

It is said the fishing steamer G. W. Hunt brought in nine tons of fish on Saturday.

A grocer's horse ran away with and smashed a pung on Monday, and was then led away looking as meek as if that was not the third pung he had broken up inside of a week. There were two harmless runaways on Sunday.

Work is suspended in Bureau of Yards and Docks at the Navy Yard.

Eastern R. R.

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Railroad company, in Boston, Monday, the old Board of Directors were chosen with one exception. Hon. Ichabod Goodwin, after 25 years service, declined a re-election, and Hon. Frank Jones was chosen in his stead, receiving 6200 votes, all there were cast. The receipts of the Road for the year were $2,827,641.86; expenses $2,004,-746 28; dividends and interest, $504,-563.98; balance $318,301.65. The cost of the Revere disaster thus far is $434,784.88. A vote of thanks to Ex-Gov. Goodwin, the retiring Director, was passed.

Municipal Reform.

Messrs. Editors:—As your readers have had a respite from me for several weeks, I think they must now be sufficiently recovered to be able to stand another one of my articles on Municipal Reform. In former ones I have endeavored to show, and I have succeeded in showing, that the Common Council is no check at all upon the Board of Aldermen; and from this I argue either that the city charter and ordinances should be so reconstructed as to give the Council some power, or that the Council should be abolished and the Board of Aldermen so increased in numbers that the vote of four or five members will not suffice to multiply or override the expressed wishes of a majority of the whole body of citizens.

At the time I commenced to write on this subject I was wholly ignorant that any person had ever entertained similar views with myself; but after several of my articles had appeared, a former President of the Common Council told me "It was just so when I was in the Council—we had no power, and I was not long in finding it out," and another Ex-President of the Council informed me that he was so thoroughly impressed with the uselessness of that body, while he was its chairman, that he took the initiatory steps to secure its abolition by the State Legislature, only political jealousy preventing the movement being carried out or at least pressed as far as possible.

I have shown that the Common Council is powerless to check any extraordinary expense by the Aldermen, even when backed by public opinion; but I have not stated, what is equally true, that the Council has no voice whatever in regulating or directing the ordinary expenses of the city, and that after an appropriation is once made for any department, the Council knows nothing of how the money is expended. When an appropriation is exhausted, the Council is notified of that fact,—and that is all the Council has to do with it. Every year the President of the Council goes through the farce of appointing three members to serve on "joint standing committes," on school-houses, streets, fire department, etc.; the Mayor also appoints two Aldermen on each of these "joint" committees; but Aldermanic members of any committee exercise absolute control over the affairs of their department, the Council's committee, so far as I know, never being consulted as to what shall be, or informed of what has been, done. After the annual appropriation bill is passed, the Common Council is entirely ignored by the Board of Aldermen, and only serves to divide the responsibility with the latter, while absolutely powerless to advance or to hinder any scheme, however good or bad.

This plan of conducting the affairs of the city I think is not a good one; and the remedy for it is simple. The abolition of the lower branch of the city government would fix the undivided responsibility where the undivided power now is; and a reasonable increase in the number of Aldermen would obviate much of the danger of any two or three men gaining entire control of the affairs of the city. The Cancer—The Remedy.

Beyond what has been contained in the regular congressional proceedings we have thus far confined our mention of the Credit Mobilier affair to a brief history of the institution up to the time it become a subject of Congressional investigation. First, because, in the midst of the statements and counter-statements, the charges and denials, which have attended the investigation, it was impossible to decide upon the guilt or innocence of accused parties, and, secondly, because our limited space forbade even an intelligible abstract of the voluminous testimony in the case. At last, however, the evidence has come down to hard-pan, and the relation which certain Congressmen have borne to this Credit Mobilier is no longer a matter of conjecture, and it is very evident that the stock which was placed in the hands of Messrs. Durant and Ames for a "peculiar purpose" was not long in finding purchasers. Indeed, Mr. Durant appears to have carried out his plan of "seeing" the Democratic members, and Mr. Ames to have executed his purpose of "fixing" Republican members in such a way as to have induced nearly all the gentlemen who had a chance to invest their little earnings and what they expected to earn in "peculiar stock." Of the whole number who were originally charged with being stockholders only Messrs. Blaine and Boutwell came out clean. They were offered shares and refused them, and no shadow of suspicion rests upon them. Several others who were not included among the suspected also testify that they too were offered stock and refused it.

But Allay, Allison, Brooks, Boyer, Bingham, Colfax, Kelley, Scofield, Garfield, Dawes, Wilson of Iowa, and Patterson, seem to have been unable to resist the tempter and fell victims to cupidity and greed. Wilson of Iowa, Boyer of Pennsylvania, and one or two others come out boldly and say, "We bought this stock in the C. M. as we bought our r other property, as an investment; bought it with our own money, and paid for it. Our votes in Congress have never been influenced by our connection with it. We had a perfect right to buy it, and our only regret is that we didn't buy more."

But the others have estopped themselves from even this questionable defense. By having the certificates of the stock which they owned and drew dividends on made out to other people, by sneaking out of a black-and-white, up-and-down ownership through the services of trustees and relatives, by carrying the stock cloaked and concealed as a thief would carry stolen goods, by false and persistent denials and prevarications and equivocations, and by all sorts of tricks and dodges and subterfuges and lies, they have shown that they at least considered their connection with the Credit Mobilier disgraceful and something to be hidden from the inspection of the people who had trusted them and who they knew would frown upon it. There is nothing to be said in excuse for these men. They are culpably, foolishly guilty. They have sinned against light, and whether they be Democrats like Brooks and Boyer, or Republicans like Kelley and Garfield, they ought to be punished. The meanest sinner in the whole list of Satan's retainers is he who steals the livery of Heaven to serve the devil in, and the most despicable thief on the top of God's footstool is he who covers his booty with his official robes.

But the natural indignation which rightfully follows the scamp who peddles out his trust for gain, in the case of these Congressional knaves, gives way to a feeling of pity and contempt as they flounder around in the net-work of evidence, which grows stronger and stronger with their every desperate attempt to break it. Indeed, the perfectly helpless position in which some of these men have placed themselves by their denials, over their own names and under oath, would be pitiful if it were not ridiculous. By their attempts to make Mr. Ames the scapegoat for their sins and to falsify his testimony, they have rendered that unscrupulous briber desperate, and he seems determined to play Sampson and pull down upon his own and his confederates' heads the whole Temple.

By the production of books, letters, receipts and memoranda, he has proved that men high in station, and setting themselves up as statesmen, Christians and patriots, are downright liars and flat-footed perjurers, and that their participation in the Credit Mobilier swindle was a very small offense compared with their subsequent efforts to cover it up.

We have said these men ought to be punished. They can hardly be more degraded or humiliated than they are now, but unless they are able to disprove the testimony now on file against them, the country will demand their expulsion from Congress and all respectable society.

Americans have a certain amount of respect for a bold-faced, open and successful swindler, but they have neither charity nor excuse for a shirking, swindling, lying thief. When the case is made up—let the ax fall. If it strikes those who have stolen into the republican party to steal its good name and tarnish its fair fame, so much the better. We must cut out this sore with a steady hand and unflinching courage.—Manchester Mirror.

Morning Chronicle.

SNOW FLAKES OF WIT.—They have some snow in Utica, N. Y., as appears by the following "Brevities" from the Herald of that village:

"They wear snow plows for overshoes over in the eighth ward.

Nearly all the signs on Genesee street were dug out before night yesterday.

Nearly all of the corner loafers have climbed to the top of the snow and resumed business.

Utica has more snow than Watertown and Ogdensburg together, and it is better snow too. There is more of it to the pound.

The man who drove off the snow into the street railway track yesterday was not much hurt, but his sleigh was badly broken by the fall.

A man on Corn Hill, obliged by the deep snow to go home by way of the chimney, got into hot water by getting into the wrong house.

If you see a dog's tail on the snow, don't pick it up. The probability is that there will be a dog under the drift, and he may object to your familiarity.

A merchant on Blandina street, who worked all yesterday forenoon cleaning his sidewalk, was disgusted when he found that he had only got down to the wooden awning.

A lone widow, residing on Court street, complains that they have run a sleigh road right over her house, and that the horses are kicking her lightning rod all to pieces."

THE NEW LOAN.—Telegraphic advices from Europe indicate the offerings for the new five per cent. federal loan of the United States will be in excess of the amount advertised for sale, a part of the loan, however, having been reserved for sale in this country. The Treasury department is in receipt of numerous applications and letters of inquiry from national banks, showing a general disposition to exchange their present securities in the Treasury for new fives.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is emetic and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in paradise" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

and acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of Coughs, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Hoarseness, Pains or Soreness in the Chest or Side, Bleeding at the Lungs, Liver Complaints, &c. &c.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

by a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint and all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.

Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

ALDEN'S IMPERISHABLE EVAPORATED!

FRUITS & VEGETABLES.

Having lost nothing but water, they return, when put in water, to their original condition, both in quantity and flavor.

DIRECTIONS:—To every pound of Fruit add four quarts cold water, come to a boil slowly and stew 10 to 30 minutes, add half the usual amount of Sugar used with fresh fruit.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

In the opinion of the most Eminent Physicians and Chemists these fruit products are far more wholesome than "Canned" or "Dried" fruit—they having been Super-matured or ripened though the Alden Pneumatic Process, and prepared perfectly clean without exposure to flies or dirt.

These are the cheapest and best fruits in the Market, and you cannot tell them from fresh fruit when cooked.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Jobs and Reform—Duluth—Pacific Railroad Affairs—Lawyer Stewart—Butler and the Pensioners—Franking and Postage—The Public Debt—Appropriation Bills—Credit Mobilier—Election Frauds—Society.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1.

It's a bad time for Jobs just now. One by one the jobbers and subsidizers are dropping from the Senate. So many have failed to get back it causes alarm. Pomeroy is the last sad example. Then the expenses coming off in the House dampens the ardor of the lobby. Unless a reaction sets in soon it won't pay expenses. The wave of reform moves on. Franking has "gone up;" the Board of Health of this District went up on the $400,000 appropriation they asked for, to remove small-pox and garbage; the Board of Public Works are in agony over their fear of failure in the raid upon the Treasury; and even Duluth is in danger of going up.

The Wisconsin people have compelled them to abandon any attempt to rebuild the breakwater carried away last fall, and to build a line of road from their station on the point at Duluth to Superior City, a distance of six or seven miles. As the harbor of Duluth has to be reached via Superior City entrance in rough weather, and the water is not deep enough in Duluth harbor without constant dredging, it is believed now that Superior City will become the great shipping point. Duluth would never have been built, only the land grant required the road to be built in Minnesota, where it cost a million more and was two miles longer than to Superior City. A movement is now on foot to build out from Superior City twenty-eight miles to a junction with the Northern Pacific Road, thirty miles from Duluth,—which would settle the case for Duluth past hope of recovery.

The Edmonds amendment makes the government withhold all pay for transportation while the interest is unpaid on the government bonds loaned to build the road, until the courts shall decide whether the law requires half the amount to be paid over. This ends the rapid increase in the national debt and on interest on bonds loaned railroads.

Roosevelt of New York went for the Board of Public Works of the District in a speech which is now published. He charges that they collected of Uncle Sam, in some cases, four times as much as the contractors received for their work, and in other cases have made him pay for old jobs done long ago, and paid for and forgotten. He alleges the work contracted for is much in excess of what the law allowed them to make.

Lawyer Stewart refused to tell what was done with the $400,000 spent to get the legislation wanted by the Union Pacific Railroad, and they went for him for contempt; he is now taking his meals from Downey's House restaurant, and occupying the room where Vinnie Ream modelled her statue of Lincoln, for lodgings. There was $126,000 spent as counsel fees to secure the legislation in 1871, which allowed them to collect half the amount of their transportation-bills from the government, while the other half was retained in payment of interest.

Butler made a telling speech in behalf of the soldiers of the war of 1812, who were stricken from the Pension Rolls for aid to the rebellion, and the House voted to put them again on the Rolls.

The Treasury officials and other departments are now making estimates of how much it will be necessary to appropriate for postage on official communications. I venture to predict that there will be more fraud in the use of postage stamps than there ever was in franking in the Departments. The Senate took the Postmaster General at his word that abolishing franking would save something, and cut off some of his clerks. But they will be put back, or the post-office business will fall behind. It won't save the government a dollar in clerk hire or transportation. It will gain a little from Congressmen's letters and from poor country newspapers which now go free in a circuit of twenty miles, to the [illegible] city press. [illegible] gressmen to [illegible] for [illegible] purchase [illegible] expense [illegible] from them for postage.

I have explained the current of trade somewhat, and I venture to predict that the diminution of the public debt for January won't equal its increase for December. Extravagance in every Department of the government ought to be cut down when confronted with this fact. But it won't be. It is popular to favor everybody's bill and pass everybody's accounts. The member or officer who stands in the way of either is a bear, who incurs the opposition of the defeated. The one who favors [illegible] gets the friendship of the [illegible] nobody's opposition, when the matter is passed. The million and a quarter which went to the Board of Public Works of the District, was the city item which presents reduction this month. They want as much more, and whoever goes for them is a clever fellow and has the entrance of the Club,—but woe to the fellow who opposes, as Ordway has found out. A less persistent fellow would have been crushed; but this is fighting with him now, and his opponents seem coming to grief. He is bound to be will come in ahead yet.

Congress has been mainly employed on the regular appropriation bills and but little except private bills will be passed besides. Credit Mobilier keeps up in interest. The highest point has been reached; the question of the propriety of sending marks has sunk out of sight and centered upon the graver questions of whether the men by common consent in the front rank for religious, political and social standing, have been guilty of perjury and subornation of perjury. The evidence is of a staggering character, shocking to their friends, and unless cleared up will drive them from their positions in disgrace before the public.

The examination now taking place here into the Louisiana election develops the most startling frauds on both sides. Thus far, I judge, Warmoth is making his opponents show to the worst advantage, and it would not surprise me if the whole matter was set aside and an election held, under proper guards against fraud. Elections were held where people could not vote, in some cases; votes were thrown out without color of right, in others, and votes manufactured by officers to supply the place of those thrown out.

Society is at its height. Hacking is good, hacks being in demand by ladies to carry about their cards to leave and make fashionable calls. Any lady who can't count up twenty-five cards left on her receiving day is not considered of much account. This will go on until Lent; then adieu to fashion for a season of mortification. X. R.

The Daily Chronicle,

Portsmouth, N. H.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1873.

A Good Beginning.

Gov. Dix, in declining to interpose in the case of Gaffney, sentenced to be hanged at Buffalo, concludes his letter as follows:—

"I can find no justification for defeating the execution of the law by the interposition of my authority, and if the impression of my purpose is similar cases will have the effect of deterring evil-minded persons from committing this highest of crimes, I am willing to have it understood that circumstances of a very extraordinary nature will be needed to induce me to interpose for the purpose of annulling the deliberate and well-considered determination of juries and courts."

THE MASSACHUSETTS SENATORSHIP. Senator Wilson intends to transmit to Governor Washburne his resignation the latter part of this week, in order that the election of his successor may take place on the 18th. Connected with this fact is a report, on good authority, that Secretary Boutwell will tender his positive resignation about the same time, that his course for the senatorship may be with the least possible complication, though it is intimated that in case the choice should fall upon any of the other candidates Mr. Boutwell would be reappointed to his present position in the Cabinet. It is next to a certainty that whenever, in this administration or the next, Mr. Boutwell leaves the Treasury he will do so of his own choice.

SUSPECTED MURDER.—George Schumann died suddenly at Peoria, Illinois, November last. His life was insured for $2000, which sum was paid Mrs. Schumann. On Friday night last, Henry Schumann, the only son, mysteriously died, exhibiting symptoms of having been poisoned. Mrs. Schumann and a doctor named J. P. Welder, with whom it is alleged Mrs. Schumann has sustained improper relations, were arrested on suspicion of having poisoned her husband to obtain the insurance and the son to obtain some land left him by his father.

SENATOR PATTERSON.—The Springfield Republican expresses the general feeling of Senator Patterson's political opponents when it says: "Mr. Patterson's moral degradation is felt very keenly in the Senate, and by his political and personal friends. There seems to be no hope of retrieving his damaged reputation. It is evil and that with the close of his senatorial term on the 4th of March he must go into private life, a morally ruined man. He had lately been offered the presidency of the Ohio agricultural college, and was seriously considering the acceptance, but now as might be expected, the proffer is withdrawn, his value and his usefulness as a public teacher have departed. The country honest at almost drowns indignation with its rebuke; but the downfall and wreck of Mr. Patterson, and of those of his associates in Congress who have similarly allowed themselves, through a careless greed and a weak cowardice, to throw away their reputations, are no less complete because there is more grief than vindictiveness in the public feeling toward them."

MR. GREELEY'S WILLS.—The unseemly dispute over the wills of Mr. Greeley was virtually ended by the withdrawal of the last will, dated November, 1872, by the counsel for the Misses Greeley, at the earnest request of the latter, to prevent any further publicity of the domestic life, eccentricities and sad ending of their father. This gives the victory to the contestants, mainly represented by the Children's Aid Society. The will which will now be admitted to probate—that of 1871—provides for legacies to Mr. Greeley's brothers and sisters amounting to $12,000 and a bequest of $70,000 to the Children's Aid Society. The value of Mr. Greeley's property is variously estimated at between $60,000 and $225,000.

EARTHQUAKE IN INDIA.—An earthquake at the city of Lebree, in the territory of Scinde, was attended by dreadful destruction of human life. Foundations shook and the earth rose and fell. Hundreds of dwellings were laid in ruins. It is reported that upwards of five hundred persons perished.

Readables.

Little Gracie Love, who was shot in Boston by her father on returning to consciousness said, "Papa done it with something like a gas-pipe and hurt little Gracie dreadful."

A Chinaman, who had become snowblind while working on the Central Pacific Railroad recently, applied for official permission to have himself shot.

The New York Times claims to have earned for its proprietors, last year, $200,000, or ten per cent on $2,000,000 of capital.

By a boiler explosion at Conshohocken, Pa., on the 3d, eight persons were killed and thirteen wounded.

Mr. John H. Selwyn, formerly of the theatre which bore his name in Boston, died at Philadelphia on the 4th. He was 37 years old.

The weather the past three days has been intensely cold, and 100 persons were frozen to death in England, during that time.

Germantown wants to have a goat show with a prize for the Capricornus which can destroy the greatest amount of shrubbery in a given time, and for the one that can chew the heaviest week's wash off the highest clothes line.

They had a terrible flood in Ohio last week, when the water rose so high in the milk carts that the supply of chalk gave out and the contents of the cans were sold for washing purposes, no bluing being required.

An engaged young gentleman got rather nearly out of a little scrape with his intended. She taxed him with having kissed two ladies at some party at which she was not present. He owned it, but said that their united ages only made twenty-one. The simple-minded girl thought of ten and eleven, and laughed off her pout. He did not explain that one was nineteen and the other two years of age.

Four boilers exploded in the American Iron Works at Pittsburg, Penn., Monday, raising a building, killing seven men, and wounding thirty more.

A terrible earthquake has occurred in the Island of Lamos, causing great destruction of property and loss of life.

Of four men who attempted to rob the Mitchellsbury and Harrodsburg, Ky., stage, Thursday night, one was shot dead and two captured by the passengers.

State News.

Mrs. Fisher, of Harrisonville, sings her "Hush, my babe," to her infant son, William, who measures 12 months one way and 100 pounds the other.

D. B. Emerson has lately shipped 60,000 pounds of wool from Lebanon, for which he has paid from 35 to 60 cts. a pound. It is estimate that there are at least 40,000 pounds still unsold in that and adjoining towns.

On Sunday, Rev. Dr. Spaulding preached a sermon at Dover devoted and directly pointing to the defaulting cashier and the transactions of a United States Senator from New Hampshire in the Credit Mobilier affair.

Joseph Aubere, a native of Canada, was killed on Friday last at East Stratford, by the falling of a tree upon him.

A dwelling-house at Hillsboro Bridge, owned by Hale, Lane & Co., and occupied by H. T. Hale, was burned, Monday morning, about five o'clock. Loss $2000; insured in New Hampshire company for $1000.

All the workmen injured by the Manchester gas explosion are doing well and will recover.

—H. O. Wiley, Esq., a well-known lawyer of Peabody, died of small-pox, on Tuesday last. To the shame of the town and people of Peabody, he was left in his last hours to the care of his wife alone, and his body laid on the floor, unburied and uncared for, to Wednesday noon, while the coffin was sitting on the door steps, with nobody to place the remains therein.—Merrimac Journal.

CORNS.—Since pride and fashion have had control of mankind, and shoemakers were compelled to make boots and shoes to fit fancy instead of the feet, the suffering from Corns, Bunions, Ingrowing Nails, Sore Instups, Blistered Heels, Callosities on the bottom of the feet, &c., cannot be described. But Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies will cave all such torments, and proper fitting boots will prevent their reproduction. Sold by all druggists. a12

A SURE CURE follows the use of BUCHMAN'S PULMONIC CORDIAL—the best known remedy for THROAT and LUNG COMPLAINTS. Only 50 cts. a bottle.

PILES.—The unceasing torture from Internal bleeding, external and itching piles is fast wearing away the thousands of those who are afflicted and their hope and courage have long since given place to despair. Let those who see this cheer up, for a mild and sure cure may be had by using BRIGGS' PILE REMEDIES.

MRS. GRUNDY SAYS the Sozodont eclipses all other preparations for the teeth and gums, and what Mrs. G. says is reiterated most emphatically by ninety-nine one-hundredths of the beauty and fashion of the land.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN MEDICINE.—It is difficult to induce the medical profession to abandon the old grooves in which it has traveled for centuries. Purgation, venesection, opiumization and blisteration and its team of venerable bobbies, and it does not like to harness up the new four-in-hand of invigoration, regulation, purification and renovation, and take a new departure. Advanced practitioners, however, who are not wedded to old dogmas, admit that in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters we possess, so to speak counter-charm to the malign influences that produce the various diseased conditions. They do not deny that in cases of general debility, in nervous complaints, and in all disturbances of the liver, the bowels, and the digestive organs, this powerful and wholesome vegetable remedy effects extraordinary cures. The public rendered this verdict many years ago, and the enlightened members of the profession acquiesce in it. Better late than never.

OF ALL AWFUL NIGHT SOUNDS, that of a frightful cough reverberating through the darkness, is the most saddening. Would you be spared this infliction and save the endangered by the complaint, administer Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Crittenton's, 7 6th Avenue. Sold by all Druggists.

LUNGS of leather could not withstand the ups and downs of our winter temperature Churches, theatres, lecture rooms, drawing rooms, kitchens and schools, ring with the bleatings of laboring chests and husky throats. A WORLD OF THANKS IS DUE To the botanist who first discovered the virtues of the Quillaya Saponaria, or Soap Tree of Chili. The wonderful cleansing and purifying property of its Bark gives to the fragrant SOZODONT much of its unrivalled efficacy as a preservative of the teeth.

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUCCESS.—Fallacies and frauds are short lived. They may flourish for a little while, but the sober second thought of the people condemns them and they perish. It would take even the "Lightning Calculator" a long time to count the imitations and counterfeits of the supreme tonic of the age, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that have been brought out since the first introduction of that celebrated remedy. They have collapsed one after another, but the great vegetable preventive and curative is still on its disease-conquering march. At this season, as the air becomes more and more chilly, and searching vapors, affect the integuments and create unwonted pains in the stomach and bowels, it is of the utmost importance to tone and regulate the system so as to enable it to bear up against the uncongenial temperature which produces these disturbances. Fever and ague, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous prostration, feverishness and chronic indigestion are a few among the many disorders which yield readily to this famous restorative.

INSTANTANEOUS is the operation of BUCHMAN'S PULMONIC CORDIAL in all cases of SORE THROAT, HOARSENESS, COUGHS, CROUP, and LUNG AFFECTIONS. It is beneficial in all cases. Sold for 50 cents per bottle.

CENTAUR.

At midnight on his wooded hills,
The Centaur lay dreaming of the hour,
When mankind, cured of aching ills,
Should know his all-healing power.

Nor long he waited. The blind could see,—
Straightened were limbs by pain long bent,
Cripples ran, and the lame on bended knee
Gave thanks for the Centaur Liniment.

The Centaur Liniment is the greatest pain-reliever the world has ever seen. Rheumatism, whether inflammatory, sciatic or nervous, is made to disappear. Swellings cease to pain, wounds are healed, burns are cured without a scar, and stings and bites are rendered harmless.

Mrs. R. Prowell, 429 Atlantic St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have had the rheumatism for ten years, I have tried everything. The Centaur Liniment is the only thing that does me good."

Mr. Chas. Hill, 416 Pine St., Philadelphia, writes: "That two bottles of Centaur Liniment has cured a most severe sprain of his ankle."

J. H. Martin of 533 Seventh Avenue, N. Y., says: "The Centaur Liniment has cured me of a terrible case of inflammatory rheumatism and cannot be too highly recommended."

59 BROADWAY, N. Y., Aug. 21st, 1872.

"All horse owners should have the Centaur Liniment. We used it in our stables and find it the best thing ever adopted."

MARRIAGE GUIDE,

Being a private instructor for married persons or those about to be married, both male and female, in everything concerning the physiology and relations of our sexual system, and the production and prevention of offspring, including all the new discoveries never before given in the English language, by WM. YOUNG, M. D. This is really a valuable and interesting work. It is written in plain language for the general reader, and is illustrated with numerous Engravings. All young married people, or those contemplating marriage, and having the least impediment to married life, should read this book. It discloses secrets that every one should be acquainted with; still it is a book that must be locked up and not lie about the house. It will be sent to any address on receipt of 50 cents. Address, Dr. WM. YOUNG, No. 416 Spruce street, above Fourth, Philadelphia.

☞ AFFLICTED AND UNFORTUNATE.—No matter what may be your disease, before you place yourself under any one of the notorious QUACKS—native and foreign—who advertise in this or any other paper, get a copy of Dr. Young's Book and read it carefully. It will be the means of saving you many a dollar, your health and possibly your life. eodoy

Dr. Young can be consulted on any of the diseases described in his publications, at his office, No. 416 Spruce street, above Fourth, Philadelphia.

The road, so far as completed, is thoroughly equipped, ENTIRELY PAID FOR, and in full operation, and it is upon the completed portion only, that bonds amounting to $600,000 are now offered at 83 and accrued interest in currency. Bonds upon the remaining portion of the road will be sold at a much higher price and will be offered only upon completed road. This road traverses the garden of the State, crosses all the most important roads, controls the enormous coal mines at Virden, and its bonds are most highly esteemed by those whose investigation has been most searching. The Singer

SEWING MACHINE

STILL LEADS THE MARKET.

The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the

Daily Manufacture

—OF—

400 OF THE SINGERS

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.

All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of them are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.

THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,

All others being copied from its first model. does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all others combined.

It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

N. B. Those purchasing for cash, before the 1 of January next, will have a consideration allowed them.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Having disposed of the Stock and good will of the Job Office connected with the DAILY CHRONICLE to Mr. Charles W. Gardner, we would express our thanks to our friends and former patrons, and solicit for Mr. Gardner a continuance of that patronage which has been so liberally bestowed upon us.

MARSTON & FREEMAN.

Horse Trades.

A Kittery stable keeper had an old white horse, too old to eat hay and so lean that the epizootic could not find meat enough to take hold of; so poor that his ribs rattled like castanets when he walked. This poor old animal also had a habit of falling down in the middle of the road on the least provocation, which militated against his usefulness as a carriage horse; and not liking to kill him, his owner humanely swapped him off with a young fellow of some sixteen years, for an old watch. The new proprietor harnessed his purchase into a pung, invited a companion to have a ride, and drove off, cruelly beating the wretched animal as he went. On returning, the young horse-dealer was told he would be complained of for cruelty, and becoming frightened he gave the horse to another boy, much younger than himself. The third owner was offered three cents for the horse, but after due deliberation concluded to hold on for a rise, and refused the offer.

Finally, Mr. John W. Perkins bought the poor old creature for sixty cents, gave him a good supper of corn meal, and then took him to the river bank and mercifully caved in his venerable head. Mr. Perkins' action in feeding the miserable animal before killing him may occasion a smile, but it was prompted by a generous humanity which can be none too common in any community, and we nominate him for an honorary membership (it seems he is already an active member) of the "Society for the Prevention," etc., if one is ever established in Kittery, of which there would seem to be some need.

Eastern R. R.

At the annual meeting, Monday, Mr. Lemuel Shaw of Boston offered the following resolution, which was adopted and a copy of the same was directed to be sent to ex-Governor Goodwin:

Voted, That the stockholders of this company receive with regret the decision of the Hon. Ichabod Goodwin declining to serve them longer as director, and that their cordial thanks be given to him for his faithful and valuable services for this road during the last twenty-five years, which have secured for him the confidence, respect and regard of every one connected with it.

The motion was seconded by the Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury, who said that if the occasion was a proper one, he would be happy to pronounce an eulogium upon the invaluable services of Governor Goodwin.

President Lothrop expressed the hope that the present movement in the Legislature for the consolidation of the Lowell and Fitchburg Railroads would be successful, and that there would be an exchange of stations of the roads entering the city at North End. If that was not accomplished this company would erect a new car-shed, but not disturb the existing head-house at present.

Mr. Woodbury offered the following motion, which was passed:—

Voted, That the directors be and they are hereby authorized, in their discretion, to issue the bonds of this company to the amount allowed by law, said bonds to be either in currency or sterling bonds, and on such time as the directors shall determine, and to bear interest not exceeding six per cent. in gold, seven per cent. currency, payable semi-annually. The amount which they are allowed to issue is between $500,000 and $600,000.

The report of the Directors says:—

During the past year we have built a double track from Wenham to Ipswich, from Greenland to Portsmouth and from East Boston to Revere, making in all twelve and one-half miles of double track laid this year, and giving us thirty-three miles of double track between Boston and Portsmouth, and more than five miles at other points. We have also put in seven and one-half miles of sidings in addition to what we previously had; thus making twenty miles of new track laid within the year. Of the fifty-six miles of our main line between Boston and Portsmouth, seventeen and one-half miles are now laid with steel rails.

Nearly all the passenger trains are fitted with Miller platforms and Westinghouse brakes.

Festina Lente.

Messrs. Editors;—The point made by Mr. Wentworth and Mr. Noble before the railroad commissioners and Mayor and Aldermen on Saturday, that the city being a stockholder in the Portsmouth & Dover railroad disqualified its mayor and aldermen from sitting at the board, appears to be thought sound by many intelligent citizens. Should the court sustain it, won't the whole question have to go back to the Legislature? And then who can say what may turn up, and in what position would the City be placed? Hadn't we better make haste slowly.

TAX PAYER.

Laconics.

Olive Austin, for brawl and tumult, was fined $3 and costs, $11.04, by Judge Page, on Tuesday.

The small-pox is rarely fatal to persons over 60 years of age, and never attacks a person who has a cancer.

"There is an old adage that the first lightning after the beginning of the new year is a sign that the back of winter is broken." So says an exchange. We have had several flashes of lightning since the 1st of January, but we doubt if they hit winter hard enough to break its backbone; if they did, that same backbone can stand considerable more breaking before much harm will be done.

Postage-stamp and button collecting are out of date; the latest mania among youth is to get the largest possible collection of vaccine "points" which have been used. So nice!

Miss Mai Wiggin, whose reading in the Universalist Church some weeks since was warmly commended, will give a similar entertainment in the Temple on Tuesday evening next, the 11th. Miss Frisbee, pianist, and a violinist will add variety to the evening's amusement.

It is presumed that the application of the town of Kittery to the Legislature for a reduction of valuation—reported in Legislative proceedings—is the revival of the old application of 1870.

The hearing in the case of the Newburyport police officer charged with theft, took place before the Police Committee on Monday evening. We wonder that any persons accept such positions. No matter how good their character; how respectable their families; personal enemies and political opponents may easily ruin them.—Merrimac Journal.

Aye, verily—and the same here.

On all the trains leaving Boston, the smoking cars just now are the most popular; and so great is the rush that some trains have additional smoking cars attached.

The project of uniting the Mercantile Library with that of the Young People's Union, on the basis of a free library, is entertained. If every son of Portsmouth, on his visit on the next 4th of July, should march into town with a book under his arm, a library would be quickly established.

At a meeting of the committee of one hundred, Monday evening, it was unanimously voted that the ladies of Portsmouth who desire to take part in the reception of the sons and daughters on the 4th of July, be invited to meet with the committee at the Common Council Room, Monday evening, Feb. 13th.

A horse belonging to a contractor who is grading this end of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad died on Sunday night, and on being opened a large stone was found in his intestines.

The merchants who buy fish brought into Portsmouth by steamers consult the probabilities as to weather for the next day, before making a trade, to determine the chances of the next catch.

Rev. Carlos Maryin, pastor of the North Church, is to deliver his lecture on "Marriage," in Kittery, sometime during the present season.

A young man who is interested in horseflesh informs us that 460 horses belong in Portsmouth.

The small pox in Boston seriously affects the retail trade there. The ladies in suburban towns and cities purchase at home, and get better served at less prices. It is only a short time since that a lady from here purchased in Boston a dozen of buttons for 80 cents; not having quite enough, she called at Mr. W. A. Johnson's, on State Street, Newburyport, and was suprised to find the price was only 15 cents per dozen for precisely the same article.—Merrimac Journal.

The same is often true here.

Cruelty to Man.

Speaking of cruelty to animals Messrs. Editors—can you tell us why drunkards should not be prevented from getting liquor, and treating their wives and children so cruelly; as well as the owners and drivers of horses and cattle, be circumscribed in their liberty of abusing them? Aye, and why not the makers and sellers of liquors be prohibited, too? COM.

The Evans Trial

Was continued on the 3d at Exeter. Geo. N. Whitehouse, Sylvester Day, Mrs. Susan Lovering, mother of the murdered girl, Eben B. Cate, Alfred Pinder, Geo. S. Sherburne and Ezra Taskor gave their testimony. The medical testimony will be given by Dr. Bancroft, Superintendent of Concord Insane Asylum, Dr. Tyler, formerly Superintendent of Insane Asylum at Somerville, Dr. Wm. Perry of Exeter, and Dr. Eastman of Hampstead.

The knife with which the body of Miss Lovering was mutilated was produced, and one witness swore that he sharpened it for Evans three days before the murder. The case for the prosecution closed on the 3d; the defence commences this morning. As only three or four witnesses are expected, the defence being insanity simply, the case will doubtless go to the jury to-morrow.

Morning Chronicle.

VACATIONS.—The Boston Herald believes that the defaulting cashiers and tellers are the faithful, industrious men, who never leave their desks for a day's vacation and are at work even nights and Sundays. The absence of the bookkeepers and the paying and receiving tellers of a bank, one or two days in a quarter, it thinks would be a greater safe-guard to depositors and stockholders than a double-board of modern directors,—which after all is not saying much for the plan. Undoubtedly a bank officer who takes a fortnight's vacation in summer could not cover up an embezzlement without the aid of confederates, but it would not be safe to say that all the hard-working officials are dishonest. So much depends on regularity in the complicated accounts of a bank, that there is a great temptation to give one's self up to routine. Yet the medicine is on the whole not unpleasant to take, and would be good for the health if not for the morals. We advise a long vacation next summer for all bank officers,—particularly the young men!

BLESSING.—Darwin, in his new work, "The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals," has an interesting chapter on blushing. This act, he tells us, is the most peculiar and most human of all expressions. Animals never blush, although monkeys redden from passion. We cannot produce blushing by any physical means; it is the mind which must be affected; and blushing is not only involuntarily, but the tendency. While the young blush more freely than the old, infants do not blush; women blush more than do men; the blind and deaf do not escape. It is usually the face, and neck only, that reddens; the blush does not extend over the body; but there are certain racial tendencies, as the great Darwin says, that the blush is most conspicuous on the white skin, and even drawn to their waists. The explanation of blushing to exposed parts is explained by the fact that these portions of the face have been habitually exposed to the air, light, and alternations of temperature, by which the small arteries acquire the habit of readily dilating or contracting. In Indoos blush but little; the Chinese rarely blush; the Polynesian blush freely; young negroes of our American tribes have been seen to blush; the negro blushes often and yet pearl-ince resembling a blush; the Kafirs of South Africa never blush, neither do the Australians. After these facts, Mr. Darwin goes on to give the causes of the blush; but he forgot to say we must refer for the blushing photos to the brightly-blushing dame, who over-look our pages to the learned writer.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in the advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new Discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima Thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alexipharmic. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tinctures of Lagustica, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distracting pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, but knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no solid or pasteboard compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the sorest instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unequalled by anything else extant.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Chronicle

A Romance of the Yosemite.

When I was at Harvard my room mate and bosom friend was Charley Despard. He was of very good family, but not very well off, and when our college career was concluded and I took my seat in Bates & Blog's office to court the Goddess Themis, he went off to push his fortune in the Golden State.

Charley was a queer sort of a fellow, capable of great exertion, but deplorably lazy, always making good resolutions and never carrying them into execution; without an atom of vice in his constitution, and yet always getting into scrapes. After he went to California we corresponded pretty regularly, and from his letters I learned that he was experimenting in a new business every other week. Now he was in a soft goods store in San Francisco; then he ran a paper in Denver; then he drove a stage between Auburn and Forrest Hill; then he was a billiard marker in Sacramento, and finally he told me that he was in for a big thing in gold mines at Great Flat, and enclosed his photograph to show me how he looked in his working clothes. I could scarcely recognize my natty friend of former days in the lanky figure pictured on the cardboard. A slouch cap perched on the back of his head, a wisp of handkerchief tied round his neck, while hirsute appendages of Sampsonic dimensions covered and encircled the place where his face ought to have been. But his big eyes were there, looking out just as true and honest as ever, and so I knew it was Charley, even though he did wear big boots and carried a sixshooter slung at his side.

He stuck to the mines all Spring and Summer, and his letters were full of hope and radiant with success, until all at once they stopped suddenly and nothing more was heard of him. I was wondering what had become of him, whether he had come to grief and was ashamed to write me bad news, or whether a worse fate had overtaken him in the wilds of the far West, and made inquiries of some of his friends, but none of them could tell me anything about him, so I was fain to sit still, hoping against hope that he would turn up.

One evening I was all alone in my room watching the flickering light of the firelight play over each familiar article of furniture, too lazy to get up from my chair to light the gas, when I heard a violent ring at the door, and presently a figure stood in the doorway. At first I did not recognize my old chum, but when I heard the accents of his voice, my fears and doubts all faded away, and I welcomed him as one come back from the dead.

"Why, Charley, is that you? Where have you been? When did you get in the town? How's things in general?"

"Yes, it's me. Got in from California this morning. Things is first rate."

"Why, what a swell you are. Why didn't you come right here? Where have you been? I know there's something up."

"Guess you're about right. Hit it thar, pard. You bet."

And then he relapsed into silence and demolished a lavender kid glove in trying to take it off.

"What's up old man? Let's have it. Go ahead."

"Well, I ain't right sure what's up. I've struck a lead and it looked no end of good, and now when I take the dust to the store it won't sell."

"Please to interpret, and bear in mind that I am not as learned in mining lingo as you are."

"Well, then, here goes." But it didn't go.

"Hard up? You don't look like it?"

"No. Got half a million to my credit with Clews."

"Woman?"

"Yes, and she's the best little woman in the world, at least I thought she was." And here the other kid glove burst open in a most decided manner.

"Now, see here; you have come to a professional man, and if you want solace and advice make a clean breast of it and tell me all your story.

"Well, then, you know my last letter to you was from Green Flat, the one with the photo."

"Yes; I got it. There you are over the mantlepiece in the costume of the period."

"That mine turned out a real good thing. We washed out about seventy thousand in two months, and then we got rid of the concern to a 'Frisean company at a million and a half, so I am pretty happy that way."

"Glad to hear it, but about her Ladyship?"

"Well, when the thing was done, and the money in at the First National, we all went off to the Bay, and Irish Ned got shot one night. He just lived long enough to make his will and split his share between me and old Tom Norris."

"I regret the untimely departure of Irish Ned, but I congratulate you that he was able to dispose of his property so satisfactorily. But the lady?"

"I am comin' to her. There was a lot of legal fourin' after Ned's death about the inquest and the probate of his will, and I got tired of loafing at 'Frisco', so I made tracks up country and had a look round the flat. That was rather worse in the way of poison, so one morning I went and took Becker out of the corral, hitched him up, got on top, and set off for a blasting gallop. All of a sudden I took a notion I'd never seen Yosemite Valley, and as it wasn't much of a ride from the flat, I went right on. Becker and I got along first rate, and we were down on the Gentrie trail just after sundown two days afterwards."

"Here the romance commences. Go on. I begin to see light."

"There wasn't much to be seen there, I can tell you. These high cliffs and those big trees cut it rough on sunshine. Why, I nearly rode over her before I saw what I was doing."

"Her?"

"Yes; she was lying in a huddle in the middle of the road, and only Bonier stayed we'd have given her hoofs and no mistake."

"Her? Who? Intoxicated Injun squaw?"

Here Charley burst into cursory remarks which I shall not repeat, and then went on.

"No, the darlingest little atom of feminine humanity that ever claimed the assistance of mortal man."

"Bravo! Encore! So you did not pass by on the other side, like the man that fell among thieves?"

"No; I got off and tied Becker to a tree, and then picked her up."

"What did she say? This is becoming dramatic."

"She didn't say nothing. She was in a faint and all over mud."

"I pardon your grammar. But what did you do?"

"Well, I took a chaw, and then I went down to the river and filled my hat with water and splashed it right in her face."

"What did she say to that?"

"She said 'Oh!'"

"Don't much wonder. What next?"

"Well, I thought she might have got too much water, so I poured some whiskey down her throat."

"Spiritual consolation for temporal misfortunes. How did she take it?"

"She coughed like fire, and then sat up straight and looked up."

"Well, what next?"

"She said 'Oh dear' and tried to get up, but she couldn't do it, and then she screamed and fell back."

"Pleasant. How did you proceed?"

"I talked civil to her. I'd almost forgotten how, but my 'Sunday go to meeting' manners came back wonderfully, and I tried to persuade her I was not a Hoodlum lot."

"In which I presume you succeeded."

"Yes. After a while she put up her black hair, and then told me that she had tumbled off her horse and strained her ankle, and didn't know how to get to Hutching's Hotel."

"Charming situation. You enacted the role of ministering angel?"

"You bet. Whipped out my bowie, and had her boot and stocking in tatters in two minutes. Took the sleeves off my shirt and bound a cold water bandage on. Then kicked Becker in the ribs, and when he was getting his breath twisted her up, and so we proceeded along the trail until we got to Hutching's, where we found the house in a mess and papa awfulskeered."

"So there is a papa in the business?"

"Yes; good old fellow, too; was tremendously obliged to me and offered me some coin."

"The reward of merit."

"I got riled at that, showed him my six shooter and asked him if he wanted to insult me, whereupon he apologized like a gentleman and we all had a drink."

"Including her ladyship."

"No, confound you, the women folks had taken her off."

"Proceed with papa."

"We had another drink, and got talking, and I found out that he was Tom Kemble's father."

"What! Tom, that was in our year! that delicate little fellow you used to make such a pot of?"

"Where you followed without delay?"

"Straight off. That fellow at the office owes me some change, for I gave him a fifty bill and didn't wait for my stamps."

"Prices are high, but not so bad as fifty."

"I ran round the house until they wanted to put me out. Said I was mad."

"A conclusion uncharitable in the extreme, but pardonable under the circumstances."

"We were having a talk about that when the people came out, and then they let me go, and I waited to see the crowd pass, and Jack, when she and her father came along, I felt all of a heap, and just stood still and looked right at them, and she looked straight in my face and never stopped, and she's forgot me, and I'm going back to California to-morrow." Here poor Charley covered his face with his hands and broke down.

"Hold on, did you get shaved today?"

"That's about it. Poor Tom had petered out, and the old gentleman and his daughter had taken a trip West."

"The family acquaintance facilitated friendship?"

"I suppose it helped. At any rate I stuck to them and we went round together, and Nettie and I (that's her name, Nettie Kemble) got nuts, and I spoke out to the old man and showed him my hand, and told him hearts were trumps, but that I could spot diamonds if I'd a mind."

"What cards did he call to that?"

"He told me to come up to New York and he'd see about it."

"Decided paternal. So you came up accordingly."

"Got in this morning. Went and got fixed up square, and started off to Gramercy Park."

"To be received with outstretched hands and open arms?"

"Missed the post that time. Sent up my card but they'd gone to a matinee at the opera."

"Pretty much all over."

"The tonsorial operation may have altered your identity."

He lifted his face up and a gleam of hope flashed over his features. I took down the photograph and led him to the glass.

"See there. Look on this picture and on that."

"I—don't—think—I shall go back to the Flat to-morrow. What shall I do?" Interval for reflection.

"Was your address on your card?"

"Yes; St. Nicholas."

"Just you stay here to-night and we'll have a chat, and see if they don't call to-morrow or write. Perhaps there is a letter there now."

"By Jove, you're right. Let's go and see right off."

"Do take it quietly. I don't expect any such thing."

"But I do. Will you come, for if you won't I'll go alone."

Up he got, and, solens volens, I was obliged to accompany him, for I feared that he might do something rash in his frenzy. We arrived at the St. Nicholas, and sure enough a letter awaited him with N. K. monogramized on the fold. He opened it and read as follows:

WEDNESDAY EVENING,
—Gramercy Square.

My Dear Mr. Despard,—I am so glad you have come. Could it have been you I saw at the Academy? It was not a bit like you, and yet I think it was. Please call soon.

Ever yours, NELLIE KEMBLE.

Charley yelled, "She signs herself 'Ever Yours,'" and wanted to shout for the crowd, but a happier thought struck him, and before I knew what he was up to he leaped on to the box of a carriage and went up Broadway in the same style he used to steer his team among the stumps and boulders of the Californian wilds. I followed him in another with the coachman, and in due time found Charles' trap in charge of an astonished darkey at the abode of his lady love.

I came away then. Below you have the latest news from the scene of action:

Despard—Kemble. At the residence of the bride's father, January 16, by Rev. George Newton, D. D., Charles Despard, late of Green Flat, California, to Miss Nellie Kemble, only daughter of Thomas Kemble, of Gramercy Park, New York.

"Old Probabilities" is playing a double part in St. Louis. By knowing whether the next day will be bright or rainy, the careful reader can gauge the amount of divorces that will take place—fire being a good average for wet weather, and ten for sunshine.

A Committee of the Boston City Council has reported that the city is liable for the value of the buildings blown up to prevent the extension of the fire at the recent conflagration.

The conference committee on the sloops-of-war bill has finished its labors. The bill, as agreed on, compromises the number of new vessels at eight, half of which are to be built in private yards, of iron or wood, as the Secretary of the Navy may determine.

It is reported that the American bankers of London loaned Napoleon £2,000,000, to facilitate a coup he was meditating, and that since his death the money has been returned to them.

An Iowa man lost his hearing and taste by the horse disease.

President Grant is going South.

NICE GIRL.—A heroine has been developed at Huntington Bay, Long Island. A couple of men were capsized from a small boat in the bay, which was full of floating ice. One of them who could not swim seized upon a small cake of ice, by which he was enabled to keep his head above water. The other clung to the skiff, righted it up, and was in a safer position than his companion, but could do nothing to help him. The cries of the man on the ice were heard by those on shore. Among them was a Miss Lucinda Conklin. She determined to attempt the rescue of the man, who was evidently exhausted as well as frozen. She waded out into the bay, the beach being shelving, until she gained a point within twenty feet of the drowning man, and then swam out to him. She then told him what to do, so as not to wholly impede her motions, and he promised to obey. This was simply to place his hands on her shoulder and hang on. He obeyed and was brought safely to shore.

POLITICAL LUCK.—The Chicago Journal relates the following of the present governor of Illinois:

"No sooner did Gen. John L. Beveridge return from the war, in which he was a gallant cavalry officer, than he was nominated for Sheriff of this county, and elected. Before his term as Sheriff had expired he was elected State Senator. Before his office of Senator expired, he was nominated and elected Congressman of the State at large, to fill the vacancy caused by Gen. Logan's resignation. Last Fall, before his term of Congressman had expired, he was nominated and elected Lieutenant-Governor, which position he entered upon two weeks ago; and now, Gov. Oglesby having resigned, Gen. Beveridge becomes Governor of the State. Verily, he is one of the luckiest men, politically, in the United States."

INVESTIGATION ORDERED. — In the Senate, on the 4th, Mr. Patterson, of New Hampshire moved the appointment of a select committee of five to consider matters in the testimony relating to members of the Senate, with power to send for persons and papers. Agreed to.

Unless transactions not yet intimated are to be disclosed, it is not likely that the Senate investigation will come to any very definite result, since of the persons at the end of the Capitol involved by the testimony already taken, Mr. Colfax is not a member of the Senate, Mr. Wilson will not be a week longer, and Messrs. Patterson and Harlan retire on the 4th of March.

LIVING OVER A MINE.—A frightful accident is reported to have occurred near Cleveland, which resulted in the death of two persons, and will probably cause the death of three more. It appears that a miner named Spargo occupied a house over the chamber of an old coal mine, and it caved in, the stove falling into the cavity. Mrs. Spargo and her four children fell on the stove, which set on fire the floor and the clothes of the unfortunate victims. Two children were burned to death. Mrs. Spargo and the other two children are in a critical condition. It was not known that the chamber was under the house.

PROPULSION BY STEAM AND MULE.—James M. Jaeger, whose device for steam propulsion on canals was recently described in the Scientific American, and who has also invented a nautical appliance to give warning of an approach to shallow water, is under indictment at New Haven for stealing four mules in order to pay for patenting his inventions.

MURDER APPROVED.—A New York coroner's jury has disgraced itself by upholding a murderer, Simmons, the policy dealer, who stabbed Duryea to death a few weeks ago. A possible explanation of the verdict is that the Simmons family represents twelve million dollars. Of the jurors, but three are to be found on the directory.

HOW IT USED TO BE.—There is something strangely suggestive of auld lang syne in the innocent remark of the telegraph that the whipping which Captain Jack's Modocs gave our troops, last week, is "called a forced reconnoissance of Captain Jack's position." We seem to have heard that before more than once, somewhere in the dim past.

State News.

The Exeter correspondent of the Haverhill Bulletin says that a lady living in that village, who lost her husband not long since, quite recently had put the sum of $350 in the Exeter savings Bank. Strange as it may seem, she dreamed one night last week that she met her husband and he told her to take the money out of the bank. The next night she dreamed the same dream. It so impressed her that she told one of her boys a number of times to go and get the money. He demurred, and then she told the other, who went and got it on Saturday. Lucky, for the cashier would probably have saved her the trouble if it had had remained till Monday night. The above is a fact.

The losses of the Granite State National Bank are now ascertained to be $50,000, besides the surplus of $40,000; and suspension of the bank, with suits against the directors for carelessness and to clear the bondsmen of Cashier Shute, are talked of. This bank lost eighty per cent. of its capital once before by Boston brokers, by the failure of Messrs. Wilson in 1855.

Stephen W. Dearborn, Esq., formerly a prominent citizen of Exeter and sheriff of Rockingham county, and of late years engaged in the paint and hardware trade in Boston, has recently become affected with what is thought to be softening of the brain, and been placed in an asylum in St. Louis.

CORNS.—Since pride and fashion have had control of mankind, and shoemakers were compelled to make boots and shoes to fit fancy instead of the feet, the suffering from Corns, Bunions, Ingrowing Nails, Sore Insteps, Blistered Heels, Callosities on the bottom of the feet, &c., cannot be described. But Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies will cure all such torments, and proper fitting boots will prevent their reproduction. Sold by all druggists. a12

A SURE CURE follows the use of BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL—the best known remedy for THROAT and LUNG COMPLAINTS. Only 50 cts. a bottle.

PILES.—The unceasing torture from internal bleeding, external and itching piles is fast wearing away the thousands of those who are afflicted and their hope and courage have long since given place to despair. Let those who see this cheer up, for a mild and sure cure may be had by using BRIGGS' PILE REMEDIES.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN MEDICINE.—It is difficult to induce the medical profession to abandon the old grooves in which it has traveled for centuries. Purgation, venesection, opiumization and bisteration and its team of venerable hobbies, and it does not like to harness up the new four-in-hand of invigoration, regulation, purification and renovation, and take a new departure. Advanced practitioners, however, who are not wedded to old dogmas, admit that in Hostetter's Stomach Bisters we possess, so to speak counter-charm to the malign influences that produce various diseased conditions. They do not deny that in cases of general debility, in nervous complaints, and in all disturbances of the liver, the bowels, and the digestive organs, this powerful and wholesome vegetable remedy effects extraordinary cures. The public rendered this verdict many years ago, and the enlightened members of the profession acquiesce in it. Better late than never.

Take up your line of March for Critten ton's, No. 7 6th Avenue, all ye coughers and wheezers, and snufflers. It is the depot for Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, which for all ailments of the lungs and their air passages is an immediate and sovereign remedy. All druggists keep it.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 minute.

A WORLD OF THANKS IS DUE To the botanist who first discovered the virtues of the Quillaya Saponaria, or Soap Tree of Chili. The wonderful cleansing and purifying property of its Bark gives to the fragrant SOZODONT much of its unrivalled efficacy as a preservative of the teeth.

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUCCESS.—Fallacies and frauds are short lived. They may flourish for a little while, but the sober second thought of the people condemns them and they perish. It would take even the "Lightning Calculator" a long time to count the imitations and counterfeits of the supreme tonic of the age, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that have been brought out since the first introduction of that celebrated remedy. They have collapsed one after another, but the great vegetable preventive and curative is still on its disease-conquering march. At this season, as the air becomes more and more chilly, and searching vapors, affect the integuments and create unwonted pains in the stomach and bowels, it is of the utmost importance to tone and regulate the system so as to enable it to bear up against the uncongenial temperature which produces these disturbances. Fever and ague, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous prostration, costiveness and chronic indigestion are a few among the many disorders which yield readily to this famous restorative.

INSTANTANEOUS is the operation of BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL in all cases of SORE THROAT, HOARSENESS, COUGHS, CROUP, and LUNG AFFECTIONS. It is beneficial in all cases. Sold for 50 cents per bottle.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Drowning Accident.

Messrs. Richard Philbrook, Montgomery Anderson and Erastus Leach, all residents of Kittery, left this city for their home in a wherry at a late hour on Tuesday night. When near the beacon, off Badger's Island, the boat was struck by a cake of ice and capsized. Mr. Leach was drowned, but the other two men, after a hard struggle, succeeded in reaching the shore. Mr. Philbrook still retained strength to crawl to a house, but some time elapsed before he revived sufficiently to be able to make it known that Mr. Anderson was still on the Beach; the latter was insensible when taken up, but soon recovered his senses. Mr. Leach leaves a widow and two children.

The above is gathered from the statements of several residents of Kittery, and we believe it correct, though various accounts of the accident were current in this city on Wednesday. One was that four men were in the boat, of whom one was drowned and a second (an Irishman whose name was not given,) died from exposure. One of the survivors of the accident told a strange story, to the effect that while two of the party were in the water, holding on to the overturned boat, Mr. Leach being then lying at full length on her bottom, a man in a dory pulled by them, without heeding their calls at first, though he afterwards returned and took off Mr. Leach. This was probably but a mental hallucination, induced by exposure and an anxious desire that a boat would appear; for if a man had humanity enough to help one man he would not leave two others in such a situation—not to mention the extreme difficulty of holding a position on the bottom of a capsized boat.

Laconics.

A horse belonging to Mr. Harry Hartshorn ran away on Wednesday with a pung, throwing Mr. Hartshorn out, the pung being afterwards badly broken by collision with a post on the corner of Daniel Street and Market Square. Mr. Hartshorn was but slightly hurt. A boy who was standing by the post against which the pung was wrecked would probably have been killed had it not been for the presence of mind and prompt action of a man, who saw the team coming and snatched the boy away, barely a second before the pung struck the post. The number of runaways this winter has been unprecedented—possibly the horses' intellects suffered from the epizootic—but we have not learned of any more serious damage being done than the breaking of sleighs and pungs.

The schools in Ward One will hold their sessions regularly hereafter. The attendance has been so small for several days that some schools have been dismissed.

The train due here at 5 1-2 o'clock from Portland on last wednesday evening, ran into some cattle two miles east of Kittery depot, and broke the legs of a cow and a heifer. There was no damage done to the train.

Wallis' Sands, Rye Beach, is designated as a life saving station on the New England coast, in the bill which passed the House Monday afternoon of last week.

J. Rider & Son advertise a ton of Castile Soap, which they are selling at the prise of common yellow soap.

Delehanty and Hengler will draw a crowd, Saturday evening.

The Evans Trial.

On Wednesday Evans's son testified to strange actions on part of the prisoner and his charge, tending to show insanity. Mary Ann Brady, with whom he boarded, also testified to the same effect.

Washington Evans was sworn and testified that he is a nephew of the prisoner, and had heard him complain of pains in the head.

Ezra C. Durgee, the prisoner's keeper testified that Evans had complained of pains in the head and had at times acted peculiarly. At seven o'clock Wednesday morning Evans requested his keeper to produce some water for him, which he was obliged to leave the room to do. On his return he found Evans with his suspender around his neck with the end attached to the nail, and just about to hang himself. Evans said he intended doing so. The keeper, of course, prevented any further action in that direction, and the prisoner is now in irons.

Dr. Eastman of Hampstead and Dr. Bancroft of the Insane Asylum testified that they did not deem Evans insane. The case was given to the jury in the afternoon, and in about half an hour they returned with a verdict of "guilty of murder in the first degree," and he was accordingly sentenced to be hanged on the third Tuesday in February, 1874.

A COMICAL MULE STORY.—We have already entered our protest against telling incredible stories in newspapers, and copy the following from the Memphis Appeal, merely as an example of the great length to which the practice may sometimes be carried:

"Last Saturday a gentleman living near Madison Station, on the Memphis and Little Rock road, left his home to go to the village. He had not proceeded more than two hundred yards, mounted on a lineal descendant of Balaam's ass, when he encountered a great, greasy, black bear. The bear was astonished, and without taking time to think, hurried up a scaly bark hickory and seated himself very comfortably on a limb, thirty or forty feet from the ground. The farmer was completely puzzled. If he rode back to the house to get his gun the bear would surely escape. He therefore tied the mule, a long-eared melancholy mule, forty or fifty years of age, to the body of the tree. The mule was twilite wise, but no bridle would hold him, and a strong leather cable was kept coiled about his neck. With this he was fastened to the tree. The farmer started to the house, and Bruin, divining his plans, deemed it proper to get away. He doubtless suspected a gun was coming. He came slowly down, tearing the bark from the body of the tree. It rattled about the sleepy mule's head, who had not yet seen the bear, and dreamed not of the proximity of the ugly beast. The bear descended until he was within five feet of the mule's great ugly head. Then it was that the stupid, innocent, unsuspecting mule looked up. He had never seen a bear before. His knees smote one another. He grew pale in the face. His eyes were projected from his head—the farmer said—half a foot. His tail was slowly lifted, the hairs all turned awry, till it stood at an angle of forty-five degrees above his spinal column, and then it was that the mule 'hoved a sigh and smoled a smile.' It was an unearthly sound; the farmer, fifty yards away, says it shook the ground where he stood, watching the progress of events. The bear suddenly twisted itself about and reascended to its perch. The mule swooning fell at the base of the tree. He lay still and apparently lifeless for a time, when Bruin again attempted the descent; but the terrified mule howled and roared even more terribly and piteously when the bark began to fall, and he dashed and danced about the tree so frantically that Bruin hesitated, and finally, in stupid amazement, sat upon the limb upon which he first rested. The farmer came with his rifle and a bullet soon stopped the pulsebeats of the bear. It fell heavily beside the mule and strange to tell, as told to us, the mule and bear died side by side; the one of a mortal wound; the other, of mortal terror. The bear was still black as Erebus; the mule's face was already white with an indescribable agony of mortal fear.

MISHAPS OF A YOUNG WOMAN.—A charming young lady of eighteen summers, named Carrie L., of Warren, paid a visit to this city a short time since, and, on Saturday afternoon last, she went to the depot of the Warren and Venango Road, intending to return home, but arrived just in time to see the train disappearing round the curve. Bent upon reaching Warren that night, she started out along the track with the view of walking the entire distance. At 7 o'clock in the evening she arrived at Newton, which is twelve miles from the city, and reaching the middle of the trestle-work at this point, she saw the night train approaching; to go on or recede, or step to one side was impossible, so she jumped down into the chasem twenty feet below. Fortunately the ground was covered with a snow-drift, into which she sank up to her arm-pits, thus breaking her fall and saving her life. She did not scream or cry for help, or anything of that sort, but quietly dug herself out, and after half an hour's work regained the track and resumed her journey. Two or three miles further on a still more serious obstacle presented itself—the track was under water as far as the eye could reach. Upon looking round she discovered a light in the woods, and concluded that it must be a house. This proved to be the case, and the hospitable family, after hearing her story, took her in and did everything in their power for her comfort. The next morning she took the train from Newton for Warren, and arrived there in time for dinner.—Titusville Press.

HIGH TOBED ENTRANCE.—A Chicago gentleman having grown wealthy suddenly, instead of appealing to that fount of knowledge, the New York Ledger, wrote to a local newspaper, and inquired the best way of obtaining an entrance into the best families in the city, high-toned houses, society, and all that. The reply was, to go in the front door, or, if no display was desired, go down the coal-hole in the sidewalk into the cellar, and then up into the parlor, or go down through the scuttle in the roof, just as he felt inclined.

CENTAUR.

At midnight on his wooded hills,
he Centaur lay dreaming of the hour,
When mankind, cured of aching ills,
Should know his all-healing power.

Not long he waited. The blind could see.—
Straightened were limbs by pain long bent,
Cripples ran, and the lame on heeded knee
Gave thanks for the Centaur Liniment.

The Centaur Liniment is the greatest pain-reliever the world has ever seen. Rheumatism, whether inflammatory, chronic or nervous, is made to disappear. Swellings cease to pain, wounds are healed, burns are cured without a scar, and stings and bites are rendered harmless.

Mrs. R. Prowell, 432 Atlantic St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have had the rheumatism for ten years. I have tried everything. The Centaur Liniment is the only thing that does me good."

Mr. Chas. Hill, 416 Pine St., Philadelphia, writes: "That two bottles of Centaur Liniment has cured a most severe sprain of his ankle".

J. H. Martin of 333 Seventh Avenue, N. Y., says: "The Centaur Liniment has cured me of a terrible case of inflammatory rheumatism and cannot be too highly recommended."

10 PRINCE STREET, N. Y., Aug 21st, 1872.
"All horse owners should have the Centaur Liniment. We keep it in our stables and find it the best thing ever adopted."
H. MASON,
Supt. Adams Express Co. Stables."

Such testimonials can be repeated indefinitely. Try it once. We will warrant it every time. Sold by all Druggists.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all hundred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultimo thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in North America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

In the opinion of the most Eminent Physicians and Chemists these fruit products are far more wholesome than "Canned" or "Dried" fruit—they having been Super-matured or ripened though the Alden Pneumatic Process, and prepared perfectly clean without exposure to flies or dirt.

These are the cheapest and best fruits in the Market, and you cannot tell them from fresh fruit when cooked.

There is no disease of the human system for which the VEGETINE cannot be used with PERFECT SAFETY, as it does not contain any metallic compound. For eradicating the system of all impurities of the blood, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease. Its wonderful effects upon these complaints are surprising to all. Many have been cured by the VEGETINE that have tried many other remedies. It can well be called

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an alliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or price—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
SINGER
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all others combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.
N. B. Those purchasing for cash, before the 1 of January next, will have a consideration allowed them.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupuline, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Alleviator absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so uniformly successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, but knowing there is a cure, Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no cold or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the sorest instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleviator for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolately unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind from time immemorial, for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, blind, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.
For sale by J. H. THACHER, WM. R. PRESTON, Portsmouth; JAMES O. TEMPLETON, Kittery; E. S. SAFFORD, Kittery Point; H. M. CURTIS, Newcastle, and dealers generally.

The Chronicle

A Thrilling Adventure.

It was—I don't remember the precise year—but it was when I was about seventeen years old, and when I lived in a New England village where I was born, and from which I had hardly ever been away.

It was the day before Thanksgiving, the only holiday that New England knows much about, and about which the rest of the world knows so very little. For three nights before, the cold had been very sharp for the time of the year, and the newly formed ice on the pond was as smooth and clear as a looking-glass. What were we all to do next day, "the gladdest, merriest day" of all the year, besides go to church and eat the feast that had been so long in preparation? That was the question asked by my strong, earnest, older friend who had come from Boston to spend Thanksgiving.

"Skate, of course," I answered.

"But why not try the ice to-night?" he asked.

I could see no reason, and we bound on our skates and flew, as it were over the glassy surface of the pond to the cove, about which were the piles of pine tree boughs. Once there, we conceived the idea of how grand it would be to skate back to the village; collect together the women and girls, take suitable provisions for a picnic, place them all in sleighs and on hand sleds, draw them to this place, and eat a supper on these rocks, amid the glare of the burning tree-tops. We were not long in carrying out our plans, for almost every house had its sleigh and skates, and those that were destitute of either united with some of their neighbors. An hour, and the little lake was covered by the merriest skating party that it had ever witnessed. And then the supper, the bonfire, the songs, the merry making! I shudder to think of such boisterous sport, with an impending death so very near! The sport was over at length, the apples eaten, the cider drank, the songs sung, the stories told, and the once great flames among the resinous pine needles were now smouldering among the limbs or lingering in the stumps and roots. It was nearly time to go. And so the company was breaking up into little knots as we came.

"Tie all the sleighs and sleds together," my strong friend shouted, the last to leave the spot. The order from our leader was soon obeyed. Each little vehicle was ranged from ten to twenty feet apart, according to the length of the ropes or leading lines which we had and three or four skaters were stationed between them. Then, two much longer ropes were stretched from either side of the long lines of which some twenty more skaters took hold. With a shout and whoop, such as Indians give when rushing to battle, we started on the ice. The line first straight or waving a little where the poor skaters were, soon took the form of a crescent; and with a clamor of voices and the grating of skating-irons, we sped over the ice.

My strong friend and I were soon on one of the side ropes and we held the nearest to the sleighs. We had not proceeded far before I perceived that the ice was bending up in front of us, and I could plainly hear it crack above the noise of the skaters. I spoke not a word but looked intently into my companion's face. Coolly thought that, so long as we kept in motion as we were then doing, we might pass the danger. But I knew very well if the true state of affairs was discovered, a panic would spread along the line, some skater would drop out, and then the sleighs and their precious burdens must sink to the bottom.

I cannot forget the horror of that moment—a moment that seemed an age. I was faint myself, but I only shuddered lest some skater should fall. I could not speak for fear; but I almost feared lest the other voices should stop and the cracking of the ice should be heard by the women, who would be sure to scream. My thoughts were on God; my eyes were fixed on the face of my friend. I was fairly drawn along up the curving ice, that seemed to rise higher before us every moment. Cold sweat was on my forehead, but I could not loosen my hand from the rope to wipe it off. My friend noticed that I was lagging—I who was so expert a skater. His eyes caught mine, and by that sort of intuitive language that we sometimes have in time of great danger, he became aware of our dreadful situation, heard the cracking of the ice, and saw it, felt it rising in front of us.

What did the strong man do? Flee like a coward from the danger he had brought us to, and escape to the land? Did the alarm seize him that had overpowered me? Far otherwise. Raising his voice so that it could be heard above the din of the skater and the merry voices of the women, he shouted:

"All sing, so we can keep better step; all sing Coronation." And without lowering his voice, he sang:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall!
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all."

The orders came so unexpectedly that few joined in singing the verse; but when he came to the next stanza almost all the voices were heard.

felt a sort of relief, when the soprano, alto, tenor and bass voices all struck the words:

"Crown Him, ye martyrs of our God,
Who from his altar call;"

but I feared the floor when the bass should be left to carry a line alone.

There were but three or four bass voices in the whole company, but my friend was numbered among them. I saw that he husbanded his breath for this as a strong man saves his strength for some great effort. Nevertheless, I could hear, alternating with the musical words:

"Extol the stem of Jesse's rod,"

the crack, crack, crack-crack-crack-crack of the brittle shell that was between us and eternity. It was a wonderous relief when four parts instead of one, and a hundred voices instead of four, took up the words which sounded like an anthem of praise,

"Extol the stem of Jesse's rod,
And crown him Lord of all."

We were now approaching the middle of the lake, where the water was the deepest, so deep that no time in the village could reach the bottom, and where the ice must be the thinnest, because it is the last to freeze there. I knew this but I felt that now we were going with such rapidity, there was no break in the song. I singed out a tree upon the shore we were trying to make, and calculated that at the rate they were singing, there were verses enough to last until we reached it. I feared lest the leader might omit a verse, as was sometimes done in church, and there might be left a space over which we might pass in silence, or rather in a silence made dreadful by the cracking of the ice.

I had no cause. There was indeed that awful crack-crack-crack of the ice distinctly heard during the singing of each line of every stanza of the hymn; but it was either that I had become used to it or that it was indeed more faint than it was before, that it failed to affect me as at first. So, too, there were little breaths of ice to be passed over, after the singers had closed the verse:

"Ye saints, in every kindred, every tribe,
On this terrestrial ball,
To him all majesty ascribe,
And crown Him Lord of all."

But our momentum was then such that I knew we could reach the shore in safety, which we soon did.

On reaching it there was the same boisterous noise that marked our starting, each one untying his own sled or sleigh, and joining the little party with which he came. But of the peril through which they had passed, the danger from which they had been rescued, not one had the slightest intimation. For my friend and myself—the only ones who were aware of our wonderful deliverance—we were left alone. And there, on that rocky beach, with stars above us, we sank upon our knees, our arms entwining each other's necks. It was a silent prayer we offered; an offering of thanks to the "Giver of every good and perfect gift." Not for us alone, but for all those who had been brought out of peril. Then we rose hand in hand and walked to our homes.

The next day was Thanksgiving; we entered into no boisterous mirth. We kept our secret to ourselves that day, but during all the time since then we have not mentioned the affair to each other. But once long after this, when we were in the church together, and the preacher gave out "Coronation," I noticed that he did not sing, but grasped my hand in his while the tears flowed from his eyes as though he were a child.

Every village near Portland has a bad reputation, whether honestly or not remains to be seen. The Portland Advertiser has the following evidence: A Portland gentleman who heard that (like the Marblehead boys who rocked strangers who wore good clothes) the Ferry village boy sassaulted Portlanders, made a tour of that place, and said exultingly to a Ferry villager, "Well, I've been all over your place, and didn't even see a boy!" "Ah!" said the villager, "well, that's because all the boys were at the other end of the village stoning a funeral!"

Had the fire occurred a little later, when the crowded house was witnessing the performance, there would have been a fearful panic.

The Transcript calls attention to the fact that although two years since the firm of Oakes & Oliver Ames were compelled—by reason of the action of the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to the Union Pacific Railroad Company—to ask for an extension of six, twelve eighteen and twenty-four months on their liabilities, which at that time amounted to more than $7,000,000, the instalments on this large amount have been promptly met, with interest at maturity, the last becoming due in Tuesday. These obligations have been responded to without interfering in the least with the regular business of this concern—a settlement without a parallel.

A WOMAN IN A SLEEPING CAR.—Going to Boston from Washington, the authoress had her berth made in a bed, and, divesting herself of her outer garments, retired behind the curtain, and slept till daybreak. "I knew," she proceeds, "that at each end of the sleeping-car there was a toilet-room, with marble basins and washing paraphernalia. I put my head out between the opening of the curtain to see if the place was unoccupied, when to my amazement, what should meet my eye, all the way up and down the narrow corridor, but stockinged—no, I mean socked—feet struggling into boots of the most decidedly masculine 'persuasion.' As I was contemplating the possibility of threading my way through this novel, living hedge, I came to the knowledge that I was the only lady in the car, and that, unknown and unprotected, I had been passing the night in the most ignorant and reckless security with about twenty men! In any other country, this discovery would have been horrifying in itself and extremely disagreeable in its results; but, short as my experience of American chivalry had been, it was quite sufficient for me to know that I had absolutely nothing whatever to feel uncomfortable about. Most of the gentlemen did me the honor to ignore my presence completely, thereby making me feel very much assured; those that did not, neither stared nor spoke; but as the train slackened at the Jersey City station, two of them helped me down the steps of the platform, and, one taking my shawls and the other my handbag, said, 'Allow me, madam, to see you to the ferry,' whither they accompanied me, and bowed themselves off."

IMPROMPTITIES AT FUNERALS.—In the New York Observer complaint is made that ministers in conducting funerals in private houses, in some cases, are placed on the stairs leading to the rooms above. It is, we suppose, when the relatives are above and other persons below. The Observer thinks this is incompatible with usefulness and propriety.

The Congregationalist of Boston, takes it up and adds that the practice of compelling the mourning family to take the farewell look at the departed in a room full of spectators, should be dispensed with, and states that the time will come when the practice will be classed with the barbarities of the past.

We will add that there is another practice at funerals, more repulsive than either of the above. It is when funerals are in the church, having the departed beloved in front of the pulpit, and at the close of the services, the relatives take leave by passing forward, each gazed at by the entire assembly, and carefully scrutinized as they manifest grief, and sometimes excessive emotion. It is absolutely vulgar, and we hope such a course will not be adopted again. J. P.

PROVINCE TAX OF DOVER IN 1680.—In the record it is called "Cocheco Province Rate." In it sixty-six names are put, with the rate against each. This probably embraced what is now the business part of Dover, with Somersworth, Madbury and Durham, so far as those places were settled. Next comes Dover Neck, with thirty names. This was the section first settled, near the Piscataqua river, several miles southeast of the village. Lastly comes Bloody Point, with twenty-four names. The latter was on the Newington side of the Piscataqua, and was so called from a quarrel between the agents of Dover and Portsmouth in 1631, relative to a point of land there convenient for both. The whole number taxed was one hundred and thirty; about the same number as Portsmouth had the same year.

The highest tax was that of Capt. John Gerrish, 13 shillings, 2 pence. Major Richard Waldron's was 12s., 9d. The latter was killed by the Indians in a terrible massacre nine years latter. Lieut. Peter Coffin's tax was 12s., 8d. He had a garrison as defence against the Indians.

The names of men in Dover then, and preserved in descendants there or in towns near, to the present, are numerous. The principal are the following; Waldron, Ham, Horn, Wentworth, Hanson, Otis, (now Otis,) Herd, (now Hurd,) Gerrish, Watson, Twombly, Chesley, Roberts, Stagpoll, (now Stackpole,) Ricker, Dam, (now Dame,) Tibets, (now Tibbetts,) Whitehouse, Hall, Tuttle, Perkins, Young, Henderson, Mader, Nutter, Rawlens, (now Rollins,) Trickle, (now Trickey,) Gray and Brickford.

State News

The Concord Patriot, under its new management, already shows marked improvement, as might be expected with Hon. E. C. Bailey at the helm.

Franklin B. Evans, the Northwood murderer, has been, at various times, a resident of Manchester; and while there did not bear a very good name. He first came there about thirty years ago, and lived at Amoskeag village. His principal business was gathering roots and herbs, which he sold to various drug stores. His wife took in washing. He left the city, and for ten years was not seen there. In 1856 he returned, stopping for a short time with a widowed daughter, Mrs. Mann, who lived on Laurel street. In 1864 he returned again stopping with his son Franklin, who was home from the war on sick leave. Evans, during the whole of his residence in Manchester bore the character of a shiftless fellow.

The wife of Timothy Collins of Manchester has given birth to two pairs of twins within a year, the eldest boys, the youngest girls. One of the former is dead; the others are doing well.

TREE PLANTING.—The Kansas Farmer is desirous that the State Board of Agriculture and the auxiliary local societies shall unite in requesting the Legislature to enact a law designating trees. It suggests that ten premiums be offered, one of $500, and one each of $400, $300, $200, $100, $75, $50, $25, $15, and $10, to be given to the ten citizens of Kansas who will plant, on that day, the largest number of forest trees.

The Farmer believes that such a law, passed and retained ten years, will benefit the State to the extent of millions of dollars, and it is doubtless right. In Nebraska such a regulation was adopted two years ago and has already resulted in securing the planting of millions of trees. The man who obtained the premium last spring planted seventeen thousand trees, and many others planted but few less. The effect of the law in Nebraska, in two years, has been to dot the prairies of that state with beautiful groves of thrifty young trees.

PILES.—The screaming torture from internal bleeding, external and itching piles is fast wasting away the dismantled frames who are afflicted and their hope and courage have long since given place to despair. A NEW DEPARTURE IN MEDICINE.—It is difficult to induce the medical profession to abandon the old grooves in which it has traveled for centuries. Purgation, venoection, equanization and thisteration and its train of venerable bobbles, and it does not like to harness up the new four-in-hand of invigoration, regulation, purification and renovation, and take a new departure. Advanced practitioners, however, who are not wedded to old dogmas, admit that in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters we possess, so to speak a counter-charm to the malign influences that produce various diseased conditions. They do not deny that in cases of general debility, in nervous complaints, and in all disturbances of the liver, the bowels, and the digestive organs, this powerful and wholesome vegetable remedy effects extraordinary cures. The public rendered this verdict many years ago, and the enlightened members of the profession acquiesce in it. Better late than never.

Take up your line of March for Crittenton's, No. 76 6th Avenue, all ye coughers and wheezers, and snufflers. It is the depot for Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, which for all ailments of the lungs and their air passages is an immediate and sovereign remedy. All druggists keep it.

A WORLD OF THANKS IS DUE To the chemist who first discovered the virtues of the Quillaya Saponaria, or Soap Tree of Chili. The wonderful cleansing and purifying property of its Bark gives to the fragrant SOZODONT much of its unrivalled efficacy as a preservative of the teeth.

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUCCESS.—Fallacies and frauds are short lived. They may flourish for a little while, but the sober second thought of the people condemns them and they perish. It would take even the celebrating Calculator* a long time to count the imitations and counterfeits of the supreme tonic of the age, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that have been brought out since the first introduction of that celebrated remedy. They have collapsed one after another, but the great vegetable preventive and curative is still on its disease-conquering march. At this season, as the air becomes more and more chilly, and searching vapors, affect the integuments and create unwonted pains in the stomach and bowels, it is of the utmost importance to tone and regulate the system so as to enable it to bear up against the uncongenial temperature which produces these disturbances. Fever and ague, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous prostration, costiveness and chronic indigestion are a few among the many disorders which yield readily to this famous restorative.

INSTANTANEOUS is the operation of BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL in all cases of SORE THROAT, HOARSENESS, COUGHS, CROUP, and LUNG AFFECTIONS. It is beneficial in all cases. Sold for 50 cents per bottle.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Police Court.

Three young men, for making so much noise on the street as to disturb the neighborhood, were brought before Judge Page on Thursday, and made to pay the usual fee charged for such amusements.

John Brennan, a marine, for being drunk and disorderly, was fined $9.30.

Michael Hoffman was accused by Mrs. Milton of stealing jewelry, but Judge Page decided the evidence insufficient to sustain the charge, and Hoffman was dismissed.

A MERITED COMPLIMENT.—"F.," writing from Portsmouth to the Boston Globe, says:—

Old Portsmouth, you know, claims, and has, the oldest newspaper extant in America. It also claims to have started the first religious newspaper, and the first religious magazine—as well as the first stage-coach before mentioned herein. So we claim to be judges in such matters; but the like of the Globe was never seen before under the sun. Its success in a single year is altogether unprecedented, the other oldest and strongest Boston dailies reducing their price and enlarging their size. Then a new and strong daily in a queen city of the West copying the Globe's make-up exactly, name and all, though never the Globe's beauty, and last, not least, the oldest and strongest evening daily in Boston following the "great Globe itself" into quarto form and price. Good, so. And then the Weekly Globe—who ever heard of the like of that? A sparkling sheet, in the first number which, without precedent, appears no single word of introduction, preface, editor's address, or salutatory, everything from the establishment seeming to come as quite a matter of course. Wanders, they say, will never cease; and The Globe being a wonder, its success is thus once more assured. Neither Bennett, Greeley or Raymond ever did such a year's work.

Miss Anna Bernard,

Formerly of this city, and a vocalist of uncommon merit, made her debut at Savona, Italy, Jan. 4th. The Giornale Cittdano of that city, gives the following in relation to the same:

"The representation of 'Sonnambula' on Tuesday evening, had a reception which surpassed all expectation. The prima donna, Signora Anna Bernard, who for the first time stepped upon the boards, received an exceedingly warm greeting. From her first appearance upon the stage to the end of the spectacle, she knew how to awaken her public, an enthusiasm the like of which we do not remember. In the first and third acts, the applause and ovation reached a grand shout of triumph, and many times she was obliged to present herself to the front, 'midst a real tempest of applause. This gifted young lady was born in distant America, studied some time at Milan, under the tuition of the first Italian masters, Perini and Catte. She has been educated with the best school of music; has a voice robust, harmonious and sympathetic, and says her role with a sentiment and expression truly admirable, is gifted with much grace, an extraordinary agility, and is a true 'artist' in every sense, and we believe we shall not deceive ourselves in affirming that she is destined to follow a most brilliant career, and will make the fortune of the impressario who can engage her."

Inquest at Kittery.

The body of Mr. Leach, who lost his life on the river Tuesday night, was recovered Thursday forenoon by Mr. Hiram Amazeen of Kittery, who saw it lying face downwards upon the bottom, about twenty-five feet from low water mark on Badger's Island, in water about twenty feet deep, and brought it up with an eel-spear. The body had been in the water but about thirty-six hours, yet the face was much disfigured, there being an ugly wound on and around the right eye, a cut on the left cheek, and one or two smaller marks. As there was no coroner in Kittery, the commissions of Dr. Wentworth and Mr. Nealley having expired a short time ago, Washington Junkins, Esq., of York, was sent for to hold an inquest, and the following named gentlemen were empanelled as a jury:

Dr. Daniel W. Jones, (foreman,) Messrs. John Lambert, Albert A. Hayes, William W. Locke, Oliver Cutts and Alonzo Fernald.

Drs. Wentworth, Jones and Johnson examined the injuries on the face of deceased, and the inquest was then adjourned to 9-o'clock this morning.

Lacontes.

Aaron Young, Esq., had a present of ten trout from Mr. J. D. Pillsbury, of Chatham, on Thursday, eight of them weighing a pound and three quarters each. How high up was that for Chatham? Having been favored with a taste of them we know whereof we speak.

Dr. O. Fitzgerald will return to Portsmouth, Feb. 17th and 18th.

Remember Feb. 24th, 1873. Secure your shares in Wells' Grand Distribution before that date, at Lowd's picture store.

HOW TO CURE A COLD.—We do not know how we can ever express our gratitude to the Danbury News for furnishing us a panacea for all the coughs and lung complaints that we may be subject to this winter. In the language of the virtuous father of the melodrama we can only say: Heaven bless you my child! Listen to his solid chunks of wisdom: One of our citizens who has been troubled with a severe cold on the lungs effected his recovery in the following simple manner. He boiled a little boneset and horehound together, and drank freely of the tea before going to bed. The next day he took five pills, put one kind of plaster on his breast, another under his arms, and still another on his back. Under advice from an experienced old lady he took all off with an oyster knife in the afternoon, and slapped on a mustard paste instead. His mother put some onion drafts on his feet and gave him a lump of tar to swallow. Then he put hot bricks to his feet and went to bed. Next morning, another old lady came in with a bottle of goose oil, and gave him a dose of it on a quill, and an aunt arrived about the same time from Bethel, with a bundle of sweet fern which she made into a tea, and gave him every half hour until noon, when he took a big dose of salts. After dinner his wife, who had seen a fine old lady of great experience in doctoring, on Franklin street, gave him two pills of her make, about the size of an English walnut, and of a similar shape, and two tablespoonfuls of home made balsam to keep them down. Then he took a half pint of hot rum at the suggestion of an old sea captain in the next house, and steamed his legs with an alcohol bath. At this crisis two of the neighbors arrived who saw at once that his blood was out of order, and gave him a half gallon of spearmint tea, and a big dose of castor oil. Before going to bed he took eight of a new kind of pill, wrapped about his neck a flannel soaked in hot vinegar and salt, and had feathers burnt in a shovel in his room. He is now thoroughly cured, and full of gratitude. We advise our readers to cut this out and keep it where it can be readily found when danger threatens.

REMARKABLE IMMUNITY FROM CRIME. Montreal is a great centre of population. It is inhabited by a people of diverse origins and creeds. Yet during the entire year 1872 there was but one indictment, or murder before our courts. We pause over the encouraging fact. But one charge of taking life, the gravest offence known to the law. This moreover, within a day's journey of the great metropolis south of us, whose journals teem day after day with tales of crimes of the most revolting and horrible character. Then, again, Montreal is a great mart of commerce, with multitudes of young clerks and employes exposed hourly to strong temptations; with hundreds and thousands of officials of every class holding places more or less involving trust and confidence. Yet charges of embezzlement before the highest court there were but eight. Before the general sessions but four. The cases of larceny are more numerous, but nevertheless surprisingly few. Altogether, before the Queen's bench there were but forty-six charges during the year. In thirteen of these no bill was found by the grand jury, and there remained but thirty-three charges deemed sufficiently serious to send before a jury. The offences were chiefly larcenies and the receiving of stolen goods. Seventeen of the cases remain untried, and on the charges tried there were eighteen convictions and nine acquittals. Fifty-two cases were tried before the judge of the sessions under the act for more speedy trial of felonies and misdemeanors, but these were chiefly thefts of no serious character. Not only is the total volume of crime for 1872 small, but there is a considerable decrease as compared with the previous year. In the number of cases before the highest criminal court this decrease is very remarkable. Only forty-six indictments were preferred before the grand jury of the Queen's bench in 1872, against seventy-nine in 1871, a falling off of thirty-one. Before the general sessions there was a slight increase—eleven indictments. But this is more than set off by a diminution of fifteen in the cases before the judge of sessions. In the whole number of charges, therefore there was a diminution of thirty-five.—Montreal Gazette.

DON'T READ WITH TIRED EYES.—The moment the eyes feel tired, the very moment you are conscious of an effort to read or sew, lay aside the book or needle, and take a walk for an hour or employ yourself in some active exercise not requiring the close use of the eyes. To prevent fatiguing them, rest them frequently for half a minute or so, while reading or sewing looking at things at a distance or up to the sky.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Having disposed of the Stock and good will of the Job Office connected with the DAILY CHRONICLE to Mr. Charles W. Gardner, we would express our thanks to our friends and former patrons, and solicit for Mr. Gardner a continuance of that patronage which has been so liberally bestowed upon us.

CENTAUR.

At midnight on his wooded hills,
he Centaur lay dreaming of the hour,
When mankind, cured of aching ills,
Should know his all-healing power.

Not long he waited. The blind could see,—
Straightened were limbs by pain long bent,
Cripples ran, and the lame on bended knee
Gave thanks for the Centaur Liniment.

The Centaur Liniment is the greatest pain-reliever the world has ever seen. Rheumatism, whether inflammatory, acute or nervous, is made to disappear. Swellings cease to pain, wounds are healed, burns are cured without a scar, and stings and bites are rendered harmless.

Mrs. R. Powell, 492 Atlantic St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have had the rheumatism for ten years. I have tried everything. The Centaur Liniment is the only thing that does me good."

Mr. Chas. Hill, 616 Pine St., Philadelphia, writes: "That two bottles of Centaur Liniment has cured a most severe sprain of his ankle."

J. H. Martin of 383 Seventh Avenue, N. Y., says: "The Centaur Liniment has cured me of a terrible case of inflammatory rheumatism and cannot be too highly recommended."

59 Broadway, N. Y., Aug. 21st, 1872.

"All horse owners should have the Centaur Liniment. We tried it in our stables and find it the best thing ever adopted."

H. Harris,
Supt. Adams Express Co. Stables."

Such testimonials can be repeated indefinitely. Try it once. We will warrant it every time. Sold by all Druggists.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Believe Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the long-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. Every Family should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred Throat Diseases at all times prevalent, it is the choice of Prevention. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this Family Medicine prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in vestil from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no total cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best Pulmonary Curative he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultimu thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are Wild Cherry Bark, Squill Root, Liquorice Root, Blood Root, &c. It is a Blood Purifier, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

FRUITS & VEGETABLES.

Having lost nothing but water, they return, when put in water, to their original condition, both in quantity and flavor.

Directions:—To every pound of Fruit add four quarts cold water, come to a boil slowly and stew 10 to 30 minutes, add half the usual amount of Sugar used with fresh fruit.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

In the opinion of the most Eminent Physicians and Chemists these fruit products are far more wholesome than "Canned" or "Dried" fruit—they having been Super-matured or ripened though the Alden Pneumatic Process, and prepared perfectly clean without exposure to flies or dirt.

These are the cheapest and best fruits in the Market, and you cannot tell them from fresh fruit when cooked.

VEGETINE
The Great Blood Purifier.
A valuable Indian compound, for restoring the health, and for the permanent cure of all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, such as Scrofula, Scrofulous Humors, Cancers, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Canker, Salt Rheum, Pimples and Humors on the Face, Ulcers, Coughs, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Pains in the Side, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Costiveness, Dizziness, Piles, Headache, Nervousness, Faintness at the Stomach, Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Female Weakness, and General Debility.
This preparation is scientifically and chemically combined, and so strongly concentrated from roots, herbs and barks, that its good effects are realized immediately after commencing to take it. There is no disease of the human system for which the VEGETINE cannot be used with PERFECT SAFETY, as it does not contain any metallic compound. For eradicating the system of all impurities of the blood, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease. Its wonderful effects upon these complaints are surprising to all. Many have been cured by the VEGETINE that have tried many other remedies. It can well be called

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
SINGER
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER
IS THE BEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all other combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupulina, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or polish compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the secret instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are the only certain, safe and sure.
For sale by J. H. THACHER, WM. H. PRESTON, Portsmouth; JAMES O. TREFETHEN, Kittery; E. S. SAFFORD, Kittery Point; H. N. CURTIS, Newcastle, and dealers generally.

The Chronicle

Muggins.

There was not a particle of romance in him, from the top of his frowsy sunsinged head to the bottom of his blue, mud crusted toes. He had a broad, flat face, with great patches of dirt like chess-men here and there, and brown, ugly freckles for opponents. His mouth was big and disagreeable, with a hungry, painful expression; and his eyes, which originally might have been very good ones, had so long been forced to look at things through a tangled lock of hair and a hole in his capvizor, that they had undeniably a cast in them. As for his clothes—poor fellow—they were but a poor apology for clothes. Certainly he must have been obliged to put them on piece by piece, an arm here, a leg there and a strip anywhere it would fit, they were so ragged; and he enjoyed the luxury of a washerwoman, must have sent his coat away by the dozen, like a certain destitute gentleman of whom I have read. But in spite of this he was a human being. He had no charming foreign history, was not a poor benighted heathen, worshipping idols beneath a tropical sun, but a poor heathen sweeping crossings in the cold, muddy streets of New York, and therefore had no claims upon societies or philanthropy.

He was very near starvation, and only a few doors from freezing, but nobody knew it; and right there, in the open day, with the busy stream of life pouring up and down the street, he sat down on a step and mused. He hadn't a penny, and he might sweep all day and not get one, for it was bitter cold, and nobody would take the trouble to remove mitten and dive into pockets for him. Oh, no!

"Oh, Katie, I wish we were on the other side—see that lovely braid! I must have it; but how am I to get over this wet place—I've no rubbers."

My hero looked up. The speaker was a young girl, with a sweet womanly face, and her lovely eyes were looking imploringly at the store opposite.

"Is it over there you'd be going?" he asked with a twist of his protruding wisp of hair.

The young lady smiled.

"Yes; I want to cross the street very much. I could if it were swept here for a yard or so—it is dry all the rest of the way."

Now of course he had never heard of Raleigh's gallantry to his royal lady, Queen Elizabeth; but with astonishing alacrity, he tore off the main part of his ragged coat, and spread it over the wet crossing.

"There now! jest you step on this, and give a little hop, and there you are as dry as a match, on t'other side."

The sweet-faced girl stopped for a moment, and then she walked across, and called the boy.

"What is your name, boy?"

"Don't know no name only Muggins; Jack Muggins, I s'pose, though come to think on it."

"Well, Jack, do you know that you have thrown away your coat?"

"Don't I? Well, you bet! But its no 'count—I'll be, 'fore morning, where they don't need coats; I aint had no vittles fur most two days, and I guess a teller as can stand that, can git through without a coat, 'specially an old rag like that."

"Do you ever steal food, Jack? Couldn't you?"

"Couldn't I? Do you see them stands and winders? Don't you think I could find grub enough. I had a mother oncest, I had, and she told me better, and I'll be a mighty sight harder up than I am now, afore I'll take that as other folks gets. I had a quarter hooked from me oncest, I did, and I guess I kinder know how it seems."

The two girls were in tears. He did not see it; but he did see the four bills the sweet-faced one held out.

"Jack, do you see these. I'm going to give them to you, and I want you to use them well—there, take them."

"Do yer mean that I'm to keep twenty dollars to myself?"

But they were gone, and Muggins, with the independence of a millionaire, stood there in mouth-open wonder,

* * * * * * *

"Henry, I don't know who can so well know our needs as to send us money. This the third time it has come since your illness. It cannot be that Mr. Jacobs has repented of his stern refusal to advance your salary, or that any of poor papa's debtors have been touched by the sharp sting of conscience. This makes one hundred dollars that we have received."

The young wife, with tearful eyes, turned the bills over in her hand, and then murmuring a blessing on the donor, went on with her work.

It was a pretty little room, but there were clear evidences of poverty visible everywhere. It shone out on every article of furniture, and, clearest of all, on the invalid husband, who with marks of a recent and severe illness in his face, sat near the window.

"Well, Carrie, whoever sent it must know our wants, and we must be grateful. Why," with a smile, "if they keep on, I'll soon have the necessary amount to buy the Clarkson's. There's Clarkson, now, coming up the street."

Clarkson was a fine, spruce-looking business man, with a smiling face, and a quick, nervous manner.

"I'm glad, Beauty, to see you looking so well. I believe it's more than half due to your recent good fortune," said he.

"My fortune, sir!"

"Why, yes. I've heard all about it. There was an individual in the store talking me about a legacy, and making some little arrangements for a meeting here to-morrow, for the purpose of taking you into the firm. I think he said he would call here this afternoon. I'm in a confounded hurry, or I'd sit and talk awhile. Good morning. See you to-morrow."

"Carrie, I'm bewildered!"

"So am I, darling; but wait awhile. We shall understand it."

Two hearts at least thumped with expectation that afternoon, when there came a loud rap on the door, and pale and trembling Carrie opened it. A plainly dressed man entered, hat in hand, with a shy, surprised air.

"How-do-do, Mr. and Mrs. Beatly," he began. "I am well acquainted, you see. You don't know me I suppose. Well, I'm Muggins."

"Muggins!" repeats the husband.

"Yes, Muggins! You don't know—does," pointing to the bewildered little woman.

"Are you the man who befriended us?" asked Carrie.

"I'm the man that pays his honest debts. I'm little Muggins, the street sweeper, to whom, in his dark days, there came a good angel, who gave him, in perfect confidence, twenty dollars and a true woman's smile, and lifted him out of the gutter on to good solid ground. Those twenty dollars and that smile have been accumulating for twelve years. I've been waiting for a good chance to pay the debt; but, although I've never lost sight of you, I've never seen a time when you needed it. I went into business with that twenty dollars; bought a news stand; made money; sold it; went in on a larger scale; studied, and learned to read and write. Have got enough now, at the age of twenty-four, to keep up my business and pay my debts. Lawyers and fellows will be here to-morrow and make it all right. God bless you both!"

And Muggins tried to look unconcerned as he saw the young husband and his wife sobbing like children at this strange and happy turn in their affairs.

"It's the happiest day I ever knew, except of course, the day you gave me the money, ma'am. I was a very dark minded person then, but somehow I've worked my way out, and I believe that I am standing in the light. Three cheers for Clarkson and Beatly!"

"And Muggins!"

Readables.

The Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad is being pushed on towards the White Mountain Notch, and the managers, it is said, intend to run within eight miles of the Notch the coming summer.

Blood's Locomotive Works in Manchester, which have been running on three-fourths time for the past six weeks, have commenced the present week to run nine hours per day.

The House of Representatives passed the bill for the construction of eight new sloops of war, on Thursday. They are to cost $8,200,000.

The Boston Globe is of the opinion that under certain contingencies Secretary Boutwell may be the next President of the United States, after the expiration of the second term of U. S. Grant. Worse things than that might come to pass.

Boston is getting things dreadfully mixed. In order to fit the Old South Church for a post office, they're put in it the waxed dancing floor from the Jubilee here; possibly with the idea that floor wax and sealing wax ought to be associated.

According to the Springfield Republican, it is good to write fine poems, but better to have ordinary human feeling.

Governor Dix, on the recommendations of physicians, has granted respite to the 14th, to Gaffney, the convicted murderer, sentenced to be hanged, to allow an investigation as to his sanity.

The reported suicide of Stokes was a hoax.

Where are the birds that make geese of themselves by flying north about this time?

Ten cold-blooded murders have occurred in Iowa since the abolition of capital punishment.

The funded loan subscriptions in the United States and Europe have been so heavy that the Secretary of the Treasury, in order to stop the interest, has issued a call for one hundred millions of 5-20 bonds of 1862, in advance of the closing of the books on Friday evening. Additional calls will be made shortly, the Secretary having decided to call at one time more than $100,000,000, because of the clerical labor involved in preparing, receiving and delivering the bonds.

Evans The Fiend.

The Traveller of Friday evening contained a two column article prepared by its wide-awake correspondent, "Kent," which, if true, is the most enterprising movement which that ubiquitous searcher for news has made since being connected with the Traveller. According to this account Evans killed a niece of five years at Derry in 1858; in 1861, he assaulted and cut the throat of a girl of fourteen years in Augusta, Me., for which another man died in prison; in 1865, he outraged Isabella Joyce, fourteen years old, and then killed her and her brother John, twelve years old, in Bussey's woods, near Boston; June 10th, 1872, a woman was found dead in the woods near Fitchburg, Mass., and Evans intimates that he outraged and killed her; and the same year murdered Georgianna Lovering, for which crime he is now waiting in the State prison for the third Tuesday of February, 1874, to come along that he may expiate his crime on the gallows. Deputy Sheriff Drew, who extorted these confessions from Evans, testifies to "Kent's" account (under oath) as correct, but some of the Boston papers assert that detectives there know that some other person is the murderer of the Joyce children. It is evident, however, that Evans is a cold-blooded wretch, too dangerous to go at large, and the feeling of relief will be general when the fiend drops through the gallows-hatch.

A NEW NAVY YARD.—In the U. S. Senate on Thursday, on motion of Mr. Cragin of New Hampshire, the bill to establish an iron ship-building yard on water falling into the Atlantic and another on the Mississippi or one of its tributaries was taken up, and he addressed the Senate in its favor. He also submitted the report of the naval committee, which shows that the proposals are to create a building yard in which ores and coal shall be made into superior iron for the special purpose of steamships and machinery. It is claimed that the methods proposed will so reduce the labor and costs that iron steamers may be built at a less price than in England and Scotland. To prevent a monopoly, the committee have added an amendment which compels the company created by the bill to supply all ship-builders with this iron worked into the forms required, whether for ships or machinery, at five per cent. upon the cost, this being not more than the cost of supervision, and will enable all builders to convert their wooden into iron ship works, and contend on equal terms for the building of ships to restore and maintain our carrying trade and ocean commerce. The aid proposed is a guarantee of bonds secured by the property of the company existing and created before their issue and payable from a fund formed by a five per cent. upon all work done in the yard, which the commission, composed of the Secretaries of the Navy, of War and the Treasury are empowered to collect and pay into the United States Treasury, and which it is estimated will produce the fund therefore in half the time of the bonds.

A CORRECTION.—The Newburyport Herald says: "We were misinformed as to some of the most important circumstances of the incident of a horse perishing at Hampton river a few days ago. The driver was not intoxicated, but as we learn it a sober, respectable man. On his way there was a blinding snow storm, and he took the road inside the beach, which is not easy to find at such a time, and he became bewildered. Leaving his horse for a moment or two to find where he was, on his return he found horse and sleigh gone. He supposed that the horse had continued on his way and the man proceeded to Black Rocks, and finding no trace of his team, returned as far as the Seaside House, and with Mr. Littlefield and a man from the Atlantic House he tracked the horse and sleigh to Hampton river, and the next day the Seabrook people found the horse drowned. The item as we heard it and as published, was very unjust to a worthy and respectable man."

CHIEF MOSELIER.—Judge Poland's committee has its report nearly completed. It will deal only with members of the present House, leaving the Senate to take the entire cognizance of testimony affecting its members and the president of that body. Speaker Blaine, Mr. Dawes and Judge Bingham are entirely exonerated, being declared free from all blame or suspicion in their transactions. Messrs. Kelley and Garfield will be leniently dealt with, no recommendation for action by the House being made in either case. Congressing Mr. Ames, the committee await his return with his books and papers before making up a verdict.

State News.

Daniel Graves of Sandwich had his right hand caught in a picker at the Belknap mill recently, tearing the hand from the wrist and lacerating the arm to the elbow. Amputation at the shoulder was necessary. It is thought that he will recover.

Lambert Hastings & Son's steam saw mill at West Concord, embracing shingle and clapboard works, was burned on the 5th. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective stove.

The house of Mr. Gates in Whitefield was burned Thursday afternoon. The contents were saved; loss about $2000; no insurance.

There is a great temperance revival in progress in Tilton, total prohibition being the watchword. A citizen's committee has closed all the saloons in town, and stopped the sale of ale and cider, and also the sale of liquors at the drug stores for medicinal use.

Evans, the murderer, was carried to the State prison on Thursday.

"CATCH A WEASEL ASLEEP!"—The following story is new in type—the Providence Press says—and illustrates the well recognized ability of Gen. Butler to keep an eye single to his own interest. The Lowell market man who supplied the meat that "doth this our Cæsar feed that he hath grown so great," was one day engaged in making some arrangements with the cook, when the watch dog who guards the General's pleasantly situated premises, took a fancy to a tempting roasting piece in the unprotected wagon, and not having the strict notions of honor of his master, helped himself. The butcher discovered the theft, and being convinced of his own shrewdness, called at the front door and interviewed Mr. Butler. "General, if a man's dog was to steal a piece of meat from my wagon, what course would you advise me to pursue?" "Why, simply present your bill," replied the General, "and payment is not likely to be refused." All the while chuckling at the trap he had sprung, the butcher demanded three dollars, which the General could not well deny. With a self-satisfied air the marketman started for his team, but was recalled by Butler, who said blandly; "You have evidently forgotten to leave my usual consultation fee of five dollars." The butcher's smile faded as he drew forth the required sum, and he departed with pensive steps.

THE DEAR LADIES. — The strange fascination of ladies to attend auction sales of dry goods has been exemplified at a certain auction in New York city during the past week. An auctioneer says the presence of those who attend merely to see the fun is endurable, but the lady who bids a certain article of cloth up to nine cents a yard, and when it is knocked down, to decide to take one yard, he regards as a blot on the civilization of the nineteenth century."

DECADENCE OF THE SENATE.—Among the older members of the Senate the feelings aroused by recent developments partake of mingled indignation and grief. Conversing with the best known and most respected Senators, there is the expression felt as paramount, and that is as to the low estate to which it seems the Senate has fallen. The character, or rather want of it, which seems to be the only distinguishing trait of recent acquisitions, as well as the suspicion of corruption, which, like mildew, fall on all alike, arouses the utmost solicitude in the minds of such Republicans as Frelinghuysen, Edmunds, the Morrills, Wilson, Sherman, Bayard, Saulsbury, Cragin, Morton and others, who have aspired to Senatorial honors, because it was a worthy crown to political endeavor and public ambition.—Washington Cor. Boston Globe.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Having disposed of the Stock and good will of the Job Office connected with the DAILY CHRONICLE to Mr. Charles W. Gardner, we would express our thanks to our friends and former patrons, and solicit for Mr. Gardner a continuance of that patronage which has been so liberally bestowed upon us.

CORNS.—Since pride and fashion have had control of mankind, and shoemakers were compelled to make boots and shoes to fit fancy instead of the feet, the suffering from Corns, Bunions, Ingrowing Nails, Sore Instops, Blistered Heels, Callousities on the bottom of the feet, &c., cannot be described. But Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies will cure all such torments, and proper fitting boots will prevent their reproduction. Sold by all druggists. a13

A SURE CURE follows the use of BUCHMAN'S PULMONIC CORDIAL—the best known remedy for THROAT and LUNG COMPLAINTS. Only 50 cts. a bottle.

Take up your line of March for Crittenden's, No. 7 6th Avenue, all ye coughers and wheezers, and welcome. It is the depot for Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, which for all ailments of the lungs and their air passage is an immediate and sovereign remedy. All Druggists keep it.

INSTANTANEOUS is the operation of BUCHMAN'S PULMONIC CORDIAL in all cases of SORE THROAT, HOARSENESS, COUGHS, CROUP, and LUNG AFFECTIONS. It is beneficial in all cases. Sold for 50 cents per bottle.

PILES.—The unceasing torture from internal bleeding, external and itching piles is fast wearing away the thousands of those who are afflicted and their hope and courage have long since given place to despair. Let those who see this cheer up, for a mild and sure cure may be had by using BRIGGS' PILE REMEDIES.

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUCCESS.—Fallacies and frauds are short lived. They may flourish for a little while, but the sober second thought of the people condemns them and they perish. It would take even the "Lightning Calculator" a long time to count the imitations and counterfeits of the supreme tonic of the age, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that have been brought out since the first introduction of that celebrated remedy. They have collapsed one after another, but the great vegetable preventive and curative is still on its disencouraging march. At this season, as the air becomes more and more chilly, and searching vapors, affect the integuments and create unwonted pains in the stomach and bowels, it is of the utmost importance to tone and regulate the system so as to enable it to bear up against the uncongenial temperature which produces these disturbances. Fever and ague, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous prostration, costiveness and chronic indigestion are a few among the many disorders which yield readily to this famous restorative.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the Mayor and Aldermen Mendum and Hatch were appointed a committee, with such as the Council may join, to confer with a committee from the City Councils of Dover, relative to a joint celebration of the 250th anniversary of both cities.

The petition of John H. Grant for lease of store under the city rooms was placed on file.

A motion to pay bill of M. Dyer, Jr., ($10) for taking two affidavits of a colored barber in Boston, and a bill of $5 for E. Cutting's expenses, for the police investigation, was defeated—4 to 3.

The Board voted to pay policeman Barsantee his salary due, $50; vetoed by the Mayor.

A resolution offered by Alderman Hatch, requesting the Mayor to lay the evidence of the police investigation before the Attorney General, was indefinitely postponed—4 to 3.

The annual accounts were referred to Aldermen Mendum and Wendell to audit.

Voted, to pay the bill of Wm. H. Akerman, $45.75.

The committee on Fire department was authorized to have the basement of Franklin schoolhouse fitted for Engine Co. No. 6, to be located there.

Presentation.

Hon. Frank Jones was surprised Friday evening, by the appearance of a party of gentlemen, numbering about twenty-five, at the Rockingham House, from Boston, Providence, Marblehead, Concord and Newburyport, who under landlord Peirce's best endeavors passed an evening at the festive board, enjoyable in the extreme. The affair was kept a close secret from Mr. Jones, who, unaware of the coming of his friends, was still mystified as to its cause, after their arrival. C. Frank King, Esq., (with C. H. Crosby & Co., lithographers, South Boston,) finally let the cat out of the bag in a few felicitous remarks, uncovering to the amazed proprietor of the Rockingham House an elegantly finished crayon portrait of himself. A more astounded man than Mr. Jones was at that time can hardly be imagined. Following the congratulations of the gentlemen present, Mr. King produced the following letter from Gen. Donohoe, who had been chosen to deliver the presentation speech.

BOSTON, Feb. 7.

Friend ——; I regret that I cannot be absent over night on account of Mrs. Donohoe's illness. I regret this very much, but you will readily see that under the circumstances it would be unjust and improper in me to go. If it was at any other time or under any other reason, I should go, "cho' the skies should fail."

The gentlemen who are going to make the present are sound, and are in a very delicate and delightful manner recognizing the honesty, generosity and fidelity of one of "Nature's noblemen," Hon. Frank Jones. Future generations will point to his name and portrait with as much pride as to any of Portsmouth's sons, and especially remember him as one who, Gabriel-like, sounded the trumpet of resurrection to Portsmouth and New Hampshire industry, which has been so long practically dead. His life will be a model for the poor boys of the future, and if they will follow in his footsteps, each succeeding generation will excel the others in honesty and benevolence. Nothing would give me so much pleasure as to be able to tell that which I feel and know in his presence, and in the company of his friends and acquaintances.

Your Friend, M. T. DONOHOE.

Mr. Jones, in response, made a felicitous speech which came from the heart, thanking his friends for their testimonial, saying that no present would have pleased him better than the portrait which they knew better than he to criticise.

The evening was spent in song and speeches and toasts.—a feast of reason and flow of soul that only ended in the wee sma' hours.

The crayon is a life-sized portrait by R. G. Rayner, drawn from a photograph of Mr. Jones, taken by Davis Brothers of this city. It is framed in black walnut and gilt, and now adorns the reading room of the Rockingham House. The artist evidently did his best, and his difficult task may be imagined when it is known that he was obliged to meet Mr. Jones casually and could not have the benefit of a sitting. His success was perfect in catching the expression of the face, and all engaged in the presentation praised the artist's work.

Delehanty & Hengler,

With the Spaulding bell ringers, will give one of their unique entertainments at the Temple, this evening. Misses Georgie Dean Spaulding, Grace Dunlap and Kittie Stanley, harpist, comedienne and vocalist, are especially popular with the public. Kelley and Burgess are favorites in Dutch and Irish characters, and Delehanty & Hengler are A I in their character dances, as all Portsmouth knows. Get your tickets at Preston's. The performance will commence at eight.

The Kittery Inquest.

The investigation into the cause of the death of Mr. Erastus D. Leach was continued on Friday.

Richard D. Philbrick testified that he left Kittery in a dory, accompanied by Montgomery Anderson and Erastus D. Leach, on the evening of Feb. 4, and took to Newcastle a minister who was to lecture there that evening. After landing the minister, the party pulled up to this city, Leach went to call upon his wife's sister, and witness and Anderson, after walking around for some time, went into Mahoney's saloon on Penhallow street and waited for Leach, who joined them not long afterward. He drank nothing himself in Mahoney's, saw neither of his companions drink anything, and did not notice that either was intoxicated when they left for their boat, between 9 and 10 o'clock.

Anderson sat in the bow, Philbrick in the stern, and Leach pulled the boat, in crossing the river. When about half way between Pumpkin and Badger's islands, the boat struck a cake of ice with her starboard bow, and Anderson was either thrown or startled into throwing himself upon the port side, listing the boat so much that Leach "caught a crab" with one oar,—the gunwale rolled under water, Anderson and Leach sprang to their feet, and the boat turned over, Philbrick coming up underneath her.

He got out from under the boat and sat astride the stern, Anderson having hold of the bow and Leach laying across the bottom with his legs in the water. All three were frightened, and Leach and Anderson shouted for help; Philbrick told them to keep quiet, hold on hard and they would all get on shore,—and after being in the water from an hour to an hour and a half, Philbrick paddling first with his hands and then with two caps, they got so near Badger's Island that Anderson felt bottom with his feet, and immediately let go the dory and went ashore.

As Anderson left the dory Leach either fell or jumped off the bottom, and immediately ceased struggling. Philbrick caught him by the collar and called for help; a man in a dory pulled by, but it was only after repeated calls that he backed his boat in to the drowning men's assistance, when Philbrick got on the bottom of the capsized boat and from thence into the other and was put on shore, still holding Leach by the collar. He dragged Leach about half his length out of water on to the mussel-bed, left him in charge of the unknown man, and went to seek help.

Montgomery Anderson testified that he drank gin two or three times in Mahoney's saloon, while the party was in there; Leach drank one glass of cider, Philbrick nothing. His testimony was corroborative of Philbrick's; he remembered walking out of the water, but nothing that occurred afterwards.

Mr. Peirce, a resident on Badger's Island, testified to Philbrick's coming to his house at about 1 o'clock, much exhausted, and reporting that "one man was drowned and more coming." He cared for Philbrick, then went to the beach and found Anderson, but was unable to rouse or carry him, then called a neighbor, Mr. Jackson, who helped get Anderson housed, and the two then searched for Leach but did not find him. They saw no trace of any boat but the sunken one, and no man but Anderson.

Hiram Amazeen testified to finding the body and raising it with a plaice spear, it getting away from him several times and sinking to the rocky bottom, on its face.

John S. Sides was on watch at the bell shed at the Navy Yard; heard a noise and tumult at about half-past 12 o'clock; heard swearing; could not distinguish voices; the noise seemed to be in the direction of Water Street; supposed it was from a fishing schooner, and did not report it.

Francis Cousens was on duty at the steamboat landing; just after midnight heard loud talk and swearing, which was repeated for fifteen minutes. Saw no craft in the river. About the same time heard a boat going in the direction of Navy Yard bridge; there was no unusual noise from the boat. Thought the uproar he heard was across the river, in Portsmouth.

Perry C. Moore was on duty on the Monongahela. Soon after 12 o'clock heard swearing and a warning to "keep back and let me alone." Heard no more. The noise seemed to be in the direction of Adams' wharf.

The jury, after deliberation, rendered the following verdict:—

That the said Erastus D. Leach came to his death between the hours of 10 o'clock on the night of Feb. 4th and 2 o'clock on the morning of Feb. 5th, A. D. 1873, from exposure in the water by the accidental upsetting of a boat in which were Richard D. Philbrick, Montgomery Anderson and the said Erastus D. Leach, and from the subsequent neglect of some person to the jurors unknown, in whose charge the said Leach was left by Mr. Richard D. Philbrick after having been drawn from the water; and that we, the jurors, deem such neglect highly culpable if not criminal in the individual aforesaid; and that we commend the heroism of Mr. Richard D. Philbrick in his efforts to save his companions.

Laconics.

A Kittery man, nearly ninety years old, can read without glasses, and skip the long words without crutches.

An item in the Journal of yesterday regarding a meeting of ladies with the committee of one hundred, to occur next Monday evening is erroneous. The meeting was appointed for Monday evening, Feb. 17th.

Paymaster W. W. Williams is detached from duty at this Station. Paymaster Rufus Parks is ordered to relieve him on the 1st of April.

Mr. Joseph M. Edmonds has been appointed Paymaster's yeoman on the U. S. S. Mayflower.

Schooner Edwin Reed, built in this city in 1867, and owned in Boston, lost both masts on the 2d by collision with an unknown vessel, about sixty miles from Smith's island. The Reed registers 346 tons.

The President's order deprives Kittery of its town clerk and all but one selectman.

Joseph Bent, of Cape Elizabeth, Me., was drowned near Boon Island on the 5th, while fishing.

Rev. Hugh Montgomery will lecture on temperance at the Temple on Sunday evening, beginning at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Dr. O. Fitzgerald will return to Portsmouth, Feb. 17th and 18th.

Remember Feb. 24th, 1873. Secure your shares in Wells' Grand Distribution before that date, at Lowd's picture store.

Morning Chronicle.

A CURIOUS SMALL POX ITEM.—It is stated that Evans, the Northwood murderer, has been removed from the Exeter jail to the Court House for the reason that a criminal who occupied the opposite cell to him has been stricken down with the small pox. We are informed by an Exeter gentleman who is visiting friends in this city that what appears singular in this case is the fact that the man who had this loathsome disease has been confined in the jail nine months, that no one has visited him and that he has been in a cell, until a few days prior to his sickness, remote from the other prisoners. There has been no case of the disease in town and consequently the query is "Where and how did he get it?" The only answer we can make is based upon the theory that it is an epidemic that travels in the air and that the physical condition of man is at times in a condition to become inoculated with contagious disease.—Nashua Telegraph.

—When Louis Napoleon had received refusals from four different courts in answer to offers for marriage, he broke a chair in a fit of passion and said: "Now, these gentlemen, my cousins, shall have an empress of my own making, and they shall honor her as if she were the daughter of an emperor!" The next day he proposed for Eugenie.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!
Relieve Your Lungs.
For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,
Pulmocine Cordial
is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all hundred PULMONARY DISEASES at this time prevalent, it is the ounce of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. The painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, the fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL
is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial
Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.
Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.
USE BUCHMAN'S
PULMOCINE CORDIAL.
The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

DIRECTIONS:—To every pound of Fruit add four quarts cold water, come to a boil slowly and stew it 10 to 30 minutes, add half the usual amount of Sugar used with fresh fruit.
To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.
We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an alkaline, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, scrubbing out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women: and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or texture or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER

SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and reserves its advantages over all others combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupulina, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain and agony which is produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the sorest instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains, or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind from time immemorial, for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

POOR PATTERSON!—The Mobiliter investigation has placed one of our Senators in a position as disgraceful to himself as it is humiliating to the Republican party of this State. There is no use in mincing matters. Oakes Ames has brought out Senator Patterson in a falsehood as squarely as a man could be brought out. Mr. Patterson was, without shadow of doubt, in sympathy with the sorghead movement last year, and only the certainty of Grant's re-election prevented him from joining its ranks. He also received and accepted aid from the Liberals to assist in his re-election to the Senate, Horace Greeley himself giving $250 for that purpose, he all the while denouncing them and their political course in most unmeasured terms. Only the fear of being called a "sorehead" led him to take any part in the Presidential canvass, for the results of which he cared but little, as is proved by his apologizing to a prominent Liberal Republican for making his Grant speech here last October, the very day after it was delivered. This is a sorry showing for one who has stood so high in general estimation as has Mr. Patterson. No man from this State rose so rapidly after first entering public life as he, and he soon came to be regarded as the most brilliant and promising of all the sons of the Granite State. But his downfall, to all but the well informed Republicans of New Hampshire, has been as sudden and complete as his elevation was rapid. If in fame and honor he went up like a rocket he has certainly come down like a stick, and the Republican party will not care where it strikes after the 4th of next month.—Coos Republican.

BOSTON'S BUMMERS.—What is the matter? What do you drink? These questions were put to 1,226 individuals last year by the Boston police; and Chief Savage gives a summary of their answers in his annual report. They are perhaps the funniest part of that interesting document. To the first question the answers were as follows: Drunk, 904; tight, 116; intoxicated, 3; fell, 3; took too much, 6; got corned, 5; got hot, 1; being sober, 1; wouldn't go home, 2; slept out, 2; breaking glass, 1; slipped down, 1; short answers, 1; horse disease, 1; grouty, 1; abusing family, 1; fighting, 4; quarrelling, 2; scolding, 3; trouble with old woman, 7; trouble with old man, 6; shouting for Greeley, 1; hooting for Grant, 1; lodging, 18; nothing, 21; don't know, 50; don't care, 3; can't tell, 8; won't tell, 6; find out, 6.

To the question, "What do you drink?" the answers were as follows: Whiskey, 440; beer, 316; castor oil, 1; ether, 1; whiskey and beer, 93; gin and beer, 11; rum, 45; gin, 36; brandy, 11; wine, 10; cider, 9; Bourbon, 1; rot-gut, 3; ale and spruce beer, 5; ginger pop, 1; sarsaparilla, 2; Wheeler's bitters, 1; peppermint, 2; champagne, 3; benzine, 1; half-and-half, 3; indigo, 1; Hyacinthe, 1; make berry coffee, 1; fire water, 2; pig weed, 1; cut nails, 1; everything, 91; anything, 5; nothing, 22; can't tell, 8; won't tell, 6; don't know, 42; don't care, 3; find out, 5; don't drink, 2; none of your business, 3; go to the ——."—Boston News.

A RAM ON THE RAMPAGE.—The Danbury News says: A retired clergyman sends us an account of a little affair that happened in his place. It appears that there was a young woman, a fine spirited girl, engaged at a wash-tub, opposite an open door. Just behind her was a young man, as is generally the case, and in the yard was an old buck that was allowed the freedom of the premises, which is not always the case, we are glad to say. Well, this buck came up to the door and looked in, and the young man going close behind the young woman, pointed his finger straight at the buck, and the old fellow recognizing at once the pressing character of this mute invitation, put down his head and dashed forward, and the miserable man stepped to one side and fled, and the young woman, all unconscious of the arrangements, received the awful shock without warning, and passed over the tub, and the air for an instant appeared to be full of slippers, and wet cloths, and soap, and hot water and suds. And the next minute that goat came flying out of that door at a dreadful speed, bald the whole length of his spine, and with a wild look in his eye. And for an hour afterward he stood back of the barn, scratching his chin, and trying to recall all the circumstances in the unfortunate affair.

A PRECIOUS BOY.—A family named Peter, hailing from Vermont and on their way to Grand Rapids, were seated in the Detroit and Milwaukee depot yesterday, when one of their boys, a tow-headed lad about eleven years old, slipped out of the room, wandered up the street, and finally lost himself. The mother groaned and wept, the father turned pale, and there was some lively getting around until the boy was found. Part of the anxiety arose from parental love, but there was another reason. The boy had on boots a size too large, and under his stockings was the sum of $240, which he was carrying for the family.—Detroit Free Press.

The Northfleet Disaster.

The details of the terrible disaster to the ship Northfleet are published in the London papers, from which it appears that at half-past ten at night the captain and officers were alarmed by a cry from the officer of the watch: "A steamer in right into us." The captain and pilot rushed on deck, but before they got there the steamer had run into the vessel, striking her amidships and cutting her below the water-mark. The carpenter reported her nearly half-full of water. The pumps were started promptly and the crew worked hard at them for some minutes, but when it was found the water was rapidly gaining, a panic seemed to seize both the crew and passengers, and the officers could not keep the latter in check. A crowd of men and women had rushed up from their berths, many only half clothed. The passengers had mostly retired, but a few were undressing.

The noise of the collision is likened by one of them to a peal of thunder, and such was the violence of the shock that those standing were knocked down. It appears that the steamer rebounded and came a second time in collision with the Northfleet. Water began to pour in and in a very short time the passengers' quarters were swamped. The women were slower to rush on deck than the men, and many were not in condition to go until the water rose threateningly around them. No one on board the steamer was heard to speak, although the loud and eager shouts from the Northfleet must have made her crew aware of the terrible danger that existed. She backed for two or three minutes, and then steaming rapidly away, was soon out of sight.

For half an hour the scene on the decks of the Northfleet was appalling. Women shrieked, men cursed, swore and fought their way toward the boats, whilst the captain and first mate roared out commands to the men to keep back and allow the women to get to the side of the vessel, but apparently without success. Rockets were fired and blue lights burned. A gun was loaded, but through an accident the piece could not be discharged. Signals of distress were seen by several vessels but appear to have been regarded as signals for a pilot. Meanwhile the scene on deck baffles description. The captain, finding the man determined to leave the vessel, went below and armed himself with a revolver, and ascending to the poop deck declared his determination to shoot the first man who tried to leave the vessel before the women were saved. The first boat launched was lowered by a number of the passengers by cutting the ropes. There being no ladder at hand the only way of getting into it was by leaping or dropping some twelve or fifteen feet. As there was a terrible rush toward the boat the scene was one of a distressing confusion, and a man and a boy fell into the water and were drowned. The officers did all they could to force the men who first got into the boat to leave it that the women might be saved, but to no purpose, even firing with blank cartridges. About 30 persons having got into it, the boat pot off. Not one of the crew were in it. Another life-boat was launched, a man got into it and as was ordered to leave; he refused and the captain shot him in the calf. Captain Knowles placed his wife in the boat and said to the boatswain, who had already got in, "Here's a charge for you, Sam—take care of her and the rest, and God bless you." Wringing his wife's hand, he bade her, "Good-bye," saying, "I shall never see you again."

It is impossible to describe the panic that raged all this time. Heartrending scenes were witnessed on all sides. One of the passengers seeing the Captain's wife in the boat, threw his own wife in, tossed her baby to her and entered the boat himself. A little girl was thrown into the boat by her father, who tried to save the rest of his family, but the maddened crowd pressing toward the side of the vessel prevented the rescue of his wife and two other children, and they went down with the ill-fated vessel. The engineer made frantic efforts to save his wife and children. He was jammed between the cook-house and the gunwale and received dreadful injuries, and though afterwards rescued, is in a precarious state. Only two of the seven boats aboard were launched, owing, no doubt, to the panic, and one was seriously injured, as the tackles were cut and the boat fell into the sea. When the second boat had got off it seemed to become a question of moments. The quarterdeck was still crowded by men, women and children, crying, swearing and praying. The captain and pilot were together, and the latter was heard saying: "If you want to save yourselves, make for the topmast," to which many poor people rushed. In quarter of an hour a tug picked up the second boat with thirty occupants, and then steamed around the spot. About three-quarters of an hour after being struck the Northfleet went down head first, with awful suddenness, with 327 souls on board. At that moment the first boat was 100 yards and the second boat only 20 or 30 yards from the vessel. The crew of the first boat, after landing the women, rowed around the scene of the wreck and saved five men trying to swim to the shore. A lugger took off the occupants of the second boat, 34 passengers, and a pilot cutter rescued the pilot and 10 men, who having gone down with the vessel, rose to the surface and clung to the main-topmast rigging. The vessel lies in eleven fathoms of water. The survivors say that the captain displayed the greatest heroism. He retained his presence of mind from the first to the last, strove hard to put an end to the panic, and did his duty bravely to the end. He was at the last moment going across the deck in the hope of enabling some of the crowd crushing around the boats on that side to get away from the ship. The survivors say that other boats got adrift when the ship sank, and expressed the belief that if the passengers had allowed them to be lowered they probably could have saved at least 100 more lives. Unfortunately the women could not climb the masts although they did all in their power to help them. Consequently all the women and children, with the exception of the captain's wife and another and two children, were drowned.

An elongated existence has just closed at Crown Point. Obadiah Baldwin, aged 101, died there last week. Shute's Defalcation.

C. V. Dearborn, Esq., of Nashua, Bank Examiner, has completed his examination of the condition of the National Bank, and finds that the bank is a loser by the defalcation of N. Appleton Shute, to the amount of from ninety to one hundred dollars, and that the assets of the bank are more than sufficient to pay all its liabilities. A meeting of the stockholders will be called to take measures to repair the loss and continue the bank.

The amount embezzled from the Exeter Savings Bank's funds, of which institution Shute was Treasurer, added to the above makes the total amount stolen from two hundred and ten to two hundred twenty thousand dollars. No clue as yet has been obtained to the whereabouts of the detaulter.

OAKES AMES—Mrs. Mary Clemmer Ames, in the Independent, writes:—

What manner of man, in truth, is Oakes Ames? He is the son of a father and one of a family of brothers famous chiefly for financial success. I doubt if his mind could conceive of a success wholly unconnected with money and profit. Yet all his life it has been money and profit as the result of labor, trade and just investments—not money as the sequence of wild speculations—which he has sought. If Oakes Ames has been reputed as a financier, and a millionaire by right of that financiering, he has been regarded no less a man of probity and honor. Not an ideal statesman, surely like Winter Davis or Chas. Sumner, pursuing lofty, impersonal standards of government, without reference to fact or favor; but a wise, practical legislator, bringing his great financial experience to bear upon legislative business, a man who would never subsidize the interests of just government to any personal consideration whatever. Such was Oakes Ames in the estimation of his colleagues, and in the opinion of all who knew him well. Such is Oakes Ames to-day in the prevailing attributes of his character. To evolve principles and laws from his inner consciousness is not in the power of Oakes Ames. To project and carry on great monetary enterprises is his natural impulse and most successful effort.

MARINE DISASTER.—The Italian barque Emele Costalla Maria, Captain San Antonio Cocorole, loaded with an assorted cargo of foreign merchandise and bound to New York, sprung a leak Wednesday night and about five hours afterwards sank. One of the crew, Francois Rosette, reports that no uneasiness was felt by the captain in regard to the vessel's safety, at least until she reached port. Upon this assurance he with the rest of the crew went below to their berths and turned in. About five hours afterward the man at the wheel discovered that she was sinking rapidly, and he gave warning to those on deck two in number, to take to the boat for safety. In their hurry to save their own lives they neglected to call the captain and crew, who were below asleep, and they had scarcely left the sinking vessel when she went down, carrying with her all on board, unconscious of their fate.

FACTS AND FIGURES.—I see by my poultry book that I had sixty hens in 1838, and sold that year 5,501 eggs. In 1842, I had ninety-two hens and sold 8,756, set and used 600 eggs. In 1853 February 12, I counted the fowls, and found three hundred and eighty hens and thirteen cocks. Sold 29,383 eggs. Profit on eggs that year, $136.45, besides the manure, which I value at ten cents per hen, and the eggs and fowls consumed in the family. Most of the eggs were sold in New York for eighteen cents per dozen. The price of grain that year, was, oats, fifty cents; corn, eighty cents; buckwheat, fifty-six cents. They laid 100 eggs each that year.—Samuel Seely, in Poultry World.

A NEW INVENTION.—A Winona (Minnesota) man has invented a machine for propelling canal boats on the principle of a duck's foot, closing up when it is drawn back and opening when it acts against the water. The Winona Republican says "The invention is a success on a small craft, and works with great ease and smoothness, causing hardly a ripple on the water."

THE KANSAS SENATORSHIP.—The meagre telegraphic accounts of the scene in the Kansas Legislature when Senator York exposed Pomeroy's attempt to bribe him, did not do justice to what must have been one of the most dramatic situations ever witnessed in a legislative hall. The scene has material enough for a half dozen plays of the modern school, and the gentlemen who serve up these highly seasoned mental dishes will doubtless make the most of it. We shall not enter into all details of the scene, which is certainly not a pleasant one, but content ourselves with the climax. While the ballot for Senator was pending, York claimed the floor on a question of privilege, and after depositing a roll of greenbacks walked back to his seat and said: "I have an explanation to make to this body upon my vote for Senator. I shall vote for Samuel C. Pomeroy for the best reason in the world, and that reason is now on the desk of your presiding officer." Amidst the most intense excitement, and apparently inspired by the occasion, York went on. We here quote from the St. Louis Republican's report;

"I know I am a disgraced man; I have willfully and of my malice aforethought betrayed a trust reposed in me by a fellow-man. I did it with eyes wide open, and a mind full of comprehension of the consequences; but I did it because I thought it was a sacrifice required of me to save my State from sinking still deeper into the quicksands of corruption in which her once fair fame is already almost swallowed up. I stand before you pledged to vote for Samuel C. Pomeroy in consideration of $7,000 to me in hand paid, current funds, and a promise of $10,000 payable upon a contingency. I ask you, must I redeem that pledge?" [Cries of "No," "No," "D—n Pomeroy and his money."] "I ask you if I am in your minds a disgraced man?" [Cries of "No," "No," "You did right."] "I ask you if the end does not justify the means?" [Cries of "Yes," "Yes," and loud cheers.] Then Mr. York closed his speech with an impassioned peroration that raised the wildest tumult in the hall and in the galleries, and sat down.

York's statement is apparently honest, but it is charged that he is not, and that Ingalls, who was successful after this scene, has been guilty of acts that will bar his admission to the Senate.

CORNS—Since pride and fashion have had control of mankind, and shoemakers were compelled to make boots and shoes to fit fancy instead of the feet, the suffering from Corns, Bunions, Ingrowing Nails, Sore Insteps, Blistered Heels, Callosities on the bottom of the feet, &c., cannot be described. But Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies will cure all such torments, and proper fitting boots will prevent their reproduction. Sold by all druggists. a12

INSTANTANEOUS is the operation of BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL in all cases of SORE THROAT, HOARSENESS, COUGHS, CROUP, and LUNG AFFECTIONS. It is beneficial in all cases. Sold for 50 cents per bottle.

PILES.—The unceasing torture from internal bleeding, external and itching piles is fast wearing away the thousands of those who are afflicted and their hope and courage have long since given place to despair. Let those who see this cheer up, for a mild and sure cure may be had by using BRIGGS' PILE REMEDIES.

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUCCESS.—Fallacies and frauds are short lived. They may flourish for a little while, but the sober second thought of the people condemns them and they perish. It would take even the "Lightning Calculator" a long time to count the imitations and counterfeits of the supreme tonic of the age, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that have been brought out since the first introduction of that celebrated remedy. They have collapsed one after another, but the great vegetable preventive and curative is still on its disease-conquering march. At this season, as the air becomes more and more chilly, and searching vapors, affect the integuments and create unwonted pains in the stomach and bowels, it is of the utmost importance to tone and regulate the system so as to enable it to bear up against the uncongenial temperature which produces these disturbances. Fever and ague, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous prostration, costiveness and chronic indigestion are a few among the many disorders which yield readily to this famous restorative.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Municipal Reform.

Messrs. Editors:—However little effect what I have written under the above heading may have towards correcting the glaring faults in the management of our city affairs, it has been a great satisfaction to me to write it; and now, as a parting salute, I will say a word to the Common Council.

The Council has opposed many of the schemes of the Board of Aldermen; yet, notwithstanding this opposition, every one of these schemes has been carried out, and for this the Council is in a large degree to be blamed. No fault can be found with the Council for having no voice in regulating and directing the ordinary expenditures in the various municipal departments; at least I find no fault with the Council for that reason, as the charter and ordinances give it no right to have anything to say on that subject, or if it has such a right, it has not yet been found out. The Council cannot be blamed because the other Board ignores it and pays no attention to its resolves and votes, when it has no power to compel attention; but the Council is to be blamed for giving to the Aldermen, each year, the power to destroy the last vestige of what trifling influence the Council could exert at the best.

Yearly, in the appropriation bill, is inserted a clause appropriating the railroad and savings bank taxes to the contingent fund; and after that clause is passed the Council might as well resign en masse, for all it can do to prevent the carrying out of any Aldermanic scheme. These taxes amount to something like $20,000; and instead of being used to meet extraordinary expenses in the several departments, and legitimate demands which were not foreseen at the time the appropriation bill was passed, it is used as a weapon with which to defeat the Common Council.

When the Council voted to lay a large water pipe from the Millpond to Hanover Street, and a sum of money was regularly appropriated for that purpose, the Aldermen voted to build a reservoir instead, and "contingent" built it; when the Council voted not to alter and embellish the City Building, and refused to appropriate money for that purpose, the Aldermen voted to "repair" the old ark and "contingent" went right to work on it. But for the very large sum of money voted as contingent, neither of these schemes could have been carried out.

As I do not flatter myself that my writings will lead to any change in the city charter, I will venture to offer a bit of advice to the members of the next Common Council,—and that is, if they desire to have anything to say in city affairs, to appropriate a fixed sum, certainly not more than $5,000, as "contingent," and apply the railroad and savings bank taxes to some other purpose than to enable the upper Board entirely to ignore the lower.

MUSICBYTHEBAND.

County Expenses.

Crime is terribly expensive. The trial of Evans for murder, cost the County of Rockingham about three thousand dollars; and his imprisonment and execution will cost well toward another thousand. Small pox is also costly,—the bills in a single case at South Newmarket, recently, for instance, amounting to more than one thousand dollars, as paid by the town and presented to the county—of which, however, the Commissioners allowed only about $600. The doctor's bill alone in this case, amounted to five hundred and ten dollars! There are other discreditable circumstances reported in connection with this South Newmarket case, too. Portsmouth manages its cases better—in fact if all the towns did as poorly as South Newmarket the County would soon be bankrupt.

Laconics.

Schooner Edwin I. Morrison will be launched from the yard of Wm. F. Fernald this forenoon between the hours of eleven and twelve. She is to be towed to Boston to be rigged. This schooner is one of the handsomest vessels ever seen on the Piscataqua.

A movement is on foot to get up a concert by the famous Temple Quartette, of Boston, in the Temple in this city. Not many more subscriptions are needed to assure the success of the affair, and lovers of the perfection of vocal harmony can find the subscription list at Preston's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stearns of this city are to sail for Europe in steamer Java on the 19th.

The committee on programme for the Fourth of July celebration will meet his evening at the City Rooms at 7 1-2 o'clock. Messrs. Wm. R. Preston and James R. May have been added to the committee. Mr. Preston has also been added to the invitation committee.

From the Portsmouth Journal.

—At a special meeting of the members of the Mercantile Library Association held on Friday evening last, to consult relative to a long mooted project of uniting the fine library belonging to this association with the library connected with the Young People's Union, both institutions to have the free use of the same, the same to be finally merged into the free public library, provided that ever becomes a reality, met with an animated discussion, pro and con, though the sentiment of the meeting was evidently in favor of the move. A committee was appointed to report at an early day. It seems a pity that while so few people have enjoyed for so many years the privileges of the large and fine library of the P. M. L. A., some movement cannot now be made whereby a wider field of operation may be open to it; hence the movement to unite the same with the flourishing Young People's Union, seems a good one, and which would prove highly beneficial in the end to all concerned.

—A letter passed through the post office last week directed to "Kittra 4 Side."

—The patent bronze lock boxes are to be put up in this post office in the course of a month probably. They are models of ingenuity, safety and convenience, and have eyes on both no two can well be alike.

—During the remaining winter months, Venus will reign supreme in the west for three hours after sunset, and Jupiter in the east from early evening. These are now the only two planets visible in the evening.

—Friday next is St. Valentine's Day, and the store windows are exhibiting their gaudy wares in profusion. The pretty custom of sending bouquets and boxes of bonbons, instead of the paper nonsense, finds increased favor every year.

—The Grand Lodge of New Hampshire Knights of Pythias will hold their Annual Session with the Lodge in Portsmouth, commencing Thursday, Feb. 13.

—The trial of Dr. Andrew J. Lynn, formerly of this city, and a woman accomplice, on a charge of malpractice, has been abandoned by the Government, owing to the continued absence of an important witness.

—Efforts for a fine concert by the famous Temple Quartette are being made here, and a paper for the names of those who desire to secure tickets, at 50 and 35 cents each, can be found at Preston's and Butler & Lighton's.

—Nearly all dairymen now unite in the opinion that milk is injured for any purpose by being cooled too suddenly, as by the use of ice or the employment of patent appliances. They also agree that warm milk should not be mixed with that which is cold, as is frequently done by pouring milk into a can that already contains milk cooled by the use of ice.

"Fighting Fire."

Mr. James B. Eaton is agent for this city and Kittery for the sale of "Fighting Fire," a book containing the history of the world's great conflagrations, including those of Chicago, Boston, Portland, New York, London, Moscow, Constantinople and other places. "Fighting Fire" is intensely interesting and at the same time truthful, exhaustive, and in every way the best description of those terrible disasters yet published or written. No expense or pains have been spared in the gathering of materials, no stone left unturned for fresh information which would lend interest or value to the work; and as the vivid accounts of the Chicago and Boston fires were written by eye-witnesses—the publishers are confident this volume will be handed down as the only standard and authentic account of the most stupendous and awful fires the world hits ever seen. It tells the origin and progress of each conflagration with minuteness, from beginning to end, and of the hundreds of thrilling incidents attending the march of the Fire-King. The volume is profusely illustrated, and is sold for $3.

Dollar's Magazine for February is well stocked with pleasant and readable stories, sketches, sea-yarns and poetry, as usual; $1.50 per year, with a chromo thrown in; Thomas S. Talbot, 38 Bromfield Street Boston.

Snell's Dollar Magazine, for January, is No. 7 of the second volume, though we have not seen the publication before. It contains about fifty pages of reading matter, handsomely printed on good paper, and if the number before us is a fair specimen it is a very good as well as very cheap magazine. Riley F. Smith, 31 Liberty Street, New York; $1 per year.

The American Journal of the Medical Sciences (quarterly), for January; edited by Isaac Hayes, M. D., and J. Minor Hayes, M. D., published by Henry C. Lea, Philadelphia; year.

Godey is again on our table. Like a dear old friend, whose visits are always attended with new and fresh pleasures, we greet Godey's Lady's Book each month. No magazine for the ladies possesses so many attractions and features specially adapted to the wants and requirements of the ladies. High toned and chaste in all its bearings, every household in the land should be fit up by the monthly visits of Godey.

HOME.—I never saw a garment too fine for a man or maid; there was never a chair too good for a cobbler, or a cooper, or a king to sit in; never a house too fine to shelter the human heart. These elements about us, the gorgeous sky, the imperials about us, the good for the human race. Elegance fits man. But do we not value these tools of house-keeping a little more than they are worth, and sometimes mortgage a home for the mahogany we would bring into it? I had rather eat my dinner off the head of a barrel, or dress after the fashion of John the Baptist in the wilderness, or sit on a block all my life, than consume all myself before I got to a home, and take so much pains with the outside that the inside was as hollow as an empty out. Beauty is a great thing, but beauty of garment, house and furniture is a very tawdry ornament compared with domestic love. All the elegance in the world will not make a home, and I would give more for a peaceful or real hearty love than for shiploads of furniture, and all the gorgeousness which all the upholsterers of the world could gather together.—Theodore Parker.

A CONVICT ARTIST.—The Boston Post, in the course of an interesting article on the Massachusetts State Prison, thus describes one of the prisoners;

In the same room is a man by the name of Darling, who is also serving out a life sentence for highway robbery. He has been here several years, and is yet a young man. He is a fine-looking convict and yet a young man, a genius, and notwithstanding the fact of his imprisonment, he asserts his determination that the world shall yet acknowledge his power. He is a remarkably good artist, and he showed, at the request of the officer, a piece of work on which he was engaged, and which he intended for a present to a lady at Cambridge, who has been very kind to him. It is an illustrated copy of Gray's Elegy, which he is making, printing and all, with pen and brush. The titlepage is exquisitely illustrated and all the illustrations are as carefully finished as steel engravings. The drawing is spirited and the whole conception good. He has seized the spirit of the poem with a correctness and fidelity that show an entire appreciation. He is justly very proud of his work, and his eyes those as praise followed examination of it.

"Has it taken you long?"

"Eight months to do what you see there; but I can only work at it about an hour and a half a day. If I could but give my whole time to it"—and he turned away to the drudgery of his every day toil. This man was made for better things, but he went wrong, and by his own action made his life a failure and to such rare promise brought such sad fulfillment.

If you have anything you would like to sell and can't, advertise it.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the inaccrying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the ounce of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public absolutely pure and unadulterated.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or feed, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantages over all others combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupuline, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, Much has been said and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the searching, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst case of inflamed Corns, inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the severest inept, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the sole or bottom of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.
For sale by J. H. THACHER, WM. R. PRESTON, Portsmouth; JAMES O. TREFETHEN, Kittery; E. S. SAFFORD, Kittery Point; H. M. CURTIS, Newcastle, and dealers generally.

The Chronicle

MAX ADELER'S FUN.—It is said that the Chinese declare that Noah's real name was Ah Boo, and that he resided in Pekin. Unfortunately, Noah's bible was lost in the flood, and we can not ascertain from it exactly what his name was. His door-plate, also, seems to be missing, and he had a very careless habit of neglecting to mark his shirts; so we are baffled in that direction. We have inquired at the libraries for a copy of the Pekin directory of that date, to see if Noah really figured in its pages; but the only copy any of them had was out. For our part, we do not believe his name was Ah Boo, or that he resided in Pekin. These Chinese claim everything that is going, from gunpowder up to newspaper. If we give them any ground on the Noah business, the first thing we know they will be out with the assertion that the ark was insured in the Pekin Mutual Company, and that Noah used to give the Pekin newspaper people free tickets to go in and watch the animals perform. The interests of Christianity require that we should believe the Bible.

Alaska has a public debt of one hundred and fifty dollars, and only seventy cents in the treasury. There are rumors that the treasurer has been lending the seventy cents around among the banks and pocketing interest on it; but this has not been traced to any reliable source. If he knows anything about financiering, he will certainly not keep such a balance on hand. The interests of the country demand that, when money is scarce, these vast sums should not be locked up in treasury vaults and kept out of circulation.

An exchange says that a clergyman in a neighboring village, recently, in discoursing to his hearers upon the subject of Jonah and the whale, portrayed in bold imagery the whole scene. He said: "I seem to see Jonah passing along the road to Ninevah; I seem to see him entering the ticket office, buy his ticket, and pay for it; I seem to see him walk upon the vessel; I seem to see them lift their anchor and the stately ship move grandly out upon the broad Atlantic."—Philadelphia Dispatch.

CURIOUS CHURCH INCIDENT.—A rather amusing contretemps occurred at one of our Evangelical churches last Sunday—amusing to the parties witnessing the affair, but decidedly uncomfortable, to say the least of it, to the party more immediately concerned. A contribution was being taken up for missionary purposes, and a well known citizen was carrying around the contribution box. In a pew at the back end of the church sat an old colored lady, while directly in front of her, in another pew sat a well-known banker of this city. The old lady leaned over the pew and whispered in audible tones to the banker, "Look here, Massa, there is Massa——coming round with the contribution box; now he owes me wash bill, which he disputes, and I can't o'lect it. Now I am going to tell him 'Massa, you put that 'ere wash bill, in the contribution box and we is square.' The banker approved of her doing so, and she religiously fulfilled her programme. It is easy to imagine the feeling of the gentleman when the proposal was made to him in an audible voice. It is needless to say that he did not linger at this pew. Moral—Don't employ a religious person of color to do your washing.—St. Paul Dispatch.

HOW YOU CAN EAT A RAILWAY LUNCH IN FRANCE.—A writer in the Observer, thus tells us a thing or two about getting a lunch:

Not long since travelling from Basel to Paris, we became hungry. As if divining our condition, the guard put his head in at the window of the train and politely asked, "Shall I order a dinner for you at the next station?" "But we do not stop long enough to eat it," was our reply. "True; it will be served in the train for three francs, and the dishes removed at the next stopping place." "By all means order it." The telegraph carried the order ten miles ahead in a moment; and when the train drew up at the next station, the door was opened, and a circular basket three feet high and one foot in diameter, was put in our compartment. Upon the top were knife and fork, upon a napkin; a bottle of water, and a flask of wine, and a glass; a little salt and pepper and a large roll. Opening a door in the side of the basket, we saw four shelves, on each shelf a dish. The first was a hot soup, the second a slice of a la mode beef, the third vegetables, and the fourth half a chicken and salad. A bunch of delicious grapes was also found on one of the shelves.

We ate our dinner quietly and comfortably, while the train rushed along at thirty miles an hour, and then restored the dishes to their places. When the next stoppage was made, a porter removed the basket and received the pay.

The Villain Evans.

An Augusta dispatch to the Boston Herald says:—

Evans' confession has created great excitement in this region. The Libby girl, whose murder his confession alleges to, was murdered twelve years ago in a most cruel manner. She was only nine years old, and lived in Strong. She was missed for several days before the remains were discovered. They were found buried in the woods near the village of Strong in this State. It appeared that her person had been shockingly violated and her throat cut by a knife in some two or twelve places. Lawrence Doyle was arrested on suspicion of having done the deed, and was sentenced to death, which was changed to imprisonment for life. His counsel believed Doyle innocent and the latter declared the same to the last moment of his life. He died in prison three years ago. One of the leading theories of the defence was that the murder must have been committed by a left handed man, and it is said that Evans is left handed. The confession of Evans as to the murder of a girl in Augusta in 1862, for which another man died in prison can apply only to this case. Further developments as regards the confession will be made soon.

THE ALLEY TRIAL.—The sixth day at Boston was especially interesting from the entire disagreement between the chemical experts of the prosecution and the defence. Dr. Jackson and others testified that it was impossible to distinguish between the blood, once dried, of a man and of a horse, and further that blood would dry in thirty-six hours so that there was no way of deciding how long it had been shed. A veterinary surgeon testified to bleeding one of Alley's horses in the latter part of September, when the animal bled profusely and kicked the blood all over the stable and over Alley's clothes. Testimony was also introduced to prove that Alley carried a stove to Metropolitan place on Tuesday night, that he was seen in Risteen's store near Dover street at about eight o'clock in the evening, and that he was down on Charlestown street at about nine o'clock on Wednesday morning for a load of ashes. Evidence was also put in of his collecting a bill on Wednesday about noon. Demonstrations by the spectators of applause at evidence favorable to the prisoner were promptly suppressed.

JOHN C. FREMONT A SWINDLER.—The astounding fact has just come to light that another man, once honored and trusted, has yielded to temptation and added one more name to the already long list of fallen great men. It is no less a man than John C. Fremont, who was in 1856 the Republican candidate for President, and a Major-General in the late war. It has transpired that he went over to Paris and negotiated a loan for the Southern Pacific Railroad before the present corporation was formed, which was nothing less than a swindle, and now he has been arraigned for trial in Paris, and as he does not dare to go there his wife has gone over to try and fix the matter up. The news of his downfall is received with sadness by all who know the once honored and respected "Pathfinder."

THE SECRETARYSHIP OF THE TREASURY.—With the exception of the Secretary of the Treasury, there is no probability of immediate change in the Cabinet, and this will depend on the election of Boutwell to the Senate. In such an event there seems little, if any, doubt that Judge Richardson will be Boutwell's successor, and the successor to Mr. Richardson has already been indicated. The President recently said, in replying to a question concerning the reported Cabinet changes, as to other gentlemen, that he selected the members of it himself, and did not leave that duty to be performed by the newspapers.

A LONG TRAIN.—The Harrisburg (Pa.) State Journal says that a freight train, consisting of four locomotives and 128 8-wheel cars left that place on the morning of December 15, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and reached Altoona the same afternoon. The train was considerably over a half a mile long.

POLYGAMY DOOMED.—There are indications that the Administration is inclined to take the buttons off its foils in dealing with Utah and the Mormons. Preliminary to more energetic treatment of the surviving relic of barbarism, a bill has been proposed by General Logan giving the United States courts wider jurisdiction in the matter of plural wives, and the power to choose their own juries. Armed with these very simple weapons, it seems that the fight of the Government with Brigham Young would be certain in its issue and not over-tedious.—New York Times.

Readables.

Here is a paragraph which we take bodily from a western paper, frankly confessing our inability to improve it: A sanguine Atchisonian had faith in his ability to make himself the receptacle of four pints of raw whiskey within 15 minutes. He wagered $25 to that effect with a skeptic of the neighborhood, and made a suburban bar-room the scene of the performance. Upon his neat and ornamented tombstone, now in process of erection, will be inscribed the simple epitaph, "He smiled and died."—Tribune.

If any farmer should chance to have a cow fall into an ice hole in the river, he may learn how to get her out from this story of the way it was done at Bethel, Vt., one day last week. A man caught the unfortunate animal by the horns and held her head above the water, while a rope could be procured; then another man put the rope around her neck with a slip knot and tightened it around her throat, causing her to suddenly bloat with air, and rise to the top of the water, when with her struggling and a little assistance she came out on the ice safely.

Mr. Boutwell has revoked the order calling $100,000,000 five-twenties to be paid May 7. The reason assigned is information from London that the subscriptions there are not payable till June 1. The call will be made in March.

Mrs. Clarke, a passenger on the steamship Cuba, sold her little son, five years of age, for eight bottles of porter. The little fellow started with his buyers, Mr. and Mrs. Fanner, for Ohio.

Mrs. Mary J. Melcher has sued the city of Boston for $500 damages for being carried to a small pox hospital when she did not have the disease.

An editor asked his subscribers to pay him that he may play the same joke on his creditors.

Deaths in Boston for the week, 157—males, 76; females, 81; of small-pox, 24, the latter figures showing a decrease of over forty per cent. from those of the previous week.

After eighteen years' service in the U. S. Senate, Hon. Henry Wilson has tendered his resignation, to take effect March 3d.

THAT OLEOGRAPH.—A funny story is going the rounds respecting the retirement of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher from the editorship of the Christian Union. Recently the publishers of that paper presented to each of their subscribers a small chromo representing a baby girl in a low-necked frock holding a cat under one arm and a dog under the other. It was a charming bit of genre work, the treatment of the subject being strikingly true to nature; but the artist's idea of the effort required in the child to hold up the animals, each fully half the size of herself, did not comport with the prudish notions of some of the Christian Union's antiquated supporters. They were grievously shocked—poor, sensitive souls—at the quantity of infantile leg displayed by the natural drawing up of the child's garments and every postman took back numbers of rejected chromos, many of them accompanied by indignant letters. Two or three even announced their intention of bringing charges against Mr. Beecher of sending obscene publications through the mails. In view of recent proceedings not wholly unconnected with Woodhull, Claflin & Co., the possibility of such a thing, ridiculous though it might be, could not fail to have grave terrors for the worthy pastor of Plymouth Church, and he hastened to resign rather than permit an exposure. Mr. Oliver Johnson has left the Tribune to take his place, but it is still uncertain whether even this will appease the wrath of the outraged subscribers. Further developments are therefore anxiously awaited.

A LAMENTATION FOR JIM NYE.—We shall miss Nye. We could have better spared a better man. It seems a pity he should have to go, and that he should give place in going to Jones, whoever he may be. Jones as we read in the press, is a person who in his cups proclaims that he has "bought up the whole Legislature." An offensive creature of Nevada who talks in this reprehensible manner under the influence of the flowing bowl is not a statesman who can make Nye's place good anywhere. But his remark discloses character. It is base, sordid, unstatesmanlike. Nye, to be sure, made a similar suggestion some dozen years ago, when Connecticut was having a close election — to the effect that we (meaning the republican party) would "buy up the State." But Nye was speaking in a political and patriotic, not a personal sense. His proposition was to buy up the State for a great party. Jones bought up a Legislature for his own individual use, and behoof. Without knowing Jones, we venture to say on the strength of this remark of his that he is an unpleasant person, to behold whom in the seat of the lamented Nye will be to be bereaved Senate a constant irritation and pain.

Nye was a bold mountaineer. Not one of the millions of American citizens who have been subjected to his dizzy eloquence can ever forget his glowing and beautiful description of his "mountain home beyond the setting sun." On all their minds and memories he is painted by his own master hand in colors from his own unequaled palette, a rapt and rotund seraph spanning the Sierras against the background of the Western sky. For a man who had spent so little time in a State, and that mostly in a transient way at a hotel, and the State one that hasn't a green spot the size of a Mexican dollar in its whole extent—the love of Nye for his mountain home was something beyond human comprehension.

SNOWBALLING IN CHURCH.—The Hartford Times says:

A funny scene took place last evening in St. John's Church, East Hartford, during the service. The choir had just finished chanting the psalter for the day, when a large corona of evergreens, holding a couple of dozen candles, was found to be on fire. It was suspended by wires directly over the chancel, and held by large wreaths of evergreens, reaching the ceiling and sides of the sacristy. It was impossible at the moment to pull these down, and they were soon on fire, the flames spreading rapidly along the heavy ropes of dry evergreens. Rev. Mr. Hobbie, the rector, threw off his surplice, and so also did the choristers, who, with the males in the audience, rushed out of doors for snow, as no water was available. Then commenced a funny scene, all of these men throwing snowballs at the burning wreaths. They thus succeeded in putting out the fire, which, but for their prompt efforts, might have proved serious. After the excitement had been quieted the services were resumed.

THE DEATH PENALTY.—If it can be proved that the greater certainty of a milder punishment than death for murder diminishes the number of murders, it would seem to be wisdom to abolish that relic of barbarism altogether; the more especially since in this age it is so difficult to convict the most atrocious murderer if he be wealthy, and so comparatively easy to procure the conviction of one destitute of money and of friends. That the spirit of the age is against the death penalty no one can doubt; not that it is often a bar to conviction for murder.—Sacramento Union.

THE TRUE BASIS OF SUCCESS.—Fallacies and frauds are short lived. They may flourish for a little while, but the sober second thought of the people condemns them and they perish. It would take even the "Lightning Calculator" a long time to count the imitations and counterfeits of the supreme tonic of the age, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that have been brought out since the first introduction of that celebrated remedy. They have collapsed one after another, but the great vegetable preventive and curative is still on its disease-conquering march. At this season, as the air becomes more and more chilly, and searching vapors, affect the integuments and create unwonted pains in the stomach and bowels, it is of the utmost importance to tone and regulate the system so as to enable it to bear up against the uncongenial temperature which produces these disturbances. Fever and ague, rheumatism, biliousness, nervous prostration, costiveness and chronic indigestion are a few among the many disorders which yield readily to this famous restorative.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Fun.

We believe Delehanty and Hengler never visited Portsmouth and had a poor house, and we also believe that Delehanty, Hengler and Spaulding never offered a more acceptable entertainment to Portsmouth people than that enjoyed by the large audience on Saturday evening. A Portsmouth audience appreciates fun as readily and as fully as any audience in the country and the most successful managers here are those who give the best and the most. The opening farce was irresistibly funny with Kelly and Holbrook in prominent characters. Georgie Dean Spaulding's harp solo, introducing "Fisher's Hornpipe," with the right hand, and "Yankee Doodle," with the left, while she sang "Tramp," was especially charming. Then came Kelly with his magical violin and barn-yard imitations, and Delehanty and Heugler in their new songs and dances and double bone solo. The public never get surfeited with the performances of these easy and graceful dancers. Miss Stanley's songs were well appreciated and Collins' German band and wooden sabot dances set the house in a roar again.

Then came the Spaulding bell ringers with music exquisite and touching, evolving a harmony of sweet sounds from their "beautiful bells." The cat duett over, once more the favorites, Delehanty and Hengler, appeared, this time in "Dancing in the Moonlight," and droll imitations. The staff bell solo by Miss Spaulding was enthusiastically encored and she responded with "Les Fleurs de Printemps."

"Leo and Lotus," the closing farce, was written by Neil Burgess and gave that gentleman opportunity to show his wonderful impersonation of a feminine (tho' decidedly masculine) part. His make-up as Mrs. Barnabay Bibbs was perfect and the character was well sustained. It was the "hit" of the season. Kittie Stanley, Collins, Kelly, Hengler and Delehanty were the "supporting" characters, and the "domestic bliss" they enjoyed carried the audience by storm, each putting in his and her specialty with an irrepressible earnestness. We've no more to say now about the company, except to remind the managers that they cannot return and play to empty benches while the memory of Saturday evening's performance is fresh in the minds of that audience.

The Portsmouth Music Society

With Harlow's Orchestra, will give their concert, so long in preparation, some time during the present month. It is probable that Miss Edith Abell, of Boston, the popular young soprano, who has been concertizing with the Mendelssohn Quintet Club, and was formerly with the Parepa troupe,—will appear on the occasion.

A Good Day's Work.

Messrs. Morse & Ilsley on one day last week took $25,000 worth of new accident and life insurance. Good for them and safe for the assured. Since the first of December they have taken over $160,000 in new fire risks. This shows the confidence of the community in the firm of Morse & Ilsley.—Success to them.

Lacontes.

A young lady informs us that on Sunday evening at 6 o'clock she looked at the thermometer, and found the mercury then indicating a temperature of twenty degrees above zero; at 8 o'clock it was nine above, at 9 o'clock seven above, at 12 o'clock four above, and at half-past 1 o'clock two above zero.—a smart wind blowing all the time, and making it so uncomfortable out-of-doors that people in warm rooms did not like to go out. This young lady's devotion, so to speak, to the cause of science, as shown in her careful notation of weather changes, is most commendable.

We are told that Mr. John Campbell, the trusty nurse at the hospital on Pest Island, is somewhat riled, as it were, at the statement published concerning the manner in which the Tredick boy, at Newcastle, took the small-pox. Mr. Campbell scoffs aloud at the story of any one having been on the island save those forced there by sickness or duty, and pronounces the statement concerning the visit of two boys a romance.

Schooner Edwin I. Morrison was not launched on Monday, owing to the extreme cold weather and wind.

Commander Francis Morris is ordered to the navy yard.

J. B. Burleigh, & Co. of this city will commence a great picture sale in a few days. Every ticket gets a picture. Look out for it.

Don't forget the entertainment at the Temple this evening—readings and recitations by Miss. Mai Wiggin, whose performance at the Universalist church some weeks since was so highly commended by those present,—and instrumental music by a violinist and Miss Frisbee, pianist.

The meeting of the ladies with the general committee of one hundred who have charge of the Fourth of July celebration will take place next Tuesday evening, instead of Monday. All interested are requested to attend.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Portsmouth Gas Company last week, it was voted to reduce the price of gas from $4 per thousand cubic feet (with 16 2-3 per cent. discount,) to $3 30, with 10 per cent. discount—making a net reduction to prompt payers of 36-1-3 cents per thousand.

We have received from Israel Kimball, Esq., Head of Division, in charge of taxes on manufactures, products, &c., and taxes on sales, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, at Washington, his able argument in favor of the constitutionality of the cotton tax, with reasons why this tax should not be refunded.

Too Enterprising.

A party of young people from Kittery Point, consisting of four young men and three young women, recently paid a visit to the Cape Neddick House in York (well and favorably known as the hostelry where "Ma'am Freeman" sets out the nicest of nicely-cooked country fare on the whitest of cloths for her patrons, at the most reasonable rates,) and stayed for one meal. After the party had gone Mrs. Freeman discovered that a valuable breastpin, a present from her sister, with a ring, a silver half dollar, a $5 bill and other articles had also gone; and as suspicion could only point in one direction, she immediately wrote a letter to one of her undesirable visitors, peremptorily demanding the restitution of the stolen property. The letter resulted in another call from one of the party, who brought back all the articles missed except the half-dollar, and in addition restored a knife, two gold pencils and a syringe, the absence of which had not previously been noticed by their owner. Should that party visit her house again, Mrs. Freeman will in their case probably dispense with the cordial welcome extended to other patrons of the establishment, though were we in her place we would give them a warm reception—with boiling water.

Sea Yarns.

"Tell that to the marines—sailor won't believe it."—Well, Messrs. Editors, you may tell it to whom you have a mind,—may put it among your marine news, if you please—but here is the story, and it is true, or at any rate, passes as such, among those who put their feet up "on the square" fender around the stove at the Mechanics' Reading Room, of evenings. Once on a time, about the year of grace 1870, a retired seacaptain of this city entered the CHRONICLE office, and advertised his silver hunting cased watch as lost—at the same time time stating that he did not expect to find it, as he had no doubt it was stolen from his woodshed by a boy neighbor. But now just note the effects of advertising. Our salt water friend, as he day by day split his own wood, on the old block where erst his long treasured and well kept pocket companion was accustomed to hang in sight that he might not work too long or too hard—was often in the mood to sing, "By the sad sea waves," from very grief and vexation. Months passed; and one morning, his axe again glanced from the block, as axes will, and struck at its case, among the chips and rubbish usual to such places; and his eye naturally following, detected something bright and shining; when, what do you think?—lo and behold! there lay the lost watch, half beneath the block, and partially covered by the cuttings—on whose devoted head, or side, that axe had time and again descended, and left its impress in numerous gashes. But,—owing to its very thick cases, the captain says—the gentleness of the blows according to others—the watch was little the worse for it, is now more highly prized than ever, and for aught we know, is the one so often referred to as watch ahoy! or more likely, the watch below.

There is another story told, round that square or in boxing the compass, at the reading room, of another old shipmaster—which does not exactly refer to a watch, yet goes to show that the Captain knows his P's and Q's, is always on the watch, and can still make good time when required. One day last winter, on a fine afternoon after a deep snow storm, the captain thought he would take a walk through the Avenue; and he was walking quietly along in the horse path, when two men not averse to a joke came along behind him in a sleigh. Said one to his companions, "See me start the captain now," and the next instant, while fully three hundred feet away, he yelled with a voice loud enough to be heard in a battle, "Take care there!" The captain, who had not before been aware of their approach, and who imagined from the sudden warning, that a team was close aboard him—quick as thought, put his helm hard down, leaped far to one side of the path, light as a deer, landing in snow almost up to his waist; where he stood with his boots full of snow and his face full of indignation, when he, turning half round, saw how far the team was from him, and understood, if he didn't appreciate the joke. He laughs at it now but it's no use denying that the sleighers would rather not have fallen into the jumping mad captain's hands just then. This goes to show again, that you can't tell how far an old sea captain can jump, by his age. F.

Morning Chronicle.

A STORY WITH A MORAL.—Let those who use explosive compounds take warning from the example of certain gentlemen in Missouri, whose experiences are recounted by the St. Louis Republican of recent date. The story runs as follows: Some time ago a firm engaged in rock excavation bought a quantity of dualin for blasting purposes, but when it was delivered to them they were sorely puzzled to know what to do with it. They were afraid to use it, or their men were afraid, and they did not like to keep it around. To bury it was out of the question, for fear some one might violate, intentionally or by accident, its last resting place, and thus create a most unexpected and disastrous volcanic eruption. No one would buy it, and they did not think it expedient to explode it—indeed, they were afraid it might solve the problem for itself by vanishing into thin air, and carrying a part of the State of Missouri with it. They had called up a Frankenstein that would not "down" at their bidding, and great was their anxiety of mind in consequence. At last one of the gentlemen of the firm—with a heroism only second to that of Curtius, though with a disregard of the lives and property of others which was only equaled by that of Samson at Gaza, when he committed suicide by pulling down the house of his captors—volunteered to take the stuff to St. Louis and see if he could sell it. He brought it down by boat, and, reaching St. Louis, locked the uncomfortable case in his stateroom while he went about seeking some one to whom, for a consideration, he could transfer the disagreeable responsibility. But no one was contemplating investments in dualin just then, and the custodian of the case thereof was more at a loss than before. He did not dare to take it back again, and would not have known what to do with it if he had it back, so in his desperation he gently lowered it overboard, gave a sigh of deep relief, and started for home by the first conveyance.

But the end of the story is yet to be written. It is well known that the explosive power of dualin is not diminished by moisture, and that its ability to create earthquakes is small in comparison with its ability to raise water spouts; and the anxiety of which the proprietor of the dualin in question relieved his own mind, has settled down upon the minds of sundry river pilots and steamboat owners. There is no telling to what point the current has swept the torpedo, nor when not where some ill-fated craft may run afoul of it, and start forthwith on a voyage skyward.

Moral.—Do not buy dualin until you know just what you are going to do with it.—Iron Age.

MORE UNCORRUPTED INTEGRITY.—Pause, everybody! Stop, everything! Here's a spectacle! In the midst of a bribed and corrupted generation, in an atmosphere foul with Credit Mobilier investigations and the scandal of bought legislature, we sniff the pure breath of the prairie. Missouri startles the great of the world. She is "the shadow of a great rock in a thirsty land;" an oasis in the desert; an—no, well, what's the use? Behold it! One day last week the members of the Legislature of that State in a body walked up to the clerk's desk, and in the most solemn and deliberate manner returned the passes which had been furnished them by the several railroad companies. Nothing cold be more magnificent. At a time when Rev. Mr. Harlan confesses to have received $10 000 of a railroad man; when Caldwell is charged with having bought up a whole Legislature at prices ranging from $500 to $15,000; when Colfax is caught carrying Credit Mobilier, and Wilson drops it in his tracks, and everything seems to be going to the bad, the Missouri Legislature stalks majestically to the front and hurls back in the faces of the soulless corporations which issued them the passes for ninety days which had been offered them. They spurned the bribes. No passes—for less than a year, is the watchword of the Missouri legislators. Let us do honor to their uncompromising integrity for a few minutes, while the clerks are making out annual passes to replace those for ninety days.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Believe Your Lungs.

For the terrible disease engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croup, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that, perfected by the of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

and all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

ALDEN'S IMPERISHABLE EVAPORATED!

FRUITS & VEGETABLES.

Having lost nothing but water, they return, when put in water, to their original condition, both in quantity and flavor.

DIRECTIONS:—To every pound of Fruit add four quarts cold water, come to a boil slowly and stew 10 to 20 minutes, add half the usual amount of Sugar used with fresh fruit.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

In the opinion of the most Eminent Physicians and Chemists these full products are far more wholesome than "Canned" or "Dried" fruit—they having been Super-matured or ripened though the Alden Pneumatic Process, and prepared perfectly clean without exposure to flies or dirt.

These are the cheapest and best fruits in the Market, and you cannot tell them from fresh fruit when cooked.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are so—we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model, does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantage over all others combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupulina, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the throbbing, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, but knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind from time immemorial, for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases, and at very reasonable charges.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, Feb. 11.

Gaunt and drear, like the frame of a large turkey the morning after Christmas, stand the huge trusses of the Coliseum. True, several of the great trusses were blown down last Saturday, but the most remain to remind one of the feast of melody enjoyed last summer in the immense building whose destruction is now assured. To have heard the great chorus, to have been charmed by the foreign bands, to have drank in the melody of Lentner's wonderful vocalization, and to have experienced the intoxication of listening to the superb waltz music furnished by the great orchestra led by Strauss, is an experience that will ever be treasured by those who attended the last "Jubilee."

Probably the "Guarantee Fund," which paid so heavily for this last musical festival, may have views of a more sombre character. The shrewd purchasers of the vast lumber pile will consider it "a big thing," owing to the immense present demand for lumber. The plucky projector and indefatigable worker, P. S. Gilmore, comes out rather short, but his friends trust will have the honor and profit of inaugurating an American National Band at Washington.

The small-pox "scare" is over, so far as Bostonians are concerned. The largest dealer in vaccine virus (direct from the heifer) in the country has withdrawn his advertisements from the city papers, because its spread here is virtually at an end. Some papers have animadverted upon the method of vaccinating the leg, but what could be more natural than to attempt to transmit good (or bad) qualities from the heifer to the calf. [Mem. This is a joke.]

The long continued sleighing "on the Brighton Road" is at an end. Stable keepers have had a rich field to work, and the owners of private teams have found some compensation for the risk of expense of keeping private equipages during the prevalence of the epizootic. The worst feature of the thaw was the bad footing furnished pedestrians during the latter part of last week, and innumerable bottles of Pulmocine will be required to remove the many colds and coughs caused thereby.

Among many attractions offered for the coming year by Scribner's Monthly, none will prove of more interest than the papers on "The South," written by E. King (late of the Boston Journal,) illustrated by James W. Champney, familiarly known to the artistic world as "Champ." From an intimate acquaintance with the latter, and a general knowledge of Mr. K., I can assure your readers of a rich treat in this series of articles, which will not only give a faithful transcript of much that is most picturesque in America, but will also add much to the general acquaintance with a portion of their own large country now almost unknown to the people of the North and East.

An enterprising keeper of a "lunch room" in this city has issued cards, with a heavy black border on both sides. His card of business occupies one side, while the reverse bears the cut of a coffin, ornamented with a death's head and cross bones, and various other ciphers, the whole surmounted by the legend: "This man was talked to death." It is a cheerful little affair, not unlike the "Coffin Handbills" of Jackson's time. Seriously, a coffin is an apt emblem for the consideration of all those who indulge in liquor during these days of prohibitory laws. The amount of liquor drank is not considered much less by those who are best posted, but its deterioration in consequence of sumptuary laws is apparent to all. M.

Portsmouth, N. H.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1873.

James Willis.

We doted on our orthodox Senator, at one time. We admired his eloquence and boasted of his independence. We were with him in opposing the Santo Domingo scheme, and sympathized when he told us he must vote to confirm friends or relatives of the President, whom he deemed, in order to retain influence with Ulysses. We knew he wished success to the movement to defeat the President's renomination, and were prepared for the sad and comfort he gave Sumner and Schurz in the French army matter. We heard strange rumors of his connection with the Credit Mobilier and we watched him narrowly. We were shown letters from him to Collector Bailey and Inspector Young, at the time of the famous strategetical movement which ended as it began, in which he took both sides of the case.

We paused then in our admiration of the eloquent Senator, who hesitated not to place himself on record, tho' he conveniently neglected to sign one of them. We attended the Philadelphia convention with the belief that Senator Patterson was honestly opposing the renomination of Grant, and first read of his sudden change of heart on opening a Philadelphia paper and reading that he had made a speech at Concord decaying that he was opposed to Grant. We no longer hesitated as to our duty as a journalist. New Hampshire's Senator, versed in belles lettres, eloquent of speech, copying the manners of the Massachusetts Senator, was not the right man in the right place—and we thought the doctrine of rotation best applicable to his case.

Later still came the charge of dabbling in Credit Mobilier, which he indignantly denied, and which we then considered as proved upon him. Subsequent developments have sustained our convictions. Before a committee of Congressmen, he has deliberately perjured himself, greatly to the chagrin of his warmest friends and the disgust (now changed to pity) of those who rejoiced last June over his defeat. Though less shocked than others because better prepared for his infamy, we can but sorrow over his downfall from such a dizzy height that only ruin is the result. Ambition is vain, strife for position is futile, if those who attain to highest honors make no better public record than has James Willis Patterson.

Credit Mobilier.

Hon. Oakes Ames testified at Washington on the 11th, that his memorandum book showed that Senator Patterson paid him for his $9000 worth of Credit Mobilier stock on the 31st of August, 1871, and not in December of that year as he had previously testified.

SCHUYLER'S MOBILIER.—Here is the Indianapolis Journal's theory of the "S. C." check: "Ames says he sent some money to Indiana for election expenses in the campaign of 1868; query, did not the old fox give a check for $1200 on that account, and charge it to Mr. Colfax as dividend on Credit Mobilier stock? Of course Ames only knows the check was paid, and knows he sent some money to the Indiana campaign fund, but doesn't remember how much. It looks very much as if in order to save this donation he had marked the check "S. C.," and charged it up against Colfax."

New evidence concerning Mr. Colfax was found in the book of '69, where it is recorded that Mr. Colfax received interest to the amount of fifteen hundred dollars on Union Pacific bonds received as Credit Mobilier stock dividend in 1868.

NEWSPAPER EXCHANGES.—A question has been raised as to whether the law abolishing franking also cuts off the free newspaper list in the way of exchanges. Postmaster-General Creswell, says that the matter had not been officially brought to his attention, but from a cursory examination of the law he should certainly not regard it as interfering with the free transmission of newspaper exchanges. The act distinctly relates to the franking privilege, words having a distinct meaning.

NAVAL.—Pay-Inspector C. J. Wallach is ordered to the New York navy yard. Pay-Director George F. Cutter has been detached from the New York navy yard and ordered to duty as purchasing paymaster in New York. Pay-Director J. O. Bradford has been detached as purchasing paymaster at New York and ordered to settle accounts.

Washington Correspondence.

The Public Debt—Fushing and Flushingism—Louisiana—Railroads—Credit Mobilier—Butler and Garfield—Specie Payment—Senator Cragin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 8.

Business men may now look forward with the certainty that the tariff is not to be tinkered for some time to come, and the free trade advocate may hang his harp upon the willow for a time. The debt statement for January shows an increase of near half a million for the month, which, with the increase of near two millions in December, shows that we have reduced taxation so much that we cannot reduce the debt whenever there are heavy payments or disturbed importations, in any month. It was the payment of two and a quarter millions for this District and for postal services which caused the deficiency this month, aided somewhat by diminished importations.

Lent draws nigh, and eggs are rising in the market; and after a short round more of fashion comes the season of purgation which Catholics observe,—and so do tired and exhausted Protestants. The "season" started late but has been improved to the utmost. The younger fashionables have inaugurated the practice of making calls on foot, but the older ones keep to their carriages. Some of the establishments are more disgusting to republican taste and manhood than ever. Just imagine two human beings dressed in stovepipe hats, with hat-bands wide enough to fill a four-inch hole, brass buckles, with a big rosette and sort of bob-plume on the left hand side of the crown, and a half-military overcoat covered with brass buttons, sitting up on a carriage box and driving a pair of horses drawing around a woman trying to be fashionable,—and when the goes out for shopping, one holds the team, while the other follows modest two paces in the rear, and waits on the sidewalk when she enters a store. The whole thing is sickening, and every Congressman guilty of maintaining it, who has a republican constituency, should be kicked out.

But for the Credit Mobilier investigation more attention would be given to the Louisiana muddle, which shows more astounding frauds than were ever before exposed. It seems impossible that the Senate will admit any Senator who has been elected by frauds so glaring as have been developed in this case; but if the Senate keeps some of its present members it will have no occasion to be particular about those to come.

The action of the House on Hawley's resolution for the President to appoint a commission to investigate the operations of railroads as to cost, expenses, dividends, etc., was defeated by a vote of 75 in favor to 99 against it. The seventy-five favoring the movement were republicans, while all the democrats opposed it, with such republicans as are opposed to taking any steps looking to the regulation of freights and fares by the government, under that clause of the Constitution which gives Congress power to regulate commerce between the several States. There is little doubt but that some who favor the plan were opposed to a commission which might open up to the public gaze the methods by which stocks have been watered. The vote is significant of the strength of the proposition, and indicates that it cannot long be kept from taking prominence as a political question.

The Senate will now take up Credit Mobilier, before the committee appointed upon Senator Patterson's motion, when the evidence before the House committee was sent to the Senate. There was great dislike to serving on the committee, and several Senators requested to be excused. I fear the hope of the Senator satisfactorily to explain his position as it now stands, will prove a delusion. Ames is said to have an increased stock of letters and receipts, which he found on his recent visit home. No one can imagine how thoroughly the House has been left without a leader by these exposures, who is not himself a witness to it. Garfield, chairman of committee on appropriations, had a tilt with Butler, Wednesday, over the post-office appropriation bill; it is impossible to imagine the effect upon the House when Butler put him aside with a wave of the hand and the Latin quotation to speak nothing but good of the dead. The House was still as death itself when it was spoken, and Garfield sank down in his chair with the sweat of agony on his brow.

Sherman's bill to provide for specie payments was laid on the table, where it belongs, by two majority. Stated in plain English, it was a bill to retire greenbacks and put National Bank notes in their place—to put a government debt which the people are glad to hold without interest, into a debt for capitalists to hold at five per cent. gold interest, thereby adding to the burdens of the people, for interest alone, seventeen millions of dollars. If it would have contracted the currency to a specie standard, within the year contemplated, it would have increased the value of all debts, whether national, municipal or individual, twelve per cent., and diminished the value of the property out of which the debtors and payers are to make payment, twelve per cent. It provided that a rich man who had a thousand dollars of greenbacks could have either specie or a five per cent. gold interest bond, while his poor neighbor, who had but a hundred or five hundred dollars, could have no such chance. The other side of the statement is that greenbacks are promises to pay in dollars, and dollars are the gold and silver coin—that the national paper is dishonored, and when it can't be paid in coin the holder ought to have the privilege of putting it into something which will pay interest,—as the private citizen, when he cannot pay his bills, gives his note with interest. The high sanhedrim is never heard by the class, except when the toll is coming to their mill.

Senator Cragin made a very able speech upon reviving our commerce, which brought him very complimentary notices and is published at length in the Chronicle of this city.

The expenditures about this city have been on a large scale, and applications of our Boards have been for large amounts, but your types made the call of the Board of Health $350,000 more than I intended to write it. Forty thousand dollars was enough to ask of Uncle Sam, to take care of small-pox and garbage. EXE.

Readables.

A Danbury boy who reads the papers went to his father with a rope in his hands and told that worthy if he didn't give him fifty cents to buy a jack knife he would forthwith hang himself. It was the place of the old man to say, "Heaven forgive you, my son, for the awful thought—here are the fifty cents." He didn't say it, however. He merely twined his fingers in the young man's tresses, and bumped his head against the door jamb until the suicide thought it was Fourth of July night.

WHAT TIME HAS TAUGHT US. It has taken two thousand years to teach the world that to sustain the body in its conflict with disease, not to help disease by weakening the body, is the true end of medicine. We have the lesson by heart at last, however. We know, for example, that tearing doses of aloes, salts, jalap, croton oil, calomel, colcynth, &c, are the best allies that a debilitating malady can have in its assaults on the human frame; and that a medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which strengthens all the bodily powers and rallies the sinking constitution, is the most powerful antagonist of the morbific principle, whatever it may be that lies at the root of the complaint. The knowledge has been a long time in reaching us, but it is invaluable. We can now control and cure dyspepsia, bilious disturbances, constipation, rheumatism, nervousness, and many other painful complaints once considered incurable, with this admirable corrective.

THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—Mark Twain delivered his lecture on the Sandwich Islands, Wednesday night, at Steinway Hall, New York city: The lecturer on being introduced assured the audience that he felt himself fully competent to speak of the interesting locality to which public attention has been lately directed, having spent several months on the islands. They were situated about two thousand, one hundred miles southwest of San Francisco, but when they were put in such an out-of-the-way locality he could never ascertain. The geological structure of the group of islands was described in the dry caustic style for which Twain is celebrated. The visit of the whites introduced civilization and education and killed out the natives. The latest reliable information fixes the population at 50,000, and when the benevolent foreigners start a few more seminaries, it is to be hoped that that event will materially help to kill off the remainder of the native population. The females wear long robes, the gentlemen generally wear a smile and a pair of spectacles. The humorous description of the king and nobility kept the audience convulsed with laughter. It was not to be supposed that the natives were ignorant of scripture history; that they had some idea of the fall of Eve. Mr. Twain proved by stating that it was death for a woman to eat any fruit of the island, probably that they did not want to give woman a second chance. The American Missionary Society had started schools and introduced printing, and, owing to their exertions, there was not a single uneducated native above eighteen years old on the island, and the nation was about the best educated in the world The expense of the mission was paid by the Sunday school children of America, and Mr. Twain mentioned the fact that some thirty years ago he invested $2 in the speculation. Of course he did not mind the money, nor did he wish to "show off;" the incident was referred to as an instance of confiding humanity, and he hoped it would have its effect on the house. The natives are very hospitable, and feast their guests on roast dog and fricasseed cat—the ordinary American sausage stripped of its mystery. The dog was the pet of the household, and the constant companion of the family, and when fit for the table was killed and served up. Mr. Twain had no decided objection to the dish, but he did not relish the idea of eating a personal friend. There were no cannibals in the Sandwich Islands. True, one addicted to that barbarous custom settled on one of the group, and getting tired of digesting natives, he resolved to try a white man with onions. This savage succeeded in capturing the captain of a whaling-ship, a tough old salt, who had spent fifty years at sea, living on shark steaks and blubber, but he proved too much for the digestive organs of the interesting native and he died of the feast, with the crime on his conscience and the whaler in his stomach. The various peculiarities of the Kanak were described by Mr. Twain, who interspersed his discourse with humorous sketches and witty allusions to the topics of the day, which kept his audience in a continuous roar of laughter. His attitudes, gestures, and looks, even his very silence were provocative of mirth.

The new firm of furniture dealers, Fletcher & Tanton, have put in a large stock of new goods in the Goodrich block, No. 58 Market street, and we hope those of our citizens who are tempted to visit Boston to purchase chamber sets and other articles will call on them before selecting. Messrs. Fletcher and Tanton are live men and skillful mechanics, and are reliable in their dealings. Their spacious and convenient show rooms enable them to exhibit their stock to the best advantage and customers will always experience courteous treatment at their hands.

The announcement that arrangements are being perfected for the annual Masonic Ball will give pleasure to many. The affair will probably come off the latter part of this month.

Dearborn S. F. E. Co., No. 1, will give their fourth annual Ball in Congress Hall on Friday evening of next week, the eve of Washington's Birthday. The Ball given by the Dearborns last year was a big affair, and the boys propose to equal if they cannot eclipse it, this time.

U. S. Steamer Mayflower went into commission on Tuesday, the 11th, Lieut. Comd'r R. F. Gardner commanding.

On Saturday evening, the 11th, at a late hour, two men in a sleigh drove past Garrity's saloon and Gilbert's fruit store on Daniel street and as they passed amused themselves by breaking a number of panes of glass in each building, with a long stick. Who or what they were, or whether they had any other motive than the gratification of a loudness for malicious mischief, is not known.

At the annual meeting of the Portsmouth Gas Co., Tuesday, the 11th, the old board of Directors was re-elected. A dividend of eight per cent. was declared and a handsome sum was added to the surplus fund. The Directors were authorized to extend the wharf of the company further into the river.

The Universalist society of Kittery has extended a pastoral call to Rev. Newmarch P. Smith of Massachusetts.

Old Rip Van Winkle evidently resides in Newmarket. A letter was received here on Tuesday postmarked 'Newmarket, N. H.,' directed to "John Bennett, City Clerk Portsmouth, N. H." Mr. B. has been dead nearly six months, and retired from the City Clerkship upward of ten years ago. The writer doesn't take the CHRONICLE.

Schooner Edwin I. Morrison was successfully launched at twelve o'clock, Tuesday, from the yard of Wm. F. Fernald.

Until this season Gloucester, Mass., has ranked next to Boston, this city, as a mart for fishermen, but now Portsmouth is second only to Boston. Over a million herring have been sold here this winter and there are six cargoes yet to arrive.

Hon. Eben F. Pillsbury, of Augusta has gone on to interview Evans, the Northwood murderer, in relation to the confession recently made in regard to his (Evans) connection with the murder of a girl near Augusta. Mr. Pillsbury was counsel in the case of Doyle, charged with the murder of the Libby girl at Farmington in 1862. Doyle was convicted of the crime, sentenced to State prison, and died there, protesting his innocence to the last. At the time of the murder it is said a tramp was seen in that vicinity, and it is surmised Evans might have been the man. Mr. Pillsbury had great confidence in Doyle's innocence, and is anxious even at this late day to establish his innocence.

The Naval Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives have agreed to report favorably the claim of Geo. G. Bester, of Peoria, Ill., for constructing gunboats in 1864. The claim amounts to $135,000.

The post mortem examination of the body of Governor Geary discovered no pathological lesion of any organ, and the conclusion arrived at was that he died from syncope caused by nervous prostration, the result of overwork and malarial cachexy. His brain weighed 56 1-2 ounces.

The Republican Central Committee of Ohio is to meet at Columbus to determine on the time for holding the State Convention and to consult about other matters. It will probably be unnecessary to take action on the intention of Mr. Patterson, of New Hampshire, to become an inoculator of moral science in any Buckeye institution.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

A MAD MARIA.—The Huntingdon Globe says: A very bland and insinuating gentleman approached us, the other day, and asked us to publish a little note from a wronged and outraged citizen, for the purpose of setting herself right before the community, at the same time assuring us that it was right. Unhesitatingly we gave our consent, without any further preliminaries; however, upon reading it we fain would have suppressed it, but having given our editorial word there was no other alternative but publish "right or wrong." Our readers will excuse us. We will be more circumspect in the future. Here it is:

Huntingdon County Jail; Cell No. 4, Feb. 4, 1873.—Editor of Journal: I want you to understand, and I want everybody to understand that my name is Maria Montgomery. Everybody knows where to find me, I am not afraid. I'll skin somebody. Everybody is prejudiced against me. Courts and juries are a humbug, an infernal humbug. Don't come near me or I'll splatter you all over. I'll kill somebody! I'll start a newspaper, and call it Maria Montgomery's Club. It will be a knotty club. I'll club everybody that comes near me. I'll make the "jackasses" and "skunks" stand around. Make 'em wince, sir. I know you consider yourself too nice and too respectable to fight, but in the Globe I'll find an antagonist worthy of my club. I can use as many cuss and fish words as its reverend head. Come on, Mr Globe. I can handle my club better than you handle the rod. I'm mad. I want to skin and cut somebody! Get out out of the way. None of your poking fun at me. I'm the right woman for the Globe. Let him come on.

MARIA MONTGOMERY.

UNDER THE ICE.—The St. Paul Pioneer knows the following story to be true because Maj. S. A. Buell of St. Peter vouches for its literal truth:

Mr. Cronan, living at Lake Prairie in Nicollet county, in company with a neighbor, started with his team to visit Le Sueur. Arriving at the Minnesota river, opposite Ottawa, they undertook to cross on the ice. The river had frozen over during comparative high water, which falling left the ice frozen to either bank, forming a bridge, the only supports of which were the two banks of the river. When the team reached the centre of the river the ice gave way, and the team, sleigh and Mr Cronan went down. The neighbor who was in the sleigh with Mr. Cronan sprang out. The Minnesota is a swift-running stream, and as soon as the sleigh, team and Mr. Cronan went down they disappeared under the ice. The neighbor remembering that there was an open in the ice a few rods below, ran down to it, and just reached it as he espied the body of Mr. Cronan floating by. Reaching out his hand he grasped Mr. Cronan and succeeded in fishing him out in an insensible condition. It took some time to resuscitate Mr. Cronan, but he finally revived. He made an underground journey of nearly a quarter of a mile, and still lives to tell the story of his narrow escape. The team and sleigh have not been heard of since.

Fifty "liberal republicans" assembled at Concord on the 11th and nominated Samuel K. Mason of Bristol for candidate for Governor.

The new firm of furniture dealers, Fletcher & Tanton, have put in a large stock of new goods in the Goodrich block, No. 58 Market street, and we hope those of our citizens who are tempted to visit Boston to purchase chamber sets and other articles will call on them before selecting. The announcement that arrangements are being perfected for the annual Masonic Ball will give pleasure to many. The affair will probably come off the latter part of this month.

Dearborn S. F. E. Co., No. 1, will give their fourth annual Ball in Congress Hall on Friday evening of next week, the eve of Washington's Birthday. The Ball given by the Dearborns last year was a big affair, and the boys propose to equal if they cannot eclipse it, this time.

U. S. Steamer Mayflower went into commission on Tuesday, the 11th, Lieut. Cosnd'e R. F. Gardner commanding.

On Saturday evening, the 11th, at a late hour, two men in a sleigh drove past Garritty's saloon and Gilbert's fruit store on Daniel street and as they passed amused themselves by breaking a number of panes of glass in each building, with a long stick. Who or what they were, or whether they had any other motive than the gratification of a fondness for malicious mischief, is not known.

At the annual meeting of the Portsmouth Gas Co., Tuesday, the 11th, the old board of Directors was re-elected. A dividend of eight per cent. was declared and a handsome sum was added to the surplus fund. The Directors were authorized to extend the wharf of the company farther into the river.

The Universalist society of Kittery has extended a pastoral call to Rev. Newmarch P. Smith of Massachusetts.

Old Rip Van Winkle evidently resides in Newmarket. A letter was received here on Tuesday postmarked 'Newmarket, N. H.,' directed to "John Bennett, City Clerk Portsmouth, N. H." Mr. B. has been dead nearly six months, and retired from the City Clerkship upward of ten years ago. The writer doesn't take the CHRONICLE.

Until this season Gloucester, Mass., has ranked next to Boston, this city, as a mart for fishermen, but now Portsmouth is second only to Boston. Over a million herring have been sold here this winter and there are six cargoes yet to arrive.

Hon. Eben F. Pillsbury, of Augusta has gone on to interview Evans, the Northwood murderer, in relation to the confession recently made in regard to his (Evans) connection with the murder of a girl near Augusta. Mr. Pillsbury was counsel in the case of Doyle, charged with the murder of the Libby girl at Farmington in 1862. Doyle was convicted of the crime, sentenced to State prison, and died there, protesting his innocence to the last. At the time of the murder it is said a tramp was seen in that vicinity, and it is surmised Evans might have been the man. Mr. Pillsbury had great confidence in Doyle's innocence, and is anxious even at this late day to establish his innocence.

The Naval Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives have agreed to report favorably the claim of Geo. G. Baxter, of Peoria, Ill., for constructing gunboats in 1864. The claim amounts to $135,000.

The post mortem examination of the body of Governor Geary discovered no pathological lesion of any organ, and the conclusion arrived at was that he died from syncope caused by nervous prostration, the result of overwork and malarial cachexy. His brain weighed 56 1-2 ounces.

The Republican Central Committee of Ohio is to meet at Columbus to determine on the time for holding the State Convention and to consult about other matters. It will probably be unnecessary to take action on the intention of Mr. Patterson, of New Hampshire, to become an freelance of moral science in any Buckeye institution.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

—Boat-race fever—Henry Stanley of Palestine, Tex. In his life he was lovely and in his death he was divided.

A MAD MARIA.—The Huntingdon Globe says: A very bland and insinuating gentleman approached us, the other day, and asked us to publish a little note from a wronged and outraged citizen, for the purpose of setting herself right before the community, at the same time assuring us that it was right. Unhesitingly we gave our consent, without any further preliminaries; however, upon reading it we felt would have suppressed it, but having given our editorial word there was no other alternative but publish "right or wrong." Our readers will excuse us. We will be more circumspect in the future. Here it is:

Huntingdon County Jail; Cell No. 4, Feb. 4, 1873.—Editor of Journal: I want you to understand, and I want everybody to understand that my name is Maria Montgomery. Everybody knows where to find me, I am not afraid. I'll skin somebody. Everybody is prejudiced against me. Courts and juries are a humbug, an infernal humbug. Don't come near me or I'll spitter you all over. I'll kill somebody! I'll start a newspaper, and call it Maria Montgomery's Club. It will be a knotty club. I'll club everybody that comes near me. I'll make the "jackasses" and "skunks" stand around. Make 'em wince, sir. I know you consider yourself too nice and too respectable to fight, but in the Globe I'll find an antagonist worthy of my club. I can use as many cuss and fish words as is reverend head. Come on, Mr Globe. I can handle my club better than you handle the rod. I'm mad. I want to skin and eat somebody! Get out out of the way. None of your p-king fun at me. I'm the right woman for the Globe. Let him come on.

MARIA MONTGOMERY.

UNDER THE ICE.—The St. Paul Pioneer knows the following story to be true because Maj. S. A. Buell of St. Peter vouches for its literal truth:

Mr. Cronan, living at Lake Prairie in Nicollet county, in company with a neighbor, started with his team to visit Le Sueur. Arriving at the Minnesota river, opposite Ottawa, they undertook to cross on the ice. The river had frozen over during comparative high water, which falling left the ice frozen to either bank, forming a bridge, the only supports of which were the two banks of the river. When the team reached the centre of the river the ice gave way, and the team, sleigh and Mr Cronan went down. The neighbor who was in the sleigh with Mr. Cronan sprang out. The Minnesota is a swift-running stream, and as soon as the sleigh, team and Mr. Cronan went down they disappeared under the ice. The neighbor remembering that there was an open in the ice a few rods below, ran down to it, and just reached it as he espied the body of Mr. Cronan floating by. Reaching out his hand he grasped Mr. Cronan and succeeded in fishing him out in as insensible condition. It took some time to resuscitate Mr. Cronan, but he finally revived. He made an underground journey of nearly a quarter of a mile, and still lives to tell the story of his narrow escape. The team and sleigh have not been heard of since.

Fifty "liberal republicans" assembled at Concord on the 11th and nominated Samuel K. Mason of Bristol for candidate for Governor.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It retains the quality of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills" simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The nutritious and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been charged by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and they will be paid if found different from representation.
COUCHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging of Bunions, the piercing, and distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or poisoned compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the severest instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Allevantor for ordinary corns and preventing their destruction is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By ascertaining study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

The Chronicle.

Waylaid.

BY WALTER A. ROSE.

In the autumn of 1860 I joined the steamer Thunder as fourth-mate. She was a large ship-rigged propeller, owned by a well known firm in Calcutta, and engaged conveying opium from that port to Hong-kong.

Quite as much gambling is carried on in China in regard to the ever-fluctuating prices of opium as there is at present with gold and railway shares in Wall street, New York; and as no telegraphic communication exists between India and the "flowery Land," speculators have to anxiously await the arrival of the vessels which actually bring the drug into port, ere they can form any accurate idea as to the state of the market in Calcutta, where the Government sales take place monthly. Even the report, sometimes circulated by fishermen, that an opium steamer is lying outside the harbor, will cause considerable commotion among the gamblers, who, deeming it probable that her owners have already received Calcutta advices, watch anxiously for any action on their parts which will indicate whether the drug had advanced.

On the morning of the eighth day subsequent to that on which the Thunder left Singapore, I came on deck just as the Asses' Ears and Lemma Islands, a sterile group in close proximity to Hong-Kong, loomed like gigantic shadows up from the laughing waters of the deep blue sea; and an hour after our good ship was riding at single anchor in Mirs bay, at the entrance to the Ly-ee-moon, a tortuous passage leading into Victoria (Hong-Kong) harbor.

"The fourth-mate had better carry the despatches ashore, Rogers," said Captain Fowler, as he descended from the bridge when the steamer was safely anchored.

"Is the cutter, sir?" inquired the chief-officer.

"No! She would be recognized, and it would get abroad that we had arrived. My reason for sending Mr. R—is that he is unknown ashore. Hail the first sampan (small native boat) that passes, and charter it to take him in," answered the skipper.

In obedience to the mate's instructions, I exchanged my uniform for mufti, to disarm suspicion in the colony, and took my place in a Chinese boat, the owner of which had contracted to carry me ashore. The despatches were in a small tin case, and another similar receptacle contained the ships papers. These I was to take to our consignee, and I had strict orders to keep my business a secret from every one but him.

"Land at Pedder's wharf, take a sedan-chair, and tell the coolies to carry you to G—'s hong; they will know where to go," was the final mandate of the chief-officer, as the light boat shot swiftly away.

I was very young, and felt considerably elated at the position of responsibility that had been assigned me. I was intrusted with secrets that many of the merchants ashore would have given a large sum to be in possession of, and I determined to watch over and preserve them with jealous care.

The distance from Mirs bay to Hong-Kong is about ten miles; but so enthralled was I by the majestic magnificence of the high verdure-clad hills on either side the Ly-ee moon, that I was surprised when the splendid panorama of Victoria bay, with its multitude of shipping, burst into view, as we rounded the last rocky headland.

The boatmen maintained a vigorous and animated conversation in their own vernacular, not a word of which I then understood, as they toiled at their oar. The commander spoke to me in a curious jargon called "pigeon English," and I was astonished to find by the inquiries he made that he was perfectly aware of the purport of my mission on shore; he tried in fact, to 'pump' me, but in that he failed signally.

"You wanchee go Pedda waaf, sa?" he said at last, and, on my replying in the affirmative, he added; "All' light can go bely soon, sa!" Then he jabbered something which appeared to highly amuse the crew, for they laughed heartily and cehoed, "All 'light Pedda waaf, sa," repeatedly.

Mr. Rogers had told me prior to my departure that the pier he named was located near a tall clock tower "amidships of the town," as he had expressed it; so I was rather surprised to see that the boat was heading for an isolated quay abutting from the sea wall near Happy Valley, which I recognized by the obelisks and gravestones. In a dubious tone of voice, I asked if that was really the place I had to land at, and the pig-tailed skipper assured me so confidently that it was "Pedda waaf," that I, unacquainted with the mendacious habits of the Chinese, felt bound to believe him, and ascend to the jetty, though its appearance differed much from the description of it the mate had given me.

"S'pose you wanchee chair, you come 'long me," said the boatman, as he followed me up the steps, and as I saw no one near to whom I could apply for information, I had to accept his services as guide, and follow in his wake. He obsequiously offered to carry the despatch boxes, but I refused to part with them, so he merely muttered a sort of chuckling ejaculation, and trotted on.

Presently we came to a small row of tenement houses, and my guide induced me to enter one by telling me that his brothers, who were chair bearers, lived above, and that he would rouse them from their slumbers and order them to carry me to G——'s hong.

Out of my innocence of the Chinese character, I believed him, and, thinking all was right, I placed the two cases I had with me upon the floor, and seated myself upon a trestle bed, whereupon reposed a bevy of small children, and a curly headed animal that appeared on first sight to be a dog, but which I subsequently discovered was a juvenile pig. As my guide left the apartment, ascending by a small ladder to the floor above, a quaint little almond eyed, olivaster Chinese girl entered, and after staring at me in speechless astonishment for a moment, came toward me and whispered a word into my ear, the purport of which I did not understand, so I only smiled and nodded in answer until I became aware by her peculiar gesticulations, that she wished to convey to me the information that, in Yankee parlance, I had better "git," as I was in by no means respectable society.

My guide and his confreres were making such a noise by their bolsterous wrangling above my head, that I suddenly became convinced that mischief was meditated, and that I was singled out as the victim; and when my conical little companion pointed at the despatch boxes with her taper finger, and afterward drew her hand across her throat in a most significant manner, it instantly occurred to me that my secret was coveted, that I had fallen among thieves, and that foul measures might be resorted to in order to obtain possession of my treasures.

Naturally impulsive in my actions, I seized the tin cases, and merely nodding adieu to the girl, slipped quietly out of the house, and ran swiftly across a paddy field, in the direction of the city. Though I proceeded as noiselessly as possible, the boatman, who had stationed himself at an upper window, detected my flight, and when I turned my head to reconnoitre, I saw four Chinese, headed by the captain of the sampan, running toward me at a pace that promised soon to overhaul me.

Fear lent me wings, but my speed was not equal to theirs, and, as they gained rapidly I quickly planned in my mind the most feasible method of foiling their nefarious scheme, which I instinctively guessed was robbery, if nothing worse.

After crossing the paddy-field I gained the high-road, upon which I was able to accelerate my pace; but unluckily, in my ignorance of the route I ought to take, I turned off to the eastward instead of proceeding in an exactly opposite direction. My pursuers were about twenty yards astern of me when the road took a semicircular sweep round a huge boulder, and as I darted past the ponderous mass of gray granite, I saw to my right a grove of stunted trees, the dense undergrowth and foliage of which I felt could hide me. I left the road, and entering the grove, selected the tallest of the trees, and prepared to ascend; but I found it would be impossible for me to carry up the despatch-boxes; so, exerting my utmost strength, I uplifted a fragment of rock that lay in a grassy hollow, placed my treasure beneath it, and then climbed the tree with sailor like agility.

I had hardly stretched myself out flat upon one of the upper branches before my pursuers tracked me to the foot of the tree, and began chattering like monkeys, evidently wondering whither I had disappeared; but a dry offshoot from the branch on which I was snapped with a sharp report, revealing my whereabouts, and an exultant chorus of laughter broke from the Chinese as they espied me, for they evidently thought they had me fairly snared.

By the direction of the old skipper, a smart athletic young fellow began to ascend the tree; I drew my clasp-knife, and grasping a limb, stood ready to repel my assailant if he had the temerity to come near to me. The scoundrel saw I was in earnest, and he descended, amid the jeers of his fellows—none of whom, however, were willing to supply his place.

Then they gathered a heap of large stones, and commenced to pelt me with them. This method of attack I was unprepared for, and I felt I should have to succumb to pressure of circumstances. Just as I was about to surrender, however, I caught in my hand a sharp, jagged piece of granite that had been hurled gently at me and immediately conceived a plan for turning it into a weapon of defence.

Drawing a large silk handkerchief from my pocket, I tied the stone securely in one corner, fashioning an impromptu slung-shot; then I jumped directly upon the shoulders of the grinning skipper, the concussion felling him to the earth. In another instant I was on my feet, wielding my formidable weapon with terrible effect. I sent one fellow to grass, with a deep gash on his temple; but his brethren keeping their distance, maintained such an incessant voley of stones, that cut and bleeding. I was forced to take refuge in flight.

As I staggered into the high-road, I fell nearly directly under the hoofs of a magnificent black horse, bestridden by a European.

The gentleman reined in his fiery steed when he saw me. "What on earth is the matter?" he cried, in astonishment.

Then, as my three persuers bounded out of the thicket after me, he apprehended the state of affairs at once, and, without pausing to ask questions, stretched two of them senseless with the heavy butt of his riding-whip. Dismounting, he threw his steed's bridle over a projecting branch, and came toward me.

"My poor boy, you seem badly hurt. How do you come to be here?" he said, in a kindly voice, as he assisted me to rise.

My pluck gave away with the knowledge of safety. I burst into tears, and told him all that had happened.

"The 'Thunderer' arrived, eh? That's great!! I am Mr. G ——, of the firm to which she is consigned. But gracious me! these rascals have got the despatches, and we shall be half-ruined before I can get back to town!" he cried, when I had sobbed forth my story.

"They are safe, sir. I hid them in there," I said, pointing to the thicket.

We pushed our way through the branches, and found the cases under the stone where I had placed them. The man I had struck down was lying near, perfectly motionless.

"You've given that fellow his soup hot, and I think his companions will suffer from headache for a week or so," said Mr. G ——, as he examined the man's wound. "Let them stay where they are. I will send the police to them as we ride in," he added. Then he lifted me into his saddle, and led his horse until we overtook a sedan-chair to which he transferred me, after which he galloped on to his office with the rescued papers.

When I reached his house I found a doctor waiting to dress my wounds, which did not prove to be very serious, after all, and every attention that I could desire was shown me.

Much credit was accorded me for having so well defended my trust, and I always attribute my subsequent rapid promotion on board the 'Thunder' to the prestige I gained by my conduct on that, to me, memorable morning of my introduction to China.

Revival of Shipbuilding.

That better days are dawning for shipbuilders, and that the long-deserted shipyards are no longer to be dreary wastes, may be hopefully prophesied from the number of vessels now and shortly to be in course of construction on the Piscataqua, and the reports of increased activity in shipbuilding all along the coast. That this favorable change is due to anything except the operation of the "natural law of supply and demand" we do not believe; more vessels are needed, iron ships are looked upon with growing disfavor, and as a natural consequence wooden ships are demanded. That any action of the national government could have brought this result about, directly, we do not credit, though the growing confidence inspired by the administration of national affairs during the last four years has materially aided it, indirectly, through the healthy stimulus given to home trade and foreign commerce.

Though the credit of "reviving American shipbuilding" cannot be claimed as a direct administration triumph, it is certain that had the fusionists elected Mr. Greeley they would have pointed to every new keel laid as an evidence of what their party triumph had done for the benefit of native industry, and the argument would have been as hard to disprove as are Oakes Ames' receipts. For this reason, if for no other, we are devoutly thankful that the conglomerates were defeated.

It has been fashionable to charge England with having destroyed our shipbuilding industry, by destroying our ships with her rebel cruisers. The Alabama and her sister pirate vessels no doubt gave valuable aid in that direction; but the British "protection" of iron-shipbuilding did far more. The unjust discrimination of the English Lloyds in the rating of vessels, whereby the best Piscataqua-built wooden ship had to take a position far inferior to that accorded the British-built iron ship, necessitating increased expenses for surveys, insurance, etc., while diminishing the chances of getting freights, offers one of the best examples of encouragement and protection to home industry ever given by that bold advocate of free trade, John Bull. England could build wooden ships, but she had to buy the materials; England could build iron ships for the world, and furnish all the materials; so England set to work to create a fictitious value for iron ships—and did it, so effectually as to make wooden ship building almost one of the lost arts. But the much vaunted iron ships have been subject to a terrible mortality; statistics show that a much larger percentage of first-class iron ships go to sea every year and are never heard of after, than ever was the case with wooden ships; local attraction of compasses in iron ships has over and over again defeated able seamanship and constant care, and led to shipwreck and loss of life; and experience has shown that rating an iron ship A 4 for fourteen years won't make her last for fourteen years. We see it stated that not less than eleven large British steamships, all new and all built of iron, have been lost within the last three months.

Iron ships have their fierce advocates—notably among the builders of iron ships, who are convinced that iron is the strongest, cheapest and most lasting material of which ships can be built; and that oak and yellow pine plank are nowhere alongside of iron plates. But the logic of facts is difficult to refute, and the signs of the times are that iron ships have had their day and that wood will once more become the fashionable material for navigating the ocean in, in spite of Mr. Greeley's defeat, the non-reviving of shipbuilding by the Great administration, and the bolstering up of iron shipbuilding by the great iron-producer, England.

Dawes In For It.

That sub lime humbug economist, Congressman Dawes of Massachusetts, held Credit Mobilier stock, notwithstanding his frequent denials. Mr. Ames' notable memorandum book contains the following entry, dated Jan. 11, 1868:—

Mr. Dawes, Credit Mobilier of America, January 11, $800; January 14, $235. Total, $1035. Witness in explanation of the entries said the $1035 was the par value of the stock and interest on it up to that time. This sum was paid to Mr. Dawes. Witness then turned a leaf in the back of the book and exhibited the entry without date under the head of cash account: "Dawes by cash, $1035; amount due on bond, $1000; bond, $1000; Credit Mobilier, $1000; Union Pacific, $1000." In addition to this, Mr. Ames stated that Mr. Dawes took the bond and paid the difference between the 80 per cent. dividend and its value.

We lost faith in Dawes when he came to New Hampshire and retracted the charges he made against the administration, in Congress. A man who would turn such a short corner is not to be trusted. Now, Dawes would like to succeed Hon. Henry Wilson in the U. S. Senate, but if the Massachusetts legislators put aside such an incorruptible statesman as George S. Boutwell for such a shuffling politician as Henry L. Dawes, they have quite lost their senses and are prepared to follow the disgraceful example of their brethren in South Carolina and Louisiana.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—Further particulars of the accident on the Alleghany Valley Railroad, about nine miles from the village of Scrub Grass, are received. The train was an accommodation, seven cars in all,—six oil cars and one passenger coach. The train was thrown by a broken axle or a broken brake down an embankment thirty feet and into the Alleghany River. The oil in the six cars, 20,000 gallons, caught fire, and those of the passengers who could not escape, were literally boiled in oil. Those who escaped were burned, some of them quite severely, while scrambling from the river through a sheet of flame. The passenger-coach was an iron one. It made several turns going down the embankment and sank in six feet of water. Those who got out of it had to wade through water, on the surface of which the petroleum was burning furiously. The ground was covered with ice and snow. The official report makes but three killed, but it is thought there must be more. The conductor says the train was at the time going at the rate of between 15 and 20 miles an hour.

SHREWD.—Senator Gen. Logan kept the $329 secured on Ames' check until the interest amounted to between two and three dollars. During this time the Senator studied the problem that may be stated as follows:

1. Given $329.
2. Giving nothing for it.

How the d—l am I entitled to it?

John couldn't "see it," and unburdened his primitive old conscience by sending it back with interest as borrowed money.

REDUCTION OF POSTAGE.—The national House passed the postal laws revision bill on the 11th. The rate of letter postage is fixed at two cents after the first of July next. Daily newspapers can be sent through the mails at an annual postage of sixty cents. Weekly papers will be free of postage in the counties where they are printed, as before.

Mr. Colfax's Explanation.

Judge Poland's investigating committee finished taking testimony on the 11th. Mr. Colfax again denied receiving the twelve hundred dollars and also denied receiving the sixty dollars and seventy-five cents interest on the certificates, which was entered on Mr. Ames' book as paid to him. He gave an explanation of the $1200 bank deposit. Two hundred dollars came from his stepfather, Mr. Mathews, as part of a debt due for a piano purchased; $1000 of it was in a note of that denomination received by mail from a man named Nesbitt, of New York, who wrote to congratulate him on his nomination to the vice-presidency and tendered him the money as a compliment. He could not remember the date, as the letter had not been preserved, and Mr. Nesbitt was dead. His executors had not been able to find any record of the sum sent. Mr. Mathews was sworn and recollected that $1000 bill being received in the mail and exhibited at the breakfast table. No date could be fixed other than approximately. The object of fixing the exact date was that the explanation as given might have applied as well to the deposit of $1500. Mr. Ames testified that he could find no other memorandums about Mr. Colfax. The friends of the latter declare that he is exonerated from the charge of holding Credit Mobilier stock.

Spain a Republic.

King Amadeus has abdicated the throne of Spain, and it is announced in a despatch from the United States minister to Secretary Fish that the Cortes adopted a republican form of government by a vote of 259 to 32.

PROTECTION AGAINST BALLOT-STUFFING.—Mr. John J. Maun of Boston has applied for a patent on an application of a registering apparatus to a ballot-box. The contrivance is intended to make successful ballot-stuffing an impossibility. It consists of an ordinary box, large enough to hold all the ballots polled at a voting-place, with a slide opening and closing a hole at the top where the votes are deposited. When this slide is drawn back a gong inside the box is struck, warning all in the room that a ballot is about to be thrown, and the opening of the box is marked on the register, which is placed on the front where all may see it. The mechanism is so adjusted that a slight movement of the slide causes the gong to sound, but no registration is made unless it is drawn back far enough to admit a ballot. Thus there can be no tampering with the box without giving an alarm. The register shows at all times the whole number of votes deposited, and as it records one, and but one, every time the box is opened, though half-a-dozen ballots be stuffed in, it is sure to detect fraud; and if there is any discrepancy between it and the check-list the errors must be on the part of the clerk. It is true that the use of this invention will necessitate delaying the counting of the votes until the day after election, but the people will perhaps be willing to wait if they can feel themselves insured against fraud.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Having disposed of the Stock and good will of the Job Office connected with the DAILY CHRONICLE to Mr. Charles W. Gardner, we would express our thanks to our friends and former patrons, and solicit for Mr. Gardner a continuance of that patronage which has been so liberally bestowed upon us.

Business Notices.

The best articles are often found in small packages. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL, the best preparation for the cure of all throat diseases, is put up in 6 oz. bottles, selling for 50 cts each. It has no equal as a remedy.

SUBSTITUTES IN THE DENTAL RANKS Are not desirable; therefore, keep the natural teeth sound and pure with that wholesome vegetable elixir SOZODONT. Do this, and and they will last as long as the breath lasts, and the breath itself will never be tainted.

IN SPITE OF FLANNELS, Coughs and colds will make a lodgment in the system. But they are not tenants at will. You can dispossess them with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, in less time than it takes a sheriff to execute a writ. Crittenton's, 7 6th Avenue. Sold by all Druggists.

WHAT TIME HAS TAUGHT US. It has taken two thousand years to teach the world that to sustain the body in its conflict with disease, not to help disease by weakening the body, is the true end of medicine. We have the lemon by heart at last, however. We know, for example, that tearing doses of aloes, salts, jalap, croton oil, calomel, colcynth, &c., are the best allies that a debilitating malady can have in its assaults on the human frame; and that a medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which strengthens all the bodily powers and rallies the sinking constitution, is the most powerful antagonist of the morbific principle, whatever it may be that lies at the root of the complaint. This knowledge has been a long time in reaching us, but it is invaluable. We can now control and cure dyspepsia, bilious disturbance, constipation, rheumatism, nervousness, and many other painful complaints once considered incurable, with this admirable corrective.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Honesty vs. Check.

Two youngsters came into the CHRONICLE office Wednesday afternoon and wanted some papers to sell. We told them it was too late for a morning paper, but they insisted on taking them, the younger taking two less than the older, as a loan. An hour after both chaps returned, the younger bringing back one paper and the money for the others sold. We divided the spoils with him. The older plead guilty of "embezzlement" as follows: "Mister! I sold all but one, gave that away, got a cent in my pocket and bought this candy with the rest." "That's check, ain't it?" said the other as both disappeared down the stairway. We've a curiosity to know which of those two boys will succeed best in future! who knows but the elder may become a bank cashier or a Credit Mobilier U. S. Senator, and his companion an A. T. Stewart? The honest little fellow we are told is a son of Capt. Charles H. Chase.

Minstrelsy.

In the palmy days of Perham, Sanford, Christy, Cotton & Murphy, the Buckleys, and the Morris brothers, the music of another time than the present brought the Temple full of people, night after night. Then, Stephen C. Foster was in his prime, and the plaintive airs which he gave to the world still linger in the memory of all. Of late, burlesque and variety companies have held the board, and genuine minstrelsy and the legitimate drama have been crowded out of sight. "The old folks at home" has given way to nursery rhymes—Bones and Tambo are half forgotten, and though there is more clogging there is less music.

This evening, we are promised an improvement—a return feast of the olden time, and as Skiff & Gaylord are favorites and generally perform what they promise, we recommend their programme as especially entertaining, opening with the old-time vocal and instrumental concert with six end-men, and closing with a medley in which "oratory," a clog hornpipe, eccentric dancing and a farce are the prominent features. "Japanese Tommy," the late George Christy's protoge, is with the troupe, and is noted as a talented young comedian.

Laconics.

Friday next, Feb. 14th, is St. Valentine's Day, and Buzzell, Lowd, Foster and Adams show plentiful and varied stocks of the missives which the young people are wont to send each other, "unbeknownst," on that day. Flowers, cake, etc., are often substituted for or accompany the valentine, now-a-days.

Alonzo F. Craig, Esq., of this city, is the liberal republican candidate for Senator in this district.

Dr. Parsons will be absent from town until the 24th, when he may be found at the corner of State and Chestnut Sts.

Mate Hugh Kuhl has been detached from U. S. R. S. Sabine and ordered as executive officer of U. S. S. Mayflower.

Mr. George Vandenhoff of this city is very ill with inflammatory rheumatism at Troy, N. Y.

Mrs. James Junkins fell on the ice in front of Junkins' store on Market street, Wednesday afternoon, and broke a leg.

The annual Ball of the Wolfe Tone club is to come off this evening at Congress Hall.

One of the new sloops of war is to be built at this station.

The Methodist Episcopal society of South Newmarket will celebrate the anniversary of the dedication of their new church on Friday, by a performance of the cantata of "Esther," and a grand supper afterwards. A party will go up from this city.

NEWBURYPORT ENTERPRISE.—The city railroad which was built at Newburyport last year, costing over $100,000 and leased to the Eastern Railroad Company, proves to be of the greatest benefit to the city. All of the freight which heretofore was stopped at the Eastern Railroad station on Strong street is now switched off at the crossing just outside the city, thence round the lower section, across the wharves to the freight house on City wharf. It is about the busiest part of the place, and soon coasting vessels with their different cargoes for Haverhill, Lawrence and up-river towns will arrive, and instead of being taken up by water will be discharged from the vessels into the cars and carried to its destination by rail. It affords quick communication with the interior towns.

Readables.

The New York Herald wants Butler to "lead off in purging Congress."

Hon. John J. Ingalls, the new Senator from Kansas, is witty and talented.

There is not much prospect of a special session of the U. S. Senate.

The people of the valley of Virginia wish to be annexed to West Virginia, which would make the Blue Ridge the dividing line between the Virginias.

The York Observer hints that lynch law will punish future murderers and swindlers if the present lot on trial or under conviction go free.

Gaffney, the Buffalo murderer, has abandoned the insanity dodge, and will hang.

The Concord Patriot is enlarged one column to a page, and Mr. George G. Bailey is admitted to a partnership with his brother, Hon. Edwin C. Bailey.

The wreck of the English steamer Sir Francis was sold by auction on Wednesday. The cargo yet remaining in the hull consists of 326 boxes of tin plate, 450 tons of bar iron and 17 cases of steel rollers,—the whole invoiced at $9,700.

The New Hampshire Liberals conclude that they can best serve their masters, the Democracy, by nominating a separate ticket. Their Convention, Tuesday, was small, and was made up entirely of an antiquated lot of office-seekers.—Portland Press.

It is again said that Eugenie and her son will visit this country next summer. Louis Napoleon owned considerable real estate in New York at the time of his death.

The rivers in the northern part of Maine are frozen solid down to the bottom, and the people are blasting for fish.

A WIFE'S LOVE.—A man in Brunswick county, N. C., "skipped" to the West, some years ago, leaving a blooming wife to mourn him for dead, and to get married again. He returned unexpectedly the other day, and found her blooming in that other fellow's arms, and a cradle full of baby, sucking its fists in the delight of its young existence. He put in his prior claim and his wife pretended not to know him; but when he told her that he had $75,000, she knew him right away, and told the brevet husband he might caper away about his business. How touching are the evidences of female love.

—A sweet little boy, only eight years old—bless his little heart—walked into the scene of a teachers' examination at Oswego, last week, and bawled out, "Annie, your feller is down to the house!"

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the cunce of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cured for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," no doubt the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating, it increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "raking in pestilence" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong!
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, expelling all morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been charged by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
—OF—
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model. does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advantage over all others combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupulins, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure early eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Alleviator absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are respected to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, but knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just mark the success they have earned from an appreciative, or obstinate. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Inflamed Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleviator for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind from time immemorial, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

The Chronicle

JINGLES.

Who can tell what a baby thinks,
When it wakes from its forty winks,
And rubs its face into numerous kinks,
And stares at the light that comes in at the chinks
Of its rock-a by rest, and gapes and blinks?
Who can tell what a baby thinks?

Who has courage to hazard a guess,
As to what the baby may think of its dress,
Trimmed and ruffled to such excess?
Of what the baby may think of the mess
For the headache and toothache and stomach distress,
And for all its ailings, more or less.

What does it think when it wakes in the night
With all the pretty things out of sight,
And nobody stirring or "making a light?"
Does it think its conditions far from right,
And that big folks are not all polite,
And treat their visitors far from right,
And that darkness is meant for a personal slight?
Is that the reason it takes delight
In screaming with all its personal might,
And rousing the neighbors at dead of night?

What do you think that baby thinks,
Looking around like a milk-eyed lynx,
Watching the spoon that tinkles and clinks,
While pain is warming its catnip drinks
Over a candle that glimmers and blinks,
Humming and drumming out "Captain Jinks,"
That the children skate to now, at the rinks?
What do you think that the baby thinks?

Do you think that babies are thinkless things,
With no other light than instinct brings;
With brains as drowsy as butterflies' wings,
And heads as empty as a ball that swings
Over and under, and rings and sings,
When muscular motion is working the springs?
Do you say that babies are thinkless things?

Then why does the thing begin to grow?
And when does the mind begin to show?
And when does the baby begin to know
That this is true or that is so?
Say, when you find out, please let me know.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC AGENT.—One of the most imperative necessities for any one engaged in an agency or soliciting business is that he shall thoroughly believe in the article he proposes to sell, and have the ability to inoculate others with the belief. Few men, however, would be will to show their faith by their works as did a man of whom the San Francisco Bulletin tells this story:

About 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the attention of a gentleman passing along Montgomery street was suddenly arrested by some unusual preparations in progress in one of the third-story windows of the Occidental Hotel, at the corner of Bush and Montgomery streets. The gentleman paused and noted the manœuvres with some interest. His curiosity became contagious, and presently a large crowd collected about the original observer, completely obstructing the passage, everybody gazing eagerly upward at that third-story corner window. A reckless person stepped out upon the sill, and was seen carefully adjusting a cord to the cross-beam of the window, the size being about the same as used by the sheriff for official purposes on some occasions many years ago. An excited individual in the crowd offered a wager that the fellow would back out at the last moment. But still the author of the commotion continued coolly with his preparations, and every appearance promised an intrepid and artistic suicide, attended with extraordinary eclat. The rope having been secured, to the satisfaction of the man in the window, the ends were then dropped down to the walk, and immediately seized and hauled taut by two other persons, who appeared to be interested in the exhibition. The first person then put himself into a strap collar resembling a mule harness, and while the hair of the excited multitude below arose on end like a vast swamp of bulrushes, he boldly jumped out of the window and slid down the rope to the sidewalk as gracefully as a bale of rags could be lowered out of a warehouse. A reporter, after his excitement was somewhat allayed, prosecuted inquiries concerning the purport of the exhibition, and ascertained that it was intended to demonstrate the efficacy of a newly-patented fire-escape, designed for the security of people occupying third and fourth-story quarters, and in fact, the agent declared that no family should be without one, as it was impossible to foresee contingencies in which escapes would be desirable. The inventor of the concern continued to escape from the third-story window for about an hour, until the exhibition became monotonous, and the crowd gradually dispersed with a sense of disappointment in having witnessed his repeated safe descent to the sidewalk.

—John W. Young, Brigham's most enterprising son, has taken his pick out of his three wives, divorced himself from two, settled annuities upon them, and is soon going to Philadelphia with his last wife, a most accomplished lady, to live there and attend to his father's railroad business, in happiness with the young lady, who was born there, and who is now his sole wife.

—The following notice was recently found on the gate of a New York lunatic asylum: "Jurors supplied in any quantity on the shortest notice."

The Daily Chronicle,

Portsmouth, N. H.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1873.

"What's in a Name?"

We do not remember any more striking illustration of the truth of the saying "a liar is not believed when he tells the truth," than is to be gathered from the manner in which the New York Sun's statements concerning the Credit Mobilier were received, during the Presidential campaign. The editor of that paper, Charles A. Dana, not having been accepted at his own valuation by Gen. Grant on his accession to the Presidency, commenced and kept up a series of virulent attacks upon the President and his supporters—many of his attacks being distinguished for their ability and nearly all for unscrupulous and reckless mendacity. No charge was too gross or too infamous for Dana to make, and the exposure and refutation of one series of falsehoods only led to the fabrication of another. This conduct, with his forfeiture of $5,000 bail rather than stand a suit for malicious slander of a private individual, had reduced the reputation of the Sun for veracity until people doubted even what they knew to be true, when published as truth in that paper.

Dana of course went in for "purity and reform," and opposed Grant's re-election; and it was in the middle of the campaign that he came down with his Credit Mobilier exposure, to crush his hated antagonist. The Congressional investigations have shown that for once Dana's charges had a foundation of truth; and had his statements been made by a man of honor, in a respectable paper,—say by W. C. Bryant in the N. Y. Evening Post,—they would doubtless have had much weight in influencing the election. As it was, the Credit Mobilier battery was useless to the politicists. The only evidence offered in proof was the testimony of McComb, (in a suit brought by him confessedly because he had been cheated out of his share of the plunder, and not from any nonsensical notions of right and wrong) and the assertions of the Sun.

The answer of the republican press and orators was simply "We do not believe it. Supposing wrong has been done, this McComb acknowledges that he is only angry at the smallness of his share of the spoils; and the statements of such a man, and the attacks of an unscrupulous editorial slanderer, weigh nothing against the reputations of honest men." This was the general feeling, and we question if Dana's Credit Mobilier attacks really injured Grant a vote. He had shouted "wolf" so often when no wolf was near, that he was not believed at last when the wolf really came.

REMARKABLE CASE.—The Portland Argus tells of the case of one Clarence Abbott, a young man who was taken ill, it was supposed of lead poisoning. Last Saturday morning two medical men etherized the patient, and proceeded to make a surgical examination, which resulted in the discovery of a ball in his thigh. The bullet was encased in a bony substance of about the size of a goose's egg, the shell of which was one-fourth of an inch thick. It appears that Abbott was wounded in the thigh by a minie ball at the battle of the Wilderness in 1864, and that the bullet could not be found at the time. It had been tumbling about in a cavity of his thigh during eight years and had become worn and polished as smoothly as though it had been done on an emery wheel. Sufficient of the lead had permeated the surrounding and entered the system to produce lead poisoning which would have proved fatal in a short time but for the timely relief afforded.

PRICE OF A DRUNKEN HUSBAND.—A jury in Illinois have just decided that a drunken husband is better than no husband in the sum of $1200, provided the husband comes to his death through liquor. One John Lay, of Logan county, broke his neck while intoxicated, and his widow, under the law making the liquor seller responsible for the effects of his traffic, has recovered $1200 from the saloon keeper who sold him the fatal liquor. Under a similar law, a widow in Iowa not long since recovered from a liquor seller a sum sufficient to purchase a nice little homestead.

WOMEN DO VOTE WHEN PRIVILEGED.—The London Examiner, in refutation of the statement that women could not be induced to vote if they had the right, gives the result of 66 contested municipal elections. Out of every 1,000 women on the register, 516 went to the polls, as compared with 564 out of every 1,000 men on the register.

Mark Twain, referring to the Royal Humane Society, says: We are a nation of forty millions, and we have some little money. Cannot we have a society like that? Why, it is the next most noblest thing to sending moral tracts to Timbuctoo; and would cost less money, too. Not that I object to sending moral tracts to Timbuctoo; far from it; I write the most of them myself, and gain the larger part of my living in that way. I would grieve to see Timbuctoo redeemed, and have to lose its custom. But why not start a humane society besides? We have got one man worthy to conduct, and that is Mr. Bergh. If God did not make Bergh, he certainly did not make the insects that try to thwart his purposes, and do so succeed.

A Peoria man arose the morning after a storm and found his dog kennel buried under a drift as high as a church. He worked for half an hour to dig his dog out, and then went down town and told his clerks what he had done, adding: "A merciful man is merciful to his beast." But after he left home the neighbors saw his wife and daughter shoveling out paths through the snow and carrying in coal.

People in Texas are talking about a grand celebration three months hence, when they expect a railroad train, made up in New York, to go through to their State without break in the connection.

The commander of the Anti-Modoc campaign has been directed to suspend hostilities pending an investigation of the causes of the war and an effort to pacify Captain Jack. Why not invite the whole band to Washington? There is considerable small-pox there.—Chic. Circus.

A postmaster, in returning a subscriber's paper to the Eufala Times, writes: "This subscriber has fizzled; plared out; absquatulated; run away to Texas, and is owing some $300—'Bless God'—his favorite expression in church. P. M."

Brighter days are coming—just think of it. Blue birds, dandelions, caravans, scissor-grinders, artichokes, violets and hand-organs will soon sing, shine, show, sharpen, scent and shriek that spring has come.

The New York Commercial Advertiser says that the practice which has been much in vogue in New England during the late epidemic, of giving bridal presents of choice vaccine matter, has been wholly abandoned.

Russia doesn't mean to back out as much as was fancied. Her fleet in the Baltic is sailing around to the Mediterranean, ready for service, her official papers are talking angrily at England, and Bismark is fortifying his northern border.

It is pleasant to know that Nouredin Shah, of Persia, will be at the Vienna Exposition, but really he is extravagant to appropriate $10,000,000 for the trip.

Tammany formally denounces the Credit Mobilier business. One would think it would. It didn't have a hand in.

"All the boys are going to get a bounce" is what Sharkey, one of the murderers in the Tombs, remarked when Foster's sentence was pronounced.

The sentence of death has been passed upon Henry Fralich, who murdered Henry Schaffer at Syracuse last August. He is to be executed on the 28th of March.

California just now enjoys the rainy season, and has the epizootic at Gilroy, and a vigilance committee at Shingle Springs.

UNCLE ZEKE'S JOKE.—Some years ago there lived in one of our large cities an eccentric character generally known as Uncle Zeke, who never lost a chance of perpetrating a practical joke. Any place or occasion suited him, provided he could make a point. One fine Sunday he repaired to a fashionable church some time after the service had commenced, and as there was no seat vacant he took a prominent position in the center aisle, where he stood bolt upright, with his high stove-pipe hat clapped tightly on his head. Of course he attracted much attention, and very soon the sexton, a man for whom Uncle Zeke had an especial dislike, crept up to him and whispered that he must take off his hat. "That's agin my principles," said Uncle Zeke. "I can't help that," said the sexton impatiently, "you must take it off." "But I won't," replied Uncle Zeke. "Then I shall take it off for you," said the sexton, who was getting very nervous on account of the attention this whispered colloquy had occasioned. "All right," said Uncle Zeke, "you kin take it off. That ain't agin my principles." The sexton thereupon took hold of the rim of Uncle Zeke's hat, and dexterously lifted it off his head. But what was the respectable sexton's horror when about two quarts of hickory nuts rolled out of his hat, and went clattering and bounding over the church floor. And that was Uncle Zeke's joke on the sexton.

State News

The nineteenth annual levee of the Amoskeag Veterans will be given at Music Hall, Manchester, on Friday evening, 21st inst. Music will be furnished by Dignam's Orchestra, and a good time may be expected. The cards of invitation are handsomely printed, and came from the Mirror office.

James Parker had one of his feet so badly crushed by a piece of iron weighing 1100 pounds rolling upon it, at the Forge Shop in Nashua, Monday afternoon, that three of his toes had to be amputated.

Jasper Elliott, of Peterborough, who has supplied the villagers with milk for the past eight years, doing a business of $1,000 to $1200 a year, has lost but $6 in the whole time, which speaks well for his customers.

The South Newmarket doctor's bill in the small pox case we alluded to, was $410, not $510, as our types made it—large enough, in all conscience, without magnifying it. The total bills for a case of small pox in Brentwood were only $51, the doctor charging just $12.

Last week several children in the school of Piscataquog were found in a state of intoxication and were soon induced to confess that one of them had "borrowed" some money from his mother, with which he had bought a bottle of rum and treated his friends. On Saturday last the seller was fined $100 and costs.

Hon. E. H. Rollins of Concord, Secretary and Treasurer of the Union Pacific Railroad, testifies that, under the Ames contract alone, the lucky Mobiliers divided a snug little profit of at least $29,854,960 in stock and bonds, paying the sub-contractors, who actually built the road, $37,285,142.

A sad accident happened at Effingham Falls last Saturday morning. Mrs. Daniel Shaw fainted and fell on the fire and was badly burned before help arrived. Her face and hands were roasted to a crisp; and her recovery is doubtful.

David Allard, the missing man from Eaton, has been found all right in a town near Dover.

The steam mill belonging to M. H. Crosby, in Hebron, was burned, Tuesday night. Loss about $4000, probably covered by insurance.

EVANS.—P. W. Locke, Esq., and Hon. E. F. Pillsbury of Augusta, Maine, on a special permit from Governor Straw, visited the State Prison and had an interview with Evans, on the 11th. The interview, which took place in the presence of Warden Pillsbury, lasted about an hour and was very unsatisfactory. Evans seemed depressed and disinclined to talk about his crimes. He said nothing that led Mr. Pillsbury to believe that he had committed the murder in Maine; and in regard to the other murders attributed to him, he was reticent. He however made some remarks upon the Northwood murder, but claimed that there was another party connected with it, and that he received ten dollars for his assistance. The Patriot says many people are of the opinion that Evans is a very feeble old man. This is not so; for he is wonderfully muscular, especially in the arms, and can give a grasp like a vise. His feeble and tottering gait is a mere pretence; and those who know him say that, had he a chance to escape, he could lead a hunt at a pace which few could equal.

RETRIBUTION.—A writer in one of our exchanges thus refers to the changed relations between Hon. Noah Davis and Graham, the ruffianly lawyer of the ruffians of New York:—

Time's whirligig invariably brings around its revenges. A few years ago, when McFarland summoned to his assistance on the trial for murdering Richardson the oldest criminal lawyers in that city, District Attorney Garvin called in to his assistance Judge Noah Davis, recently removed here from the western part of the State. John Graham, who is as brutal as he is physically ugly, at once began to insult and annoy Mr. Davis, asserting that the prosecution had no right to retain him. Day after day he acted toward Judge Davis in the most outrageous manner, even going so far upon one occasion as to shake his fist under his very nose and apply the most obscene epithets to him. The latter, who is a very powerfully built man, could have stripped Graham's wig off his head had he been disposed to do so, and thrown him over the railing in a jiffy. Rather than have any trouble, however, with the ruffian, Judge Davis finally withdrew from the case entirely. To day he presides as judge of the Supreme Court in the trial of Tweed, and John Graham practices before him. You may be sure that the latter has to walk a crack now. One word of impudence now from him would cost him dear. Could the tables be more completely and satisfactorily turned?

The Newburyport Ghost.

The Springfield Republican prints the following extract from a letter written by Miss Lucy A. Perkins, teacher at the haunted schoolhouse in Newburyport, in answer to inquiries concerning an account of the affair published in a newspaper:—

"The account you send is true, with a few exceptions. When I first saw the boy, he was neatly attired in a brown suit of clothes, trimmed with braid and buttons of the same color. When I reached forward to grasp him, he seemed not like the boy, but vapory, or, as I can only describe it, like a thin cloud scudding across the room; still he seemed to have the boy form. Reports from some of the Boston papers say I fainted; such is not the case. I knew where I was and what I was about just as well as I know I am writing. One day I sent a boy out to hang up the brushes, etc. He was out about five minutes. After he had taken his seat, three raps came on the door of the room where the brushes were hung. He said, 'Miss Perkins, can I go out and see who's there?' I told him, 'Yes' and leave the school-room door open.' He did so, and when he opened the brush-room door (I sat where I could see all) every one of the brushes, both long and short-handled, came falling off the nails where they were hung; some struck him in the face, some on the shoulders, and the broom directly on the top of his head. The dust-pan, hanging on a nail at some distance above the brushes, came tumbling down to the floor with a vengeance. It then stood on its handle, then the bottom edge, and continued on so till it entered the school-room, and then it was placed as nicely against the partition as if I had raise it myself. Just as soon as I'd raise the ventilator, a black ball, like a cannon ball, would, begin to roll around the attic, and make such a noise I would be obliged to lower the ventilator. One day the room was as quiet as it could possibly be, and all at once some one in the attic called out, 'Dadie Pike?' Dadie thought I spoke, and said, 'What'm I?' I said to him, 'Can you say your lesson?' Since the boy affair took place, the attic has been fastened up. Locks and keys are of no use, however, for there is as much walking up stairs, and sometimes the hammering and nailing. Once in a while sounds as of some one walking will come down the attic way, go across the entry and open the outside door, and be gone perhaps ten minutes; after it is quiet again, the door will open, and he, she or it will go up stairs. I am not a spiritualist; never attended a sitting, in fact never had anything to do with a person of that belief, and never saw any manifestations. Why anything of the sort should take place where I am is more than I can account for."

SPAIN.—News is received of the formal acceptance of Amadeo's abdication by the Spanish Cortes and of the organization of a republican government under the resolution adopted on the 11th. Madrid is quiet and the revolution has progressed thus far peacefully. Amadeo has gone to Lisbon.

THE ALLEY MURDER TRIAL.—The jury after being out nearly four hours on Wednesday, returned a verdict of "not guilty." The general impression is that Alley murdered Ellis, cut him up and packed him in barrels; but the fact was not proven.

Dr. O. Fitzgerald will return to Portsmouth, Feb. 17th and 18th.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Having disposed of the Stock and good will of the Job Office connected with the DAILY CHRONICLE to Mr. Charles W. Gardner, we would express our thanks to our friends and former patrons, and solicit for Mr. Gardner a continuance of that patronage which has been so liberally bestowed upon us.

Business Notices.

The best articles are often found in small packages. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL, the best preparation for the cure of all throat diseases, is put up in 6 oz. bottles, selling for 50 cts each. It has no equal as a remedy.

SUBSTITUTES IN THE DENTAL RANKS Are not desirable; therefore, keep the natural teeth sound and pure with that wholesome vegetable elixir SOZODONT. Do this, and and they will last as long as the breath lasts, and the breath itself will never be tainted.

IN SPITE OF FLANNELS, Coughs and colds will make a lodgment in the system. But they are not tenants at will. You can dispossess them with Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar, in less time than it takes a sheriff to execute a writ. Crittenton's 7 6th Avenue. Sold by all Druggists.

WHAT TIME HAS TAUGHT US. It has taken two thousand years to teach the world that to sustain the body in its conflict with disease, not to help disease by weakening the body, is the true end of medicine. We have the lesson by heart at last, however. We know, for example, that fearing doses of aloes, salts, jalap, croton oil, calomel, colcynth, &c., are the best allies that a debilitating malady can have in its assaults on the human frame; and that a medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which strengthens all the bodily powers and rallies the sinking constitution, is the most powerful antagonist of the morbific principle, whatever it may be that lies at the root of the complaint. This knowledge has been a long time in reaching us, but it is invaluable. We can now control and cure dyspepsia, bilious disturbances, constipation, rheumatism, nervousness, and many other painful complaints once considered incurable, with this admirable corrective.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Discursive Discussions.

The believers in spiritualism have been holding afternoon and evening meetings on Sundays at the rooms of the Republican club in the Mendum block, Congress street. No lecturer being present on the 9th, a discussion was commenced, all present being invited to engage in it. A lively scene ensued. The four principal disputants were a spiritualist who believed the Bible to be "the word of God," a spiritualist who did not believe so, a Methodist lay preacher who believed spiritualism the work of demons, and an infidel who discarded the Bible as "the word of God" and also believes spiritualism a gigantic humbug. The latter gentleman had no hopes or fears of any future life beyond the present one, eternal destruction of body and soul being the sum total of his convictions. A correspondent says the discussion was conducted in a friendly spirit, and it was the unanimous wish that such meetings be frequently held in order to get a right idea of the doctrines believed by the different religious sects.

Body Found.

On Thursday morning, as Mr. Thaddeus Knight, of Eliot, was grappling for coal near the Concord Railroad wharf in this city, his grapple brought to the surface the body of Corporal Rogers, of the U. S. Marines, who had been missing for sixteen days. After securing the body Mr. Knight notified the City Marshal, and by direction of Coroner Rider the body was taken to the police station; but the City Physician finding no indications of violence, the Coroner deemed an inquest unnecessary, and the body was delivered to the Marine Corps for burial. The deceased had $52.19 in bank at the time of his death, and not $500 as previously reported. He was an old man, had been many years in the service, and it is said his worst fault was an occasional over-indulgence in liquor.

Laconics.

A case of small pox was discovered on the Portsmouth train, just after it left Manchester on the 11th, the subject being a member of the Canterbury troupe of minstrels. The Traveller correspondent, J. Horace Kent, occupied a seat by the side of the infected man, for some distance, when he put for the baggage car.

We are indebted to Lieut. F. D. Webster, U. S. M. C., attached to U. S. S. Congress, for a copy of the Swiss Times of Jan. 23d. Lieut. Webster is at Naples.

A marine was found on Bow Street, Thursday morning, insensible and nearly frozen to death. He was taken to the lockup and attended to, and will probably come out all right.

The new Senator Oglesby of Illinois has been invited to make a few Republican speeches in New Hampshire. We should be glad to hear him here.

The riggers have resumed work on U. S. S. Monongahela at the Navy Yard.

The Electoral Votes

For President and Vice President was counted before the House of Congress on the 12th. The votes of Arkansas and Louisiana were excluded for informalities. Three votes for Horace Greeley from Georgia were also thrown out on the ground that he was dead when they were given. Questions raised as to the votes of Texas and Missouri were overruled. In the former case, it was charged that vacancies had been filled by less than a majority of the electors; in the latter, that the State electors had voted for candidates for President and Vice President both living in the same State. There is a rule that in counting the electoral votes, those of no State shall be counted unless both Houses agree to it. In the case of Georgia, the Senate voted to count three Greeley votes, but the House voted not to—102 to 98. The House voted to count the Grant and Wilson Arkansas vote 103 to 27. The Senate opposed it. Both Houses voted not to count the vote of Louisiana. Of the 366 votes in the electoral college, seventeen were rejected, and Vice President Colfax announced that ULYSSES S. GRANT had 286 votes, Hendricks 42, Gratz Brown 18, Jenkins 2, Davis 1. For Vice President, HENRY WILSON had 286, Brown 47, Julian 5, Colquit 5, Palmer 3, Bramlette 3, Banks 1, Groesback 1, Machon 1. The Vice President declared Grant and Wilson elected President and Vice President for four years from the 4th of March next.

Sergeant Bates came home last week in the Atlantic of the White Star Line. A nation mourns his return.

EVANS.—The Portsmouth correspondent of the Boston Transcript says that whether Evans is guilty of the Bussey Woods murder or not, those who have known him from his youth are of opinion that he poisoned his own mother, though whether intentionally has not yet positively appeared. She was living in an almshouse in Rockingham County, and her son visited her, gave her some "medicine" and in a few days she died under singular, if not suspicious, circumstances.

Evans himself, like his whole family, was regarded in his youth as rather simple minded, and of low habits; but nothing very bad was ever known or feared of him until he grew to manhood. He has had three wives, two of whom are now living, though not residing with him for several years; and Mrs. Boody of Derry, with whom he has made his "home" of late years, and who testified in court that she called him "father," stated out of court that she was often in fear of him.

After his mother, his first victim appears to have been his little niece at Derry, whose fate is yet a mystery. Two children were left alone in a house for a short time, and when the mother returned, one was gone, and the other always insisted that 'Uncle Frank took her away.' This he stoutly denied, and the exact truth never was known; and of course a baby's evidence does not legally amount to much. Now, however, all these old suspicious circumstances come up again to confront him; and while it is not strange that people are perhaps too ready to believe anything bad of him, still it must be confessed that there is a damning amount of evidence against him. We have said that the whole family are regarded as rating rather low; and there is one fact tending to show this, that we have not seen stated—that the last victim of this insatiate monster, his own grand-niece, was an illegitimate child, and the man whom her mother afterwards married, and whose name the child took, was not her father.

HON. E. H. ROLLINS testifies that he never knew of any money of the company that was expended for political purposes. He furthermore said that he himself never received a dollar from the company which was not earned by hard labor, and that never to his knowledge had a dollar been expended by the company for political purposes since he became its treasurer.

Next Sunday is election day in Mexico for a Chief Justice.

TO CURE TOOTHACHE.—A well-known dentist, who has tried the remedy on some nervous people who have old roots of broken teeth, and are too timid to permit an attempt to remove them, makes the following public, for the benefit of all whom it may concern: To persons who have a hollow tooth, allowing the air to reach the nerve, I would advise that they get some splints of nutre and mix with alum; saturate a little cotton with it, and apply it to the cavity. If the pain extends upward to the eye, or takes the form of neuralgia, procure some horseradish leaves, take out the stems, wet them, and apply on the face over the pain, and I think you will get relief. If you have no radish, try beet leaves; they may answer the purpose.

A blast in the Boston and Maine extension at Portland smashed a hack and inflicted probably fatal injuries on a lady.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!
Relieve Your Lungs.
For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,
Pulmocine Cordial
Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth, of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared pears of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the prevention of the FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents rearing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all thus afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves, the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL
is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could procure, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial
Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.
Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is emolytic and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.
USE BUCHMAN'S
PULMOCINE CORDIAL.
The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested, and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up as from Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are so we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lupulins, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling, or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Heartburn, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Allevantor absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS. Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the accessing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distressing pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be described. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are no acid or potash compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relief is obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the severest instances of Ingrown and severed Nails, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleviator for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.
For sale by J. H. THACHER, WM. E. PRESTON, Portsmouth; JAMES O. TREFETHEN, Kittery; E. S. SAYFORD, Kittery Point; H. M. CURTIS, Newcastle, and dealers generally.

The Chronicle

From the Portsmouth Journal.

The Small Pox Parties.

NEW CASTLE, Feb. 1, 1873.

Mr. Editor:—In an article headed "Small Pox Parties at Hensel's Island," published in your columns Jan. 25, there are many interesting facts that deserve a place in the Rambles about to published.

Permit me, however, to correct one or two statements therein made. Near by my side sits my aged mother, one who has seen over three-score and ten years, the sixth child of Nathaniel and Keziah Amazeen, who were, according to the records, married March, 1790. While listening to the reading of the Journal article, she was deeply interested, especially in the story relating to the drowning of her father, which she states took place early in the month of April, 1824, while she was waiting on the shore to meet him on his return from the vessel which had just anchored. Hearing what was supposed to be the rattling of oars, she returned to inform her mother that father was coming. But alas, the long roll of the drum at the fort soon announced that something unusual had taken place. Then a body was brought to land, which proved to be Capt. Lear.

My mother, not willing to have any one deprived of honors earned at the Pest House, informs me that her grandfather, Nath'l Lear, with his wife Sarah, kept the Pest House for twenty years, Mr. Lear dying on the island. His widow then removed to the little house near the toll house of New Castle bridge, now occupied by the widow of the late Nath'l Lear of Portsmouth; after which she thinks the house was without a regular keeper for twenty years or more. Nath'l and Sarah Lear had five sons and two daughters, my grandfather Nathaniel being the oldest, then John the father of the late Nathaniel, and others. Samuel and William were not married. Daniel, the youngest, married Mary Yeaton of this town, and with a family of several children moved from Portsmouth to the Pest House about 1809, remained about five years, and then returned to Portsmouth. A short time afteward he went to sea and was lost.

Thus, Mr. Editor, my mother contradicts the story that Capt. Lear and his wife "Kisey" were ever keepers of the Pest House. The Capt. Lear referred to by the Journal writer, was married in 1790, and in that same year occupied one of those four little houses called by many the "four sisters," situated on what is commonly known as "the Cape," opposite Clark's Island, first in a Clark house, then in the one now owned by George V. Locke, whose wife was the youngest daughter of Capt. Lear. Here he lived without interruption until his death. The honor of "keeper" of the house belongs to my great grandfather and great uncle, Capt Nat and Kissy being only occasional visiters at that historic place. Another keeper by the name of Grouard was there for a while. Nineteen of the twenty years that Mr. L. kept the house it was occupied by infected persons—here people were taken who were actually suffering from the disease. It is to be regretted that no record has been kept of persons admitted, of deaths that have taken place, the names of keepers or persons in charge of the sick, together with events that must now be of great interest. Let some one gather, if possible, all the traditions of the past, and commence a record of the future, beginning with 1873. A desire that posterity may have the truth in history, and to give others a chance to compare notes and thus correct any error, has impelled me to come before the public in the character of a writer.

WM. A. MELOON.

—Mrs. N. J. Willis of Cambridgeport, Mass., will lecture at the hall known as the Republican Headquarters on Sunday afternoon and evening. Subject for the afternoon, "The comfort and consolation brought to the mourner by the belief in Spirit communion." Subject for the evening, "The close connection existing between the actions and conduct of mortals here in Earth life, and their conditions of happiness or unhappiness in Spirit life."

—However necessary it may be, one can but regret the rapid demolition of many of the beautiful wood lands surrounding this city. One of the most perceptible and barren spots caused by the felling of its stately pine growth is the first lot of land lying at the southern right-hand end of Sagamore Bridge, where the old hermit Leary lived, where many a camp fire has burned, many a picnic party sought refreshing shade and spread their feast. Surely the waters of Sagamore do not wash another such desolate looking spot.

—A large quantity of sand is being transported from Jaques hill at Newburyport to this city on the Eastern road for grading purposes. Preparations have commenced for the extension of the double track between Greenland and Ipswich.

—The near approach of the Lenten season causes a demand for eggs, which have for some time been scarce in this market bringing high prices.

Readables.

In the U. S. Senate on Thursday, Mr. Pratt of Indiana, from the committee on pensions, reported adversely to granting pensions to soldiers in the war of 1812, who served less than sixty days.

The bill for a commission of commerce was defeated by the national House on Thursday, 99 to 85. The democrats showed their opposition to the revival of commerce by voting solidly against the bill.

The naval appropriation bill was amended in the Senate on Thursday, on motion of Senator Cragin, by inserting an appropriation of $3,200,000 for building the eight new sloops. Senator Freilinghuysen's amendments restoring the appropriations for chief accountants and clerks to storekeepers, at a salary of $1500 each, at the Charlestown, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Washington yards, and appropriations for receivers and clerks to receivers at the other yards, which were stricken out on motion of Congressman Lynch in the House, were adopted.

A terrible accident occurred at Richmond, Va., Thursday, a trestle-work connected with an unfinished bridge giving way, and precipitating fifteen men into the river. Nine were rescued more or less injured, but the others lost their lives.

John Doris, charged with the murder of Thomas Donnellan at Jersey City, was convicted of the crime in the second degree, Wednesday.

Parlor Politics.

"Big oaks from little acorns grow."
"Pyes and land but fourteen cent."
"Not what we are but what we hope to be."
"Out of the mouths of babes and suckings."

These and various other similar texts should have hung on the outer wall of the Phenix Hotel at Concord, Tuesday, the 11th inst., for therein met in convention the Liberal Republicans of New Hampshire. They met in a parlor, nearly two score of them, and each particular one of them doubtless felt that his constituent whom he had left at home required of him that he should do his duty. Collectively they must have felt that Tuesday was big with fate for somebody. Their speeches were models of political oratory, their accusations the best the House afforded, and their appeal to the people is as earnest a one as ever emanated from a six year old boy who was making love to a four year old maiden. Taken all in all it was the neatest, most harmonious, conveniently managed and harmless convention on record.

Kent might get it pitented, and he ought to.

M. W. Tappan presided. J. A. Seaborn was Secretary, and Henry O. Kent was Master of Ceremonies.

The selection of these gentlemen was a little unfortunate, as it gave the whole convention the appearance of a hotel the proprietor of which had spent all his means on a sign and had nothing left to supply the house with.

Then Sam Mason of Bristol was invited to become candidate for Governor. (How Tappan must ache to vote for Sam for Governor.)

Wm. A. Heard, who is credited to Sandwich, was nominated for Railroad Commissioner, and the following Congressional ticket, which, as the foreigner said about a noted American quadruped, is "speckled enough to be handsome and chunky enough to be strong," was selected:

First District—Ellery A. Hibbard of Laconia.

Second District—Jacob Fletcher of Nashua.

Third District—Lemuel P. Cooper of Croydon.

Candidates for minor offices were found to some extent, and some pretty resolutions passed, and the convention dissolved to rally at the polls.—Mirror.

Gen. Fremont's Operations.

There are many persons who have been familiar with the railroad enterprise known as the "Transcontinental Railway," and who have known of General Fremont's negotiation of the bonds in Europe, who will not be surprised at the announcement that the matter will come before the French Courts in the shape of a prosecution of General Fremont. It must be admitted that the case will be of more interest than if it were brought in the Courts of New York, for the reason that the French law provides a more direct method for probing alleged frauds, and the French Courts have made it a rule to deal summarily with financial swindlers. If the charges against General Fremont shall be proved, and if this man shall place himself in the power of the French government by personal appearance, it is not improbable that his name will find a place in history alongside of Law and Mayes.

The alleged circumstances of the Memphis & El Paso, or "Transcontinental," Railroad scheme are as follows: The project was to build a railroad to San Diego, with a southern terminus. It never progressed any further than the drawings of the route, and the printing of the bonds. General Fremont proceeded to Europe to negotiate the bonds, and took up his residence in Paris. He speedily made a combination with the Imperial government, by which the bonds were allowed to be placed on the Paris Bourse. They were recognized as having the special sanction of the government. A newspaper was started with the express purpose of assisting in their negotiation. Newspapers were suppressed, or their circulation prohibited in France, whenever they denounced the scheme. Chaseret was ordered to leave the country because he had dared to attack it. Everything possible was done to give these bonds a standing, and the result was, that some seven or eight millions of them were sold to the people of France at prices which brought some five or six millions in money. It was represented that the United States government had guaranteed the payment of the securities, and that they were among the best stocks on the New York market.

If these representations were current in France at the time of the negotiation, serious blame will be attached to the United States Ministry of that date; for the American Ministry could scarcely have been ignorant of them, and must have known they were false and promulgated for cheating thepeople. Subsequently, Minister Washburn, in answer to inquiry, pronounced the bonds worthless, and denied the allegation of government connection with the scheme. But Mr. Washburn did not become Minister until after the negotiation of the bulk of the securities had been made, and his exposure of the fraud came too late to save the people. When the corporation was declared bankrupt, and put into the hands of a receiver, all the assets that could be found consisted of a quantity of iron and some useless locomotives, which are supposed to have been bought from M. Schroeder, a great manufacturer, and at that time President of the French Senate, at exorbitant prices. This of course was in the nature of a bribe. How much money was used for bribing purposes, or where it was distributed, is not known. It is certain, however, that the facilities which Fremont enjoyed were not obtained without a liberal distribution of money, and it is one of the duties of the French prosecution to discover where it went.

The conviction of John C. Fremont, whose name is of a higher degree in Europe as a leading American than it is in this country, of the negotiation of worthless securities, and of defrauding the people of France, will naturally have the effect to further destroy European confidence in all American bonds and securities that may be presented abroad. This is the most important and lamentable feature of the whole transaction, from a financial point of view. But there is also a political significance attached to the affair. No such negotiation of worthless securities would have been possible except for government interference with the private affairs of its citizens.

When the Napoleonic government reserved the right of dictating what securities should be admitted into the Boards of Trade of France, it opened the way for just such corruption on the part of its officials, and just such swindling of the people as are here described. French capitalists would never have been deceived by so flimsy a scheme if they had not been misled by their own government. They would have demanded the proofs of the alleged guarantees. It is a mania of the French people to subscribe to the national loans and public securities; but they never rush into projects that present themselves without government indorsement. General Fremont could never have negotiated a dollar's worth of his bonds in the British market. Nor could he have negotiated them in the French market without government interference. It is another illustration of a principle that the American people should keep prominently before them just at this time. If General Fremont is guilty of the charges that are made against him, it is probable that they will be definitely established in the French courts; and it is equally probable that the judgment of the courts will be sweepingly severe.—Chicago Tribune.

Credit Mobilier.

On Thursday, Mr. Ames sent to the committee a check obtained from the office of the sergeant-at-arms which entirely destroys the evidence given by Dillon, the bookkeeper, who was called to swear that his impression was that he paid the "S. C." check for $1200 to Oakes Ames. The check is one for $1000 given about the time of the "S. C." check, and Dillon swore he paid that also to Mr. Ames. The latter referred to his memorandum book and informed the committee that he paid that to Eldridge & Co. of Alexandria, by a check. Dillon replied that that could not be, as his book would show it, and insisted that he had paid it to Mr. Ames in person. Mr. Ames found the check and it proved to be payable to Eldridge & Co. and indorsed by them. Mr. Ames also examined the books of the clerk's office to see if Mr. Matthews drew his half salary for June, 1868, as he thought, to pay Mr. Colfax on the piano purchase. The books show that he drew his full salary for that month on the 28th, and there is no record of any half payment. The bookkeeper says, however, that while he recollects no such transaction as the half-payment to Mr. Matthews, it may have been made on a memorandum receipt and been destroyed at the end of the month when the whole of salary had been paid.

Gen. Butler appeared and alluded to a letter having been sent to this committee, purporting to have been written by John P. Randolph, Cedar street, New York. He did not believe there was such a person in existence. He believed that there was a studied and not very successful attempt to connect him with this matter in some form, but whenever the committee desired to consult him he would tell all he knew with great pleasure. He only wanted to show that every man who took a decided stand on public questions was assailed by some unknown scoundrel, backed by scoundrels, in anonymous communications.

Mr. Lebarnes, assistant sergeant-at-arms, was called at the request of General Butler, and circumstantially stated the result of his unsuccessful search for John P. Randolph in the city of New York. He, however, found a colored man in Brooklyn, formerly a slave in Virginia, who kept a kind of intelligence office, and who possessed a similar name, but who knew nothing about railroads; never had heard of the Credit Mobilier or of this investigation.

A recess was taken, after which Vice-President elect Wilson was called. He said he had no desire to add to or take from his testimony before the Poland committee. At the time this purchase was made with his wife's money, he would have done the same himself if he had the money. He bid not wish to cover himself behind the fact that the money belonged to his wife. Mr. Ames stood second to no man in Massachusetts, and the witness had the most unlimited confidence in him, and would have listened to his advice on any investment. Things have changed since, however. In his testimony the other day he made one error in regard to the interest due Mr. Ames, which he forgot to mention then. It was an item of $66 due Mr. Ames, and paid him when the account was settled. The amount paid for the stock was $2000, and the dividends received $2748. The amount returned to Mr. Ames, when the account was settled, was $2814, the $66 being the interest due Mr. Ames. The witness was just as responsible for advising his wife to put her money in it as if it had been his own. When the investment was made he knew nothing against it. When he learned something was wrong he notified Mr. Ames that he would have nothing to do with it, and had the matter settled to a sacrifice to himself, or rather to his wife. The witness would never hold property which he had to legislate upon, and refused to take stock in a national bank in his own town for that very reason. If there was any guilt about buying the stock the witness desired to bear it himself and not say it was his wife's. He advised her to do it, and the blame, if any, was his.

STRANGE, IF TRUE.—The Missouri Republican is responsible for the following remarkable story:

It is a fact that can be substantiated by thousands of living witnesses, that the details of the battle of Mill Springs reached Paris, Kentucky, on the 12th of January, 1862. The rumor was that the battle had occurred two days before—that General Zollicoffer had been attacked at Fishing Creek or Mill Springs, that he had been killed and his body stripped, mutilated and thrown into a swamp, and his army completely routed. Also, that Major Bailie Peyton had fallen; that a Mississippi regiment, supported by a regiment from Tennessee, had behaved handsomely, while the remainder of the army had for some cause become panic-stricken in the fight, and fled from the field completely demoralized. The whole Blue Grass region of Kentucky became excited over this news; the particulars as related above were on every tongue, and so they spread all over Eastern Kentucky and Tennessee and into West Virginia. Let it be remembered that this rumor started in Paris, Ky., on the 12th of January, 1862. Citizens of Paris wrote to their friends in other states, giving these details, and these letters are still in existence to speak for themselves, bearing the above date and two or three days thereafter.

In those days we used to hear of messages by the grape-vine telegraph, and passengers by the underground railroad. If this report of the battle of Mill Springs and the death of Zollicoffer came by either of these lines, it is more extraordinary than any feat ever performed by lightning or steam. The wonders of this performance are yet discussed by many who were cognizant of the occurrence, and the fact that the particulars of this battle, so received, got into the newspapers and were treated as current news.

Captain C. E. Merrill of the Confederate army has given his recollection of it as a singular fact of the war. Capt. Merrill is the son of a Mississippi planter, and commanded a Mississippi regiment in the war. He passed through Lexington, Kentucky, on the night of January 12, 1862, hastening to rejoin his command in Virginia, by way of Cumberland Gap. Before daylight the next morning he took shelter in a house, preferring to prosecute his disloyal journey between suns. He states that he spent the 13th of January in company with gentlemen from Clarke, Fayette and Bourbon counties and they were full of the news of the battle above alluded to. They did not know exactly how the news came, but they had its history to the minutest details.

We give a paragraph or two of Capt. Merrill's account.

Thus rumor heralded on the 13th of January, and I continued to meet it all along my route through the mountains of East Kentucky until I reached Abingdon, Va., which point I made late on the night of the 19th. On that night I solicited sleep rather than companionship, and retired to my bedroom at the hotel, well content to have at last reached the civilization of Dixie in safety.

What was my surprise, however, on awakening next morning, to hear that on the day before (the 19th) General Zollicoffer's army had been beaten, himself killed, &c., with all the incidents just as I had heard a week before in Central Kentucky. 'What!' I exclaimed, 'has there been another battle? And has General Z. been killed a second time?'"

The battle in which Zollicoffer was killed really occurred on the 19th of January, 1862, seven days after the rumor above related was current in Paris, Ky. The people who had been discussing it for a week were startled at the remarkable coincidence. The details given by the rumor and the actual events of the battle corresponded so exactly to the minutest particulars, it has not ceased to be a wonder to this day.

The realization of the intelligence was so astounding that efforts were made to trace the rumor back to its source. It was only ascertained that some stranger accosted a citizen of Paris, called him by name, and related the battle of Mill Springs on the 12th of January which did not take place till the 19th following."

WHAT TIME HAS TAUGHT US. It has taken two thousand years to teach the world that to sustain the body in its conflict with disease, not to help disease by weakening the body, is the true end of medicine. We have the lesson by heart at last, however. We know, for example, that tearing doses of aloes, salts, jalap, croton oil, calomel, colocynth, &c., are the best allies that a debilitating malady can have in its assaults on the human frame; and that a medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which strengthens all the bodily powers and rallies the sinking constitution, is the most powerful antagonist of the morbid principle, whatever it may be that lies at the root of the complaint. This knowledge has been a long time in reaching us, but it is invaluable. We can now control and cure dyspepsia, bilious disturbances, constipation, rheumatism, nervousness, and many other painful complaints once considered incurable, with this admirable corrective.

Franklin B. Evans, who has been convicted and sentenced to death, for the murder of his grand neice, and who is supposed to have committed several similar murders and outrages, lived and worked in this city a number of years ago. He was in the employ of Mr. Harris Pearson, and worked for some time in his bakery. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Libby, his foreman, remember Evans well. He made great pretentions to piety, as he always seems to have done, but had rather a wild and suspicious air. A letter came into their hands addressed to Evans, and purporting to come from his wife in New Hampshire, advising him to keep shady, as there was much inquiry at the time for the murderer of Mr. Parker, treasurer and collector of the city of Manchester. Evans had gone at the time, leaving behind him a trunk containing a few letters, but nothing of value.—Newburyport Herald.

THE MORMON QUESTION has assumed a new phase. The unmarried women are the party now attacking polygamy. A league has been formed among the most cultured of the unmarried girls in Utah, which binds its members with a solemn pledge never to marry any man who already has a wife, or to unite themselves in wedlock with any unmarried man until first obtaining from him a binding obligation never to marry another woman so long as she to whom he is first married shall remain his lawful wife. The elders and bishops of the chosen people are greatly alarmed at the course taken by these brave young women; but it is doubtful if the sanctimonious old wretches will be able to coerce these fair reprobates, as they did their mothers some time since, in compelling them to sign a petition to Congress asking that the dear institution should be let alone.

ADVENTURES OF A NERVOUS MAN. A nervous resident of Balmforth avenue loaded up a half bushel basket with empty cans and bottles, recently, and cautiously wended his way to the White street bridge where he designed disposing of the truck. It was midnight, an hour he had purposely waited for in order to be secure from observation. On reaching the bridge he took out a big can, and nervously dropped it over the rail, trembingly awaiting the report as it struck the ice. It didn't strike the ice, however; it struck a dog that was there enjoying a late lunch, and the animal being taken completely by surprise, emitted a sudden and astonishingly sharp yelp, and followed it by a score of others, at the same time scrambling up the bank toward the street. Frightened out of his wits the miserable wretch on the bridge picked up his basket and then his heels, and started flying for home, and at the same time neighboring dogs took up the bark, and joined in the chase, howling and yelping and snapping and snarling at an awful rate. At every stride a new dog appeared with a new voice, and a party of men came out of a saloon and joined in with the cry of "Stop Thief," and followed after the bare headed white-faced victim who went tearing up the avenue at a frightful pace, the cans and bottles bounding out on the street, and confusing and crazing the dogs to a more and more exalted degree. He reached home whole in body, and burst into the house like a whirlwind, minus his basket, and minus one tail to his coat, and his eyes sticking out like P. T. Barnum's stomach. He extinguished all the light, and got to bed as speedily as possible, but it was nearly daylight before the last dog left the premises.—Danbury News.

A programme will be given, consisting of charades, recitations, etc., with refreshments, and a fine time may be anticipated for a small admission fee.

—Celia Thaxter, daughter of the late Hon. T. B. Laighton, has collected and will soon publish in book form her magazine articles which have from time to time appeared in the Atlantic, and other periodicals. Many additions will be made to the volume, the whole bearing the title of "Among the Isles of Shoals." The many admirers of the talented author who would "Suffer a sea-change will be glad to welcome this promised book.

Thurlow Weed's "Recollections of Horace Greeley" will be published in the March number of the Galaxy. The peculiar and very intimate relations which these two great politicians held toward each other, will invest with an unusual charm all that Mr. Weed, the only surviving partner of the old political firm of Seward, Weed and Greeley, has to say about the junior partner. The article will contain several letters of Mr. Greeley's never before published. General Custer's recollections of "My Life on the Plains, will be continued, also Mrs. Edwards' and DeForest's serials; and a new story by Turgenef, will appear. The March "Galaxy" will be a number of unusual interest.

The publishers of Scribner's Monthly have been compelled to print new editions of every number of the magazine containing Dr. Holland's serial story, "Arthur Bonnicastle," which was commenced in November. Saxe Holm, who has helped to give Scribner's Monthly its enviable reputation for short stories, has just written what is said to be the best of the series. It is entitled "The Elder's wife, a Sequel to Draxy Miller's Dowry," and will be commenced in the April number of the Magazine. There will be a story in an early number by Norman Holm. A curious article on the son of the first Napoleon, will appear in March. "Christ's Miracles Scientifically Considered," is the title of a remarkable article to appear in the forthcoming number. Fannie E. Hodgson, the author of Surly Tim's Trouble, and One day at Arle, will have a story in Scribner's for March, entitled "The Woman who Saved Me."

Cruelty to Animals.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened :—

SECTION 1. Whoever overdrives, overloads, drives when overloaded, overworks, tortures, torments, deprives of necessary sustenance, cruelly beats, mutilates or cruelly kills, or causes or procures to be so overdriven, overloaded, driven when overloaded, overworked, tortured, tormented, deprived of necessary sustenance, cruelly beaten, mutilated or cruelly killed, any animal, and whoever having the charge and custody of any animal, either as owner or otherwise, inflicts unnecessary cruelty upon the same, or unnecessarily fails to provide the same with proper food, drink, shelter or protection from the weather, shall for every such offence be punished by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

SECT. 2. Every owner, possessor or person having the charge or custody of any animal, who cruelly drives or works the same when unfit for labor, or cruelly abandons the same, or who carries the same, or causes the same to be carried in or upon any vehicle or otherwise, in an unnecessarily cruel or inhuman manner, or knowingly and wilfully authorizes or permits the same to be subjected to unnecessary torture, suffering or cruelty of any kind, shall be punished for every such offence in the manner provided in section one.

SECT. 3. No railroad company, in the carrying or transportation of animals, shall permit the same to be confined in cars for a longer period than twenty-eight consecutive hours, without unloading the same for rest, water and feeding, for a period of at least five consecutive hours, unless prevented from so unloading by storm or other accidental causes. In estimating such confinement, the time during which the animals have been confined without such rest on connecting roads from which they are received, shall be included; it being the intent of this act to prohibit the transportation of animals for a longer period of twenty-eight hours, except upon contingencies hereinbefore stated. Animals so unloaded shall be properly fed, watered and sheltered during such rest by the owner or person having the custody thereof, or, in case of his default in so doing, then by the railroad company transporting the same, at the expense of said owner or person so default; and such company shall in such case have a lien upon such animals for food, care and custody furnished, and shall not be liable for any detention of such animals authorized by this act. Any company, owner or custodian of such animals, who shall fail to comply with the provisions of this section, shall for each and every such offence forfeit and be liable and pay a penalty of not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; provided, however, that when animals shall be carried in cars in which they can and do have proper food, water, space and opportunity for rest, the foregoing provisions in regard to their being unloaded shall not apply.

SECT. 4. Any person found violating the laws in relation to cruelty to animals, may be arrested and held without warrant in the same manner as in case of persons found breaking the peace; and the persons making an arrest with or without warrant shall use reasonable diligence to give notice thereof to the owner of animals found in the charge or custody of the person arrested, and shall provide care and custody for such animals until the owner thereof shall take charge of the same; provided, the owner shall take charge of the same within sixty days from the date of said notice. And the person making such arrest shall have a lien on said animals for the expense of such care and provision.

SECT. 5. When complaint is made on oath or affirmation to any magistrate authorized to issue warrants in criminal cases, that the complainant believes, and has reasonable cause to believe, that the laws in relation to cruelty to animals have been or are being violated in any particular building or place, such magistrate, if satisfied there is reasonable cause for such belief, shall issue a search warrant authorizing any sheriff, deputy sheriff, constable or police officer to search such building or place; but no such search shall be made after sunset, unless specially authorized by the magistrate, upon satisfactory cause shown.

SECT. 6. In this act the word "animal" or "animals" shall be held to include all brute creatures, and the words "owner," "person" and "whoever," shall be held to include corporations as well as individuals; and the knowledge and acts of agents and persons employed by corporations in regard to animals transported, owned or employed by, or in the custody of, such corporations, shall be held to be the acts and knowledge of such corporations.

SECT. 7. It shall be the duty of all sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, constables and police officers to prosecute all violations of this act which shall come to their notice or knowledge.

SECT. 8. This act shall take effect on its passage. [Approved July 1, 1870.]

"RAMBLES ABOUT PORTSMOUTH."—All who wish for republication of the first series of this work are requested to send us at once their names and the number of copies they wish. There is a load call for the work from quite a number of sources; but we do not wish to go to the expense of publication unless four hundred books are subscribed for in advance. Address Lewis W. Brewster, Portsmouth, N. H.

—One of our exchanges says unadvisedly, Portsmouth proposes a novel method of forming a public library, by inducing every one of the city who shall visit it on the 4th of July next to "search into town with a book under his arm."

As one might be danger of books of the same name getting duplicated, would it not be better for each Son to turn into the hands of the Treasurer of the Jones fund, the cash value of the book or books? By this means the project of a free public library might be inaugurated on a substantial basis. It might be advisable for every son and daughter to carry away a book under their arms,—the "Rambles about Portsmouth." Send in the subscriptions for the republication of the First Series at once.

—A request has been forwarded to the Chief Signal officer at Washington, to make Dover Point a weather signal station.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible disease engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or Inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the choice of PREVENTION. Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, lies at the door of all this afflicted. BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past.

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultimate thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs,
Croup,
Diphtheria,
Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in pastures" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified, in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

VEGETINE
The Great Blood Purifier.
A valuable Indian compound, for restoring the health, and for the permanent cure of all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, such as Scrofula, Scrofulous Humors, Cancers, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Canker, Salt Rheum, Pimples and Humors on the Face, Ulcers, Coughs, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Pains in the Side, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Costiveness, Dizziness, Pilles, Headache, Nervousness, Faintness at the Stomach, Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Female Weakness, and General Debility.
This preparation is scientifically and chemically combined, and so strongly concentrated from roots, herbs and barks, that its good effects are realized immediately after commencing to take it. There is no disease of the human system for which the VEGETINE cannot be used with PERFECT SAFETY, as it does not contain any metallic compound. For eradicating the system of all impurities of the blood, it has no equal. It has never failed to effect a cure, giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease. Its wonderful effects upon these complaints are surprising to all. Many have been cured by the VEGETINE that have tried many other remedies. It can well be called

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS,
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, so easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhoea, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINE
STILL LEADS THE MARKET.
The Success of the Company is far beyond that of any other similar concern; the Daily Manufacture
— OF —
400 OF THE SINGERS
Failing to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some new loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or prices—and many of these are so we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
SINGER
seems to unite the good qualities of all, and is never found wanting.
THE SINGER
IS THE
OLDEST
SEWING MACHINE
IN THE MARKET,
All others being copied from its first model. does two-thirds the sewing done in this country and preserves its advants as over all others combined.
It is readily kept clean, and has THE BEST TENSION EVER INVENTED; it is higher speeded and requires but little power to run; it works equally well upon the finest and heaviest goods; it does all the varieties of work known to the art.

BRIGGS' ALLEVANTOR is composed of Ammonia, Chloroform, Spirits of Camphor, Tincture of Lagulias, Oil of Juniper, and Alcohol. This compound is unequalled in the annals of medicine for the cure of Nervous or Sick Headache, Neuralgia, Trembling or Twitching of the Nerves, and all Nervous Diseases. It will counteract all poisons, banish pimples, cure scaly eruptions, itching, humors, &c.; it equalizes the circulation, invigorates the system, increases the action of the heart, without exciting the brain, cures Hot Flashes, Palpitation and Fluttering of the Heart, Dyspepsia, &c. Briggs' Alleviator absolutely possesses more curative properties than any other preparation. Physicians, chemists, and others are requested to examine and test the remedy, and $1000 will be paid if found different from representation.
COUGHS, Much has been said and written, and many remedies have been offered for the relief and cure of throat and lung diseases; but nothing has been so eminently successful, or obtained such a wide celebrity, as Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer.
CORNS! The excruciating pain produced by Corns, the unceasing twinging from Bunions, the piercing, distracting pain from Ingrowing Nails, cannot be deserted. Thousands suffer, not knowing there is a cure. Briggs' Corn and Bunion Remedies are so safe, so much compounds, but are reliable, soothing, and effectual, and just merit the success they have earned from an appreciative public. The Curative is a healing ointment; immediate relefts obtained by its application, and it will positively cure the worst cases of Festered Corns, Inflamed and Ulcerated Bunions, the worst instep, the largest and severest Blisters, the most extensive Callosities on the soles or heels of the feet, unequalled in the cure of Chilblains or Frosted Feet. The Alleviator for ordinary corns and preventing their formation is absolutely unexcelled by anything ever known.
PILES have been a terror to mankind for centuries, and almost every attempt to cure them has been baffled. By unceasing study and experimenting, Dr. Briggs has discovered an absolutely cure for internal, bleeding, external, and itching piles. Briggs' Pile Remedies are mild, safe and sure.

JOSIE MANSFIELD.—The career of the notorious woman whose name appears at the head of this article, is familiar to all newspaper readers. Two years ago, living in luxurious ease in New York city, Josie Mansfield, by her devilish arts, so far fascinated two young men as to turn the friendship that had existed between them into a deadly hate. One of these men, James Fisk, sent to an untimely grave by the hand of an assassin, lies in his quiet grave in the Green Mountain State; the other, who committed this crime, Edward Stokes, is now the inmate of a felon's cell, condemned to death for the murder of his friend. Thus two young men go—one to an untimely grave, the other to the felon's doom, through the wiles of this woman; and soon after the drama of death in New York she disappeared from public view.

Her house (elegant furniture were sold and we next hear of her traveling with a variety troupe, with which she visited Pittsburgh last summer. This was coming down with a vengeance; so she goes to Europe, where the ways of sin are swallowed up by the fall of the banking house of Bowles Bros., in Paris, thus reducing Josie Mansfield to the position of a beggar. That was the last heard of this notorious woman until this morning.

Now for the strange sequel to this story, showing how retributive justice has overtaken this wretched and degraded woman. About one o'clock this morning an officer, patrolling his beat near the corner of High and Wyde streets, observed a richly-dressed and elegant-looking woman staggering along in a state of beastly intoxication. The woman was taken in charge, and even the officer accustomed to most obscene and indecent language, was horrified at the tirade of filthy epithets and horrible blasphemy in which his prisoner indulged. The woman was taken before Lieutenant Palmer to register her name, and he, from seeing her photograph often, recognized the blotted yet handsome woman before him, and exclaimed, "Heavens! Josie Mansfield!" "Aye Josie Mansfield," retorted the woman; "lock me up, you——!" The abandoned wretch was locked in a cell, and, the fact of her presence becoming known, a large crowd gathered at the morning hearing. Mayor Blackmore, after hearing the charge, fined her four dollars and costs, and in default sent her to jail for forty-eight hours. She had lost her money, and Josie Mansfield is now in Allegheny county jail, a common drunkard. This is a case where retributive justice has been swift to follow evil-doing, and there will be but few who read this article who will have a word of sympathy for the notorious Josie Mansfield.—Pitts. (Pa.) Leader.

DRAUGHTSMEN.—The Providence Press in an article urging that in this country more persons should be taught mechanical and industrial drawing, says:—

"The men who originate designs for the calico printers, those who make patterns for the decorations of china and porcelain, those who sketch for silver workers, and, in a word, the practical designers in all departments of art throughout the land, are largely of European education. Every year the demand for this kind of talent increases, and as yet our schools are doing comparatively little to supply it. In mechanical and industrial drawing there is a little done. Something is done at West Point, something at the Polytechnical schools in Boston and Worcester, something at a few other points in the country. But this little is too restricted in its range, and too limited in the number of pupils to be of much avail. The fact is, that the drift of industrial pursuits is such as all the time to call for more of this kind of skill. There is not a carpenter, a cabinet maker, a machinist, who could not improve his position and his productions if he knew how to handle his pencil well. Quick and effective drawing in the practical arts is becoming what writing is to commerce. Many a man can tell you with his pencil what he could not say in words. With a few lines he can correct a design or give a workman directions."

LEMONS FOR FEVER.—Says that walking cyclopedia of health knowledge, Dr. Hall: When persons are feverish and thirsty beyond what is natural, indicated in some cases by a metallic taste in the mouth, especially after drinking water, or by a whitish appearance of the greater part of the surface of the tongue, one of the best "coolers," internal or external, is to take a lemon, cut off the top, sprinkle over it some loaf sugar, working it downward into the lemon with a spoon, and then suck it slowly, squeezing the lemon and adding more sugar as the acidity increases from being brought up from a lower point. Invalids with feverishness may take two or three lemons a day in this manner with the most marked benefit manifested by a sense of coolness, comfort and invigoration. A lemon or two thus taken at "tea time," as an entire substitute for the ordinary "supper" of summer, would give many a comfortable night's sleep, and an awakening after rest and invigoration, with an appetite for breakfast, to which they are strangers who will have their cup of tea for supper or "relish" and "cake" and their berries or peaches and cream.

The Jury System.

The governor of Florida is said to openly denounce the jury system as being a farce; and many of the leading newspapers of the country, while not going so far as to denounce the whole system and demand its entire abolition, are constantly pointing out the grave defects which are so frequently making themselves seen in important trials. Trial by jury works as well in this State, probably, as in any part of the Union. New Hampshire juries are generally composed largely of hard-fisted and hard-headed farmers, who cannot see that a thief is made any the less a thief by being called a kleptomaniac, or that brutal ferocity in a murderer should be considered cause for acquittal; yet verdicts "against law and evidence" are not wholly unknown, even here. But did the jury system in other states develope no greater abuses than in this State, the antiquated, cumbrous, inefficient machinery would probably be found little fault with; such, however, is not the case, for trial by jury, as conducted in some States, should be entitled "A plan for securing perfect immunity for criminals;" and Germany and Scotland have tinkered away upon their jury laws until there is a wide difference between what they are now and what they were a half-century ago, and some of the worst faults of the system have been got rid of. England, popularly supposed to be the birthplace of the jury system, still sticks to the unanimous verdict of "twelve men in a box" as the greatest "bulwark of British liberty."

The Scotch system differs from ours in that fifteen persons form a jury for the trial of criminal cases; the verdict of a majority suffices; and the verdict may be "guilty" or "not guilty," when the evidence is conclusive, or "not proven," in cases where the jury are morally sure the accused is guilty, yet do not feel satisfied that guilt has been legally proved. It will be readily seen that "disagreement" is not likely to be of frequent occurrence among Scotch juries. In civil suits, the jury consists of twelve persons, and nine jurors are competent to return a verdict. In Germany, a two-thirds vote, we believe, is required to convict an accused criminal.

Some people reverence trial by jury on account of its antiquity; we don't; we think it altogether too antique for everyday use in modern times,—old enough and detective enough to be laid away; but if it is still to be kept up we think some useful hints might be taken from the Scotch and German laws, by which ours might be modified until the jury system could hardly be called a nuisance at all. Objection has been made to the Scotch verdict, "not proven," that it leaves a stigma upon the accused. So it does, undoubtedly; it says, virtually, "we, the jurors, believe this person guilty of the crime he is charged with; but the government has failed to prove it." On the other side, a verdict of "not guilty," when rendered by a Scotch jury, means not guilty; so that in cases where the evidence justifies that verdict, the accused leaves court with a clean reputation, so far as that case is concerned. With us, a verdict of "not guilty" does not signify that the innocence of the accused is established, but only that guilt has failed to be. The finding of the jury in the case of Alley, charged with the murder of Mr. Ellis at Boston, has cleared the accused in the eye of the law; but how about public opinion? How many of the thousands who read the evidence as it was printed in the Boston papers from day to day, are of the opinion that the jurors in the case were really satisfied the accused was innocent? Had it been optional with them to render a verdict of "not proven" or "not guilty," the latter finding would have exonerated Alley from suspicion; as it is, he is cleared from the law, and that is all.

Persons who endorse a saying we have frequently heard, "Better that a score of guilty persons go free than that one innocent one be punished," may be expected to admire the working of the jury system; but our opinion of that saying is, that while it may sound very noble and magnanimous, it is in reality one grand humbug. The punishment of an innocent man is a great wrong, undoubtedly, and to be carefully guarded against; but it is a wrong to but one individual or a small circle, at most, while the releasing of a criminal is a wrong against society in general.

For the individual wronged by unmerited punishment a certain amount of reparation can be (we do not say it often or ever is) made; but the injury done by the lax administration of the laws, in the encouragement such laxity gives to those who prey upon society, is widespread and irreparable. And the present jury system, which in its practical working seems to be little better than a scheme for protecting criminals from punishment under a pretence of protecting the innocent from injustice, is bad enough to often nullify the effect of good laws and upright magistrates, where the latter exist.

Stokes.

Stokes appears to have marvellous faith that he will escape the gallows. He was quite as much surprised at the decision of Judge Boardman, denying him a new trial, as at the verdict of the jury against him; and, though it is represented that for a while after the communication was made to him he was painfully dejected and wildly agitated, he is now building his hopes high on Judge Davis' decision, which is daily expected, or of some other judge, expressing himself as confident that some one must surely interfere with the execution of what he considers a cruel and unjust sentence. His counsel say that they will carry his case before every judge that the law allows, and profess to feel sure of saving him.

A Saturday evening dispatch says Judge Davis has granted a stay of proceedings in Stokes' case.

Readables.

The prospects for an entirely new through rail route of travel from Boston across the State of Maine, are said to be good. A meeting of the corporators of the connecting link of road between Portland and Bath was held on Wednesday, at which Mr. Charles Levi Woodbury was elected President. This ensures the building of the road by the friends of the Eastern Railroad.

John Gaffney was hanged at Buffalo on Friday. Gaffney said on the gallows that when he killed Fahey he was mad with drink, and did not know what he was about.

An Iowa doctor last week thoughtlessly lanced a pimple on a patient's nose with his vaccinating lancet. It took beautifully, but the patient says that both for appearance and comfort he would almost as liet have small-pox.

A pious convict in the State prison at Auburn has literally followed the injunction of the Bible by plucking out one of his eyes because it offended him.

Senator Patterson made a statement before the Senate committee on Friday, acknowledging that Mr. Ames' statements were correct. He says he deposited $3000 with Ames to invest in 1867, and $4000 in 1869 to invest in Union Pacific. The Senator calls it all a "comedy of errors" because his "recollection" did not agree with Mr. Ames!

THE PRICE OF TYPE.—Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. announce that they have at their warehouse in New York an assortment of type from one of the most celebrated foundries in the world, that of Figgins, London, England, which they will sell at 20 per cent. discount from the American scale, when ordered in fonts of 100 pounds and upwards. They also offer to import large fonts on special orders at a greater discount from the American scale, and profess to be able to fill the largest order in eight weeks from date of its receipt in New York. They supply sorts in large or small quantities from their stock on hand in New York at the American scale rate. They assert that if the present duty on type shall be removed, the price of the article, both of home and foreign manufacture, will immediately fall 40 per cent. below the present scale. Messrs. Geo. P. Rowell & Co. are known as conducting the largest advertising business ever secured by one house, and are also extensive dealers in printing material. They are compelled to import foreign goods because American founders, governed by a close corporation or ring, keep the price vastly too high, and at the same time make it an exception to every other species of merchandise by recognizing no wholesale price; the same amount per pound being charged to the purchaser of five thousand pounds as would be paid by him who wants but fifty.

A SENATOR WHO WILL NOT NEED TO BE INVESTIGATED.—While the recent election of several United States Senators turns out to have been very expensive as well disreputable, the people of New Hampshire can congratulate themselves that the election of Senator Wadleigh, who will take his seat in Congress on the 4th of March, only involved the expenditure of one dollar, the amount paid for printing his ballots. Senator Wadleigh's election will not need to be investigated.—Nashua Telegraph.

AMERICAN IRON.—The bill introduced by Mr. Cragin in the Senate, last week, in reference to the building of iron ships, has created considerable comment on the part of the press, and, naturally enough, recurrence has been made to the oft-discussed subject of American iron production. For the past two years the growth of the iron trade in this country has been unprecedented, the production of both the manufacture and the crude article largely exceeding that of any former year, and yet the demand is not supplied, nor hardly a beginning made in the production of this vast which promises in the future to be one of the strongest bases of our national prosperity.

For many years the consumptive demand for iron has taxed the productive capacity of the entire working mines of the world, but now that two-thirds of the miners and iron-workers of Europe are on a strike, with the probability of a long suspension of the mines from working, the logical consequence is an excess of demand with a constantly decreasing supply. Another important consequence has been that within a year the price of certain grades of iron has nearly, if not quite, doubled in England. This state of things, though severely felt by European consumers, has contributed largely to the development of the iron interest in this country. Since the advance of prices, two years ago, fifty-three new furnaces and mills have been put into operation, and more than half that number are now in process of building. Large quantities of ore, notwithstanding this added capacity for manufacture in our own country, are shipped to Wales to be manufactured and returned. Not many years can elapse before the necessity which now compels this exportation of the crude material will cease to exist, and the entire labor be performed on our own soil.

The supply of iron in the United States is absolutely inexhaustible. That of the single State of Missouri is said to be larger than the entire supply of Great Britain. The famous Iron mountain alone contains ore enough, and of the highest grade, to supply the wants of the world for centuries. It is the best known ore in the world for the production of Bessemer steel, and with the exception of the first-class Lake Superior specular, and that of North Carolina, none of the ores of the United States equal it in adaptation to this use. As a special steel ore it really ranks too high to be used in any other way. The annual production of iron by the world is estimated at 13,000,000 tons. Of this the United States furnishes about 3,000,000. During the year ending June 1, 1870, according to the census report, 2,046,123 tons of pig were manufactured and 3,210,918 tons of ore were mined. For the year ending with June, 1871, the pig product was 2,300,000 tons, a gain of nearly 300,000 tons. No return of the product for a later period has been made, but it is estimated by those well informed that the increase in furnace capacity since the last statement was made is equal to 500,000 tons of pig per annum.

Of the total manufacture in 1870, Pennsylvania supplied a trifle over one-half the amount. Ohio stands next on the list and is credited with 306,383 tons. New York reported 223,725 tons, Wisconsin 80,000 tons, Michigan 79,379, New Jersey and Maryland each produced 70,000 tons, and the remainder is divided among several of the States. Pennsylvania appears to be the only large ore-producing State that manufactured nearly all the ore mined within its borders. New York mined 470,493 tons of ore and manufactured 223,725 tons. Michigan produced 690,393 tons and used only 70,279 tons, and Missouri pig. At the above average rate of increase since 1870 of half a million tons per year, and undoubtedly it will be much larger, in a dozen years from this time the United States will be the great iron-producing country of the world.—Boston Globe.

BENT ON SELF-INJURY.—Last evening, about seven o'clock, a man walked into the police station, announced himself as James Delany of Ossipee, N. H., and insisted upon being locked up in a cell for fear he might do some injury to himself or others. He said he was a native of the Province of Quebec; that he had been in the State for some years; that during the present season he had been engaged in chopping wood for a Mr. Thomas Whitten, at Wolfboro', N. H., that while engaged in this occupation he froze his feet, and that he was then taken to the county farm at Wolfeboro'. Thence he came to this city on the Boston five o'clock evening train. He was evidently somewhat deranged, evidently from the abuse of alcoholic stimulents, and spoke darkly of a conspiracy against him, entered into by the paupers of Carroll county. He furthermore insisted that his mother had put a curse upon him because of his abuse of cattle. He is a large, strong man, with keen black eyes and dark moustache, and apparently about 35 years of age.

A few minutes after eight o'clock an old man of seventy came into the station, gave his name as Johnson Delany, and said he was in search of his son, whom he was taking to Canada, and who had given him the slip at South Berwick Junction. Until recently he had not seen his son for ten years. A few weeks since his attention was called to an account in the Montreal Witness of an attempt of one James Delany to commit suicide by cutting his throat. Surmising it might be his son, he hastened to the scene of the occurrence, at Wolfeboro', and found that it was indeed so. The son, after failing in his attempt at suicide with the knife, threw himself across a railroad track and waited for the approaching train. The engineer saw him, reversed the engine and stopped the train. Thereupon Delany beckoned for him to come on.—Portland Press.

—Severe winter for murderers.

THE STATEMENT OF SENATOR PATTERSON before the Senate Investigating Committee is characterized by prominent republican members of that body as a remarkable exhibition of moral depravity. Cornered at every point by Ames, he was forced to admit that Ames' evidence was true in every particular. The importance of this admission in its bearings on the case of Colfax, Garfield and Kelley is not understimated by the committee. The impression that Patterson made was not favorable. His admission that Ames was correct in all his statements was accepted as an admission of guilt, and all the rest as an argument and nothing more. It is generally held in Congress that the legitimate effect of his admission is to strengthen Ames' case against Colfax, Garfield and Kelley and to render still more improbable their contradiction of his testimony. As the case now stands, Ames is corroborated in every particular by the admissions of Messrs. Bingham, Scofield, Dawes, Wilson of Ohio, Wilson of Massachusetts, and Logan, and few hesitate to say it is not possible that Messrs. Colfax, Garfield and Kelley alone were cheated or deceived by Ames.—True.

HORRIBLE.—A bad accident occurred at No. 3 weave room on the Pepperell Corporation last Tuesday afternoon, by which Mr. Nathaniel Wilson, an old employee in that room, lost his arm, and it is feared he may lose his life. It appears that Wilson in attempting to adjust a belt which draws a spinning frame which had broken, had his left hand caught by the belt and before he could be freed, the arm was torn off about midway between the elbow and wrist, being separated entirely from the body. The remaining part of the arm was so shattered, that Dr. Warren amputated the remaining part near the shoulder. Mr. Wilson is about 26 years of age and has a family. Though his recovery is doubtful, yet he is doing as well as could be expected.—Biddeford Journal.

A DENIAL FROM GEN. FREMONT.—Gen. Fremont's friends have letters from him denying his indictment at Paris, and stating that the report of the proceedings against him are circulated by speculators, who failed to make the money they expected out of his Pacific enterprise.

—Charleston papers itemize a resident of that city who had actually read the Bible all through. He did it for a bet, in a little over two days and a half.

WHAT TIME HAS TAUGHT US. It has taken two thousand years to teach the world that to sustain the body in its conflict with disease, not to help disease by weakening the body, is the true end of medicine. We have the lesson by heart at last, however. We know, for example, that tearing doses of aloes, salts, jalap, croton oil, calomel, colcynth, &c., are the best allies that a debilitating malady can have in its assaults on the human frame; and that a medicine like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which strengthens all the bodily powers and rallies the sinking constitution, is the most powerful antagonist of the morbific principle, whatever it may be that lies at the root of the complaint. This knowledge has been a long time in reaching us, but it is invaluable. We can now control and cure dyspepsia, bilious disturbances, constipation, rheumatism, nervousness, and many other painful complaints once considered incurable, with this admirable corrective.

SMALL-POX.

NOTICE TO PHYSICIANS AND OTHERS.

The Mayor and Aldermen call the attention of Physicians and Householders to the Law of the State and the Ordinance of the City relative to cases of Small-pox occurring in this city, as follows:

It shall be the duty of every physician who attends upon any person sick with the small pox to immediately report the same to the Health Officers or the Mayor and Aldermen; and if any physician shall neglect so to do he shall forfeit the sum of one hundred dollars.

When any householder shall know that any person within his family is sick of the small pox, he shall immediately give notice to the Health Officers; if any such householder shall refuse or neglect to do so he shall for each refusal or neglect forfeit the sum of twenty dollars.

The Board of Aldermen have requested the MAYOR to cause IMMEDIATE PROSECUTION to be instituted for every violation of the above provisions.

MARCELLUS BUFFORD, City Clerk.

LOCAL AFFAIRS.

Cruelty.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have found another case of cruelty, and acted promptly. Complaint was made that eleven cattle and a horse, at the Newington farm of a woman who is absent in Boston, were suffering starvation. On Friday, the officers of the Society sent officer Entwistle to examine into the case. He reported that the poor animals had been without food five days. On Saturday, neighbors confirmed the report, and a half ton of hay was sent to the farm to feed them, by order of the Directors of the Society—as Dr. Stevens informs us. A year ago similar complaints were made that this woman was allowing her cattle to starve, and we are informed that the animals were without food last winter for twelve days, except that gleaned from the frozen ground. The officers of the Society propose to prosecute the owner upon her return to New Hampshire.

Our citizens are but little aware of the frequent instances of cruelty practiced upon dumb animals even in close proximity to them. The only trouble in enforcing the law is in the disposition shown by a few persons to shirk responsibility. The Society is doing good, great good, and if any of our readers know of any two-legged brute who is starving his or her animals, it is their imperative duty to make complaint, and show their willingness to testify. Mercy to an inhuman biped is but cruelty to the quadruped.

Music in Schools.

Messrs. Editors:—It is strange that while so many rich men have lived and died in Portsmouth, so few have "left anything" for public objects. I think that the person who should donate $5,000 to the city, the interest on the same to be used to teach music in our public schools forever, would be a greater benefactor than he who founds a public library or builds a railroad.

MUSICUS.

Lacontes.

The splendid pair of sorrel and gray horses belonging to Hon. Frank Jones, while being driven through Middle Street on Saturday afternoon, took fright and ran away, badly damaging the large double sleigh to which they were attached, and throwing out its occupants.

The Methodist Episcopal society at Spruce Creek, Kittery, had a Sunday School exhibition and sociable in their church, and a Fair, with a clam chowder and oyster supper, in the schoolhouse opposite, one evening last week, and took about $87 thereat—a very handsome sum to collect in a thinly-settled district.

Rev. Mr. Pindado, a gentleman highly spoken of by the press of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, lectures this evening in the M. E. Church at Kittery; subject, "Mind your own business."

Mr. Charles Blake, of Hampton, called at the Police Station at a late hour on Saturday night, and reported that his horse and sleigh had been left standing by its driver, a boy of 14 years, at one of the breweries, and that a man named Elisha Dunkirk had stolen it.

Carnacross and Dixie have cancelled their engagement here. Whitmore and Clark are coming March 1st.

Dr. Samuel C. Whittier has been appointed Coroner for Rockingham county.

Col. Hackett on Saturday sold the house, corner of Islington and Cabot streets, to Mrs. Hill of New Orleans, for $4525.

Dr. O. Fitzgerald, whose wonderful cures have made him famous, is at the Franklin House.

State News.

A Newfoundland dog, not long since placed himself between his master's child and the open grate toward which he was crawling in Nashua, and remained there, though scorched and blistered, until persons came into the room and rescued the child.

Mrs. Hannah Haley of Stratham, lacks but a few months of being 100 years old. She had the whooping cough in her 91st year.

Daniel Haverdy had two fingers crushed while shackling cars in Manchester.

A daughter of William A. Smith, one of the selectmen of Wolfeborough, is ill with small-pox. The disease is reported to have been carried in a box sent by express from Lynn.

A man by the name of Harris of Ashland was run over and killed by one of the Thursday night freight trains on the Boston, Concord and Montreal railroad, near Bridgewater station, and found, Friday morning, by section men. Both legs were cut off and the skull smashed in.

The Roll.

We continue to-day the publication of the list of absent sons and daughters. Since the first list was published we have been the recipients of verbal and written remonstrances against its incompleteness and incorrectness in some particulars. If the persons who complain had more forethought they would be less inclined to find fault. We publish the list as given us by the secretaries of the committee, and the secretaries copy the names and addresses just as they are sent to them by mail or brought in person. It is not to be supposed that any one person or a hundred persons can know the correct address of all persons who have once resided in Portsmouth, although from the tenor of the remarks made by some thoughtless individuals, one would suppose it might be possible. There are probably 10,000 names which should be entered on the committee's list, and thus far less than 2000 have been furnished the committee, who desire their publication for the sole purpose of inducing the friends of absent former residents to call at the City Rooms and register the correct addresses of those who intend returning on the Fourth of July. The committee have about two hundred names which we are unable to publish to-day.

CLEAR YOUR THROAT!

Relieve Your Lungs.

For the terrible diseases engendered by the lung-trying climate of New England,

Pulmocine Cordial

Is a speedy and reliable Preventive and Remedy. EVERY FAMILY should have a bottle at hand to check the sudden growth of all Pulmonary Diseases. For the Asthma, Coughs, Croups, Laryngitis, or inflammation of the larynx, Diphtheria, and all kindred THROAT DISEASES at all times prevalent, it is the Great Preventive! Children attacked with Whooping Cough or Croup should be immediately cared for. These painful attacks come with scarcely a moment's warning, when a physician may be out of immediate reach. A dose of PULMOCINE CORDIAL gives speedy relief, and the little ones are spared hours of pain and agony. As "a stitch in time saves nine," so does the possession of this FAMILY MEDICINE prevent the spread of disease. Parents seeing their children gasping with pain, friends and relatives beholding each other in peril from suffocation by the choking pain in the throat, paralyzed with fear and not knowing the best course to pursue, are liable to apply the wrong remedial agents. There is no safety in delay, no time to waste in such cases. CONSUMPTION, that fearful scourge of the human race, has at the door of all those afflicted, a BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL arrests it (unless in its advanced stage at which time there is no local cure) relieves the pressing, suffocating feeling at the lungs, and the patient's danger is past. Eff

BUCHMAN'S PULMOCINE CORDIAL

is no new discovery. Twenty-three years ago it was used by one of New England's most famous physicians as the best PULMONARY CURATIVE he could prescribe, after a dozen years spent in experimenting with it before he was satisfied that the Materia Medica could add nothing in its favor.

Buchman's Pulmocine Cordial

Is the ultima thule of Medical Discovery.

Among its many ingredients are WILD CHERRY BARK, SQUILL ROOT, LIQUORICE ROOT, BLOOD ROOT, &c. It is a BLOOD PURIFIER, gently stimulating. It increases expectoration and is diuretic. It is sudorific and alterative. It is a necessary family medicine. It is a Tonic, and a powerful aid to the digestive organs. It is a gentle sedative, and relieves nervousness. It is aromatic and agreeable to the taste.

For Coughs, Croup, Diphtheria, Asthma, &c.

USE BUCHMAN'S

PULMOCINE CORDIAL.

The Pulmocine Cordial is not a quack medicine, is not an experiment, is not composed of any ingredients "discovered" by "walking in passages" in South America or anywhere else, nor by one who discovered a weed and thereby cured himself. Most of the ingredients are such as our best educated physicians daily use for the complaints specified in some form or other. The recipe is that perfected by one of New England's most learned and famous physicians, who used it entirely in his daily practice until his death. It is offered to the profession and to the public, absolutely pure and unadulterated.

To every pound Sweet Corn add full one quart of cold water, soak over night, then bring it to a boil, when it will be ready for the table; add Salt and Milk, to the taste.

We are now in receipt from the factories of quantities of Apples, Peaches, Pears, Cherries, Huckleberries, Blackberries, Cranberries, Sweet Potatoes, Pumpkins, Green Peas, Lima Beans, and Sweet Corn.

IRON in the BLOOD.
DYSPEPSIA, DEBILITY, DROPSY, HUMORS
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Makes the Weak Strong.
The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron, to the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The sunken and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.
This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.
Thousands have been charged by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and it alone cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Falling to Supply the Constant Demand.
All other machines call the public attention to some one loop or stitch or tension or finish, some advantage in running or needles or feed or presser—and many of these are as we have said very good points, and the agents selling them use them to divert entirely the would-be purchaser from fairly considering the facts in the case; but the
